UNIVERSITY AND

ADMINISTRATION

A UNIVERSITY

Is Life, Learning and Tradition; This Is Yours . . .

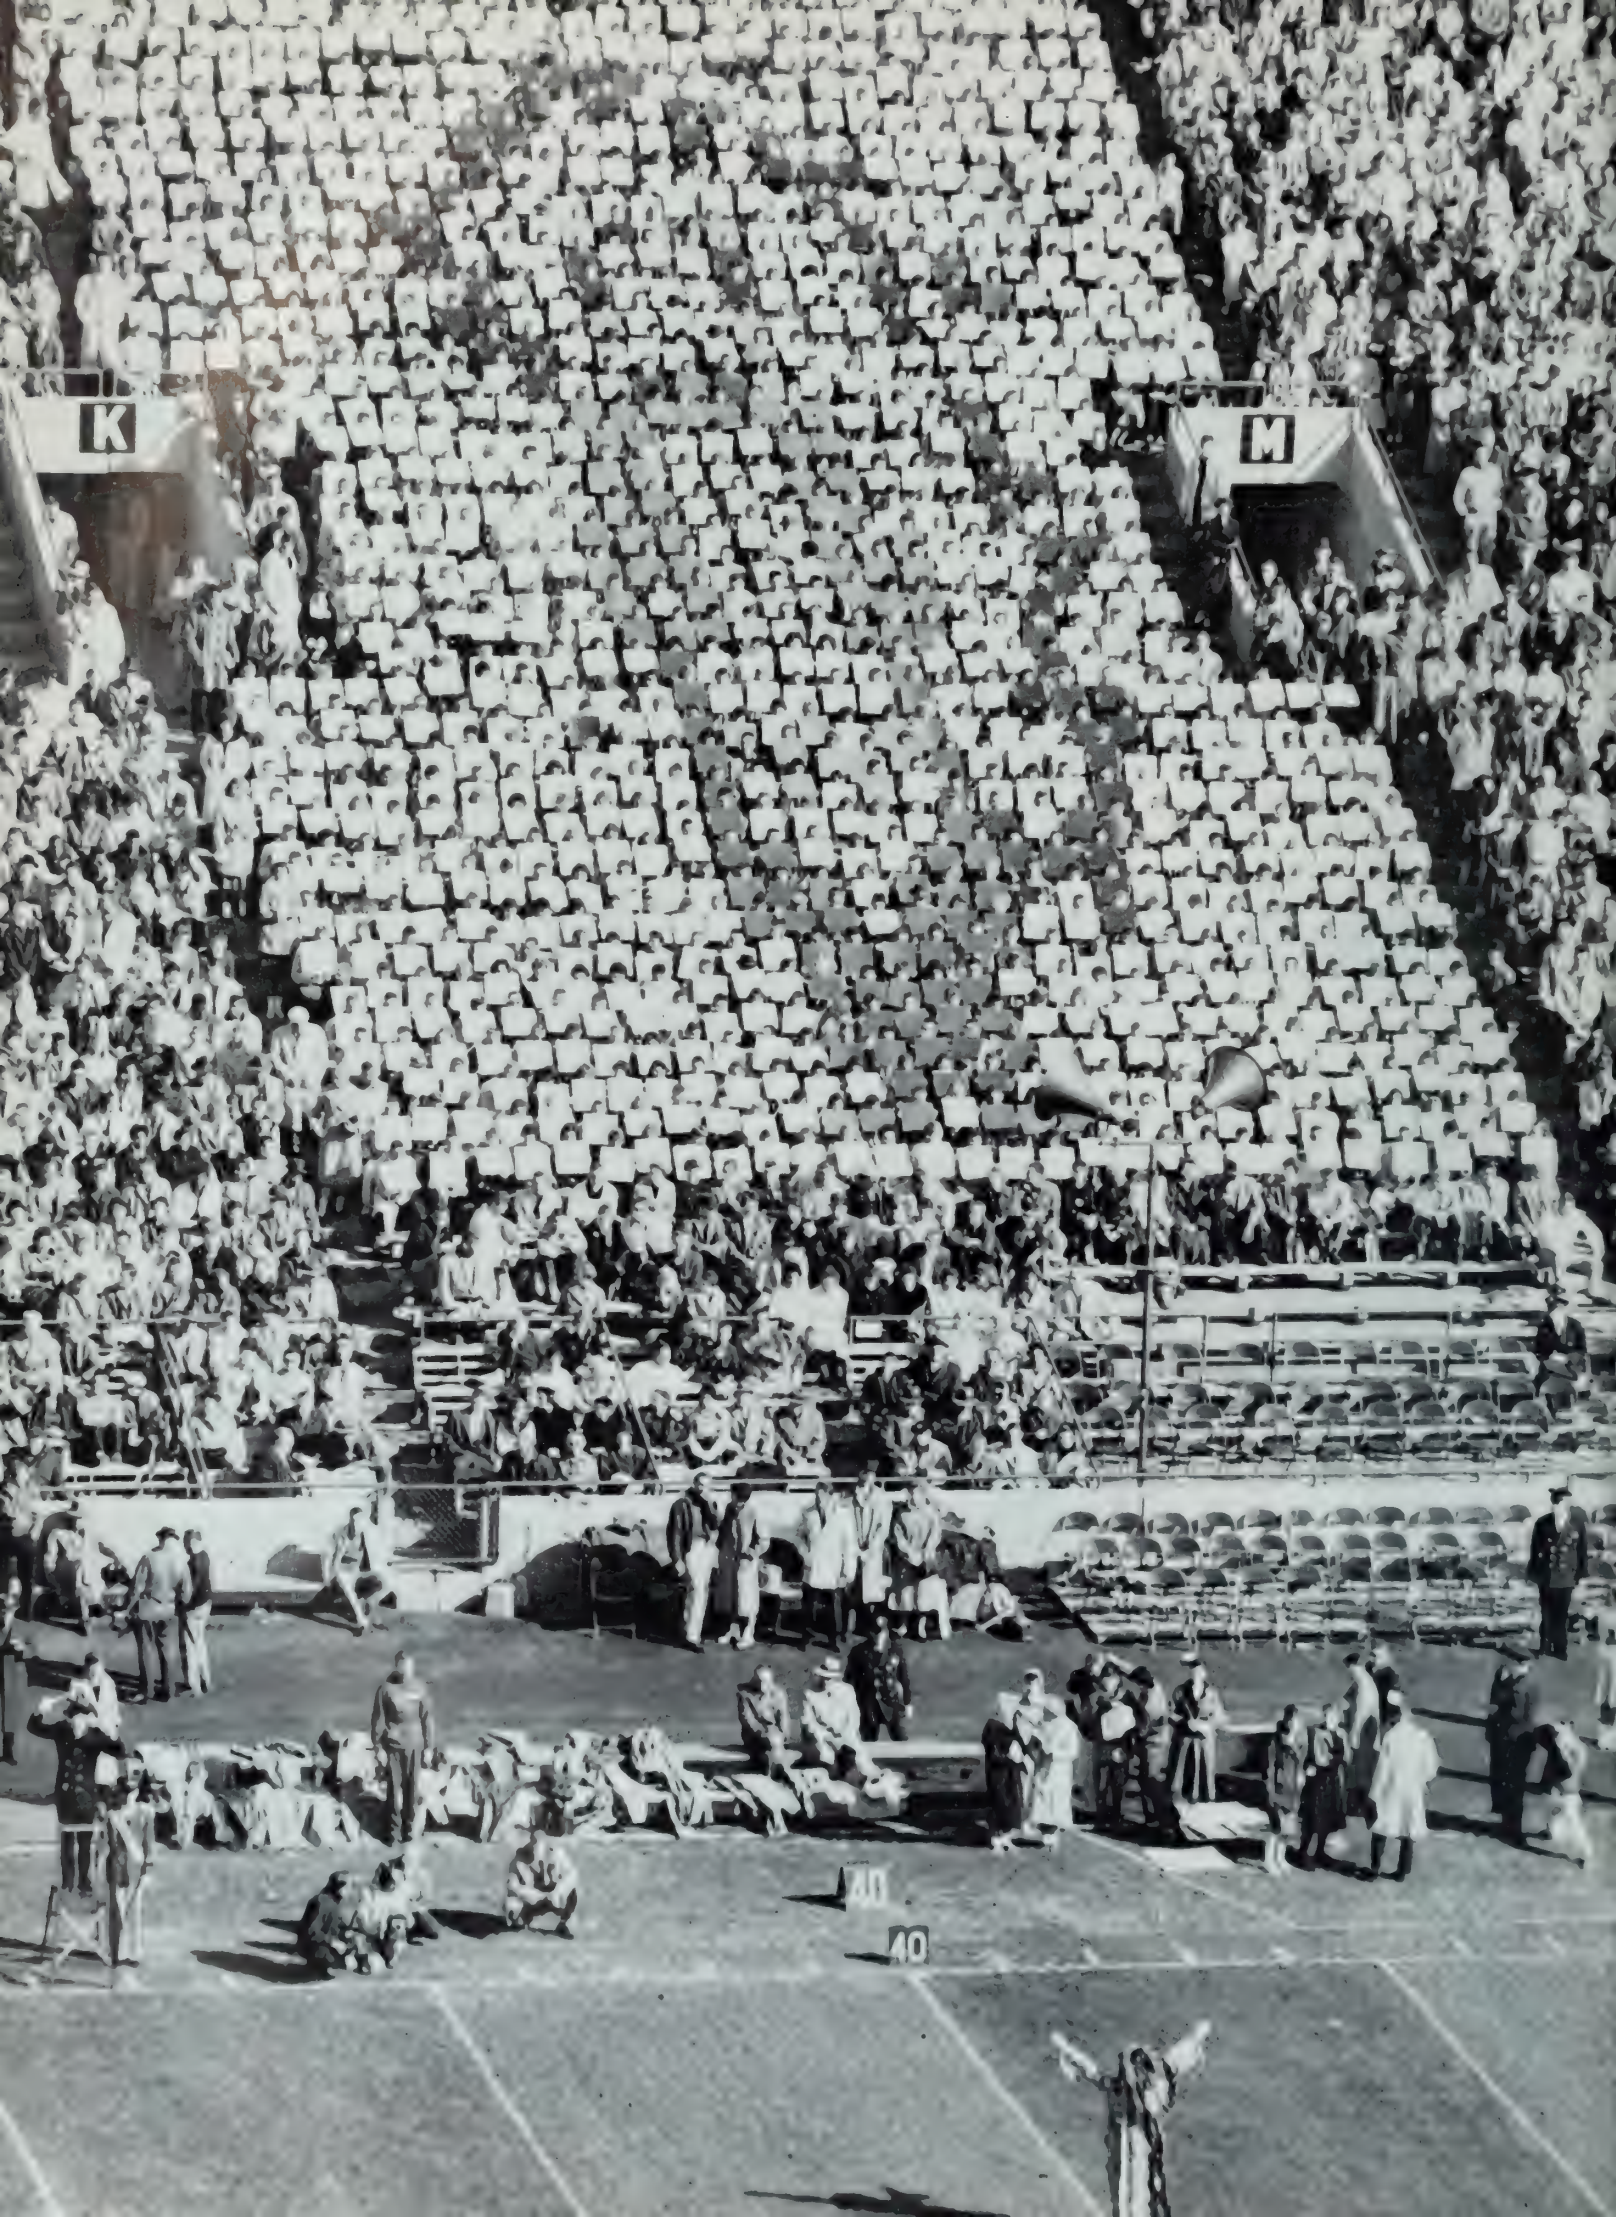

In another month, the Class of 1960 will graduate and be finished with college. We will become alumni, ending another University of Illinois generation. For 92 years people like us, some more dedicated, some not seeking education at all, have quietly entered and departed from the University. They leave behind them the work, the culture, and the tradition that make Illinois what it is today. And so it is to the 300,000 Illini who preceded us up the ramps of Memorial Stadium and along a once tree-lined Broadwalk that we dedicate this ILLIO.

Three faculty members, 77 students and one used building were the core of the University in 1868. All this seems very far away knowing our sprawling campus with its 20,000 students and currently 201 sections of freshman rhetoric courses. Our campus is known for being big, busy and brainy. Illinois is renowned as a giant in education, and a leader in many fields of research. This is the legacy of those who studied, taught and worked before us; it is their achievements that made possible much that we are learning now. And we should be very proud.

Times change and so do the people, places, and institutions. The traditions of the past are gone now. Freshmen don't wear beanies. No longer is a class hatchet passed from seniors to juniors each year at Commencement. No one knows the difference anymore if sophomores sit on the Senior Bench. It appears we have grown too large for those intimate customs that once marked the progress of a student towards graduation. Some of us miss these things; and though few of our traditions remain today and almost none are starting, we shall attempt on the pages that follow to uncover, define and reminisce about what we do have that makes Illinois unique.

Few of us will forget the noise and dust of the Armory on Sheequon week-ends, or the short excitement of the fraternity pajama races in autumn, or the chimes ringing in Altgeld tower as we shivered home from a four o'clock in December. We remember the times when we had real spirit—the day we beat Army—the night the team returned from Wisconsin. And there was spirit in the disappointment we felt when we knew there was no longer a chance for the Rose Bowl. Some day we shall try to recapture the way we felt in 1960 and remember what it was like when an hour exam was the biggest of our problems, and we could forget it all in the usual smoke and noise of a Friday afternoon in Kam's or Bidwell's.

On these pages we shall go back to what we have seen and done and lived with on campus. Find your place in the section because you are a part of all that is Illinois. Although this year has gone by, our work and dreams have cleared the way for what shall happen beneath the Orange and Blue in future years. And now in our last college days the words beneath the Alma Mater statue come alive: "To thy happy children of the future, those of the past send greetings." Now we are the past of Illinois. May the future continue for "Learning and Labor."

Students and Fall Descend on Campus Together

The rustle of a crazy-quilt of leaves underfoot signals the beginning of another fall—another school year. Fall is a season remembered by frosty mornings, green color fading to rust and brown, sweaters, soaked raincoats, drizzles and the transition to winter.

The steps of the auditorium provide a meeting place during the fall. There, we discover our social life is an important part of a formal education.

Fall is football, Block I and Chief Illiniwek. Block I, which was the first flash-card section, always gives Illiniwek a mighty cheer as his dance ends.

Long Lines and Confusion Highlight Registration

Registration is one of the necessary evils of a University. We stand in long lines to find a section we wanted just closed. Somehow, we're glad when it's over, especially if we have a good schedule.

During registration, we learn to follow directions faithfully. For if we miss a sign, we find ourselves in a jumble of wandering people. Truly, it is said, "If you can get through registration, you can get through school." Fortunately we register only twice a year.

Before Classes Begin

After Summer School is over, the University lies dormant for only a few weeks. Then, the highways and railroads leading to Champaign-Urbana become clogged with students and faculty coming to school. For the senior and the freshman alike, there is a thrill at the thought of leaving to go to the University. We don't arrive at the same time, though.

Freshmen, who are going through Rush, and fraternity men are here on campus about two weeks before school begins for Rush Week. After Rush Week is over, entering Freshmen are required to be here for Freshmen Orientation Week. The week is a turmoil of meetings, tests, lectures, conferences and the first registration. And the first registration is hectic.

While Freshmen are being orientated, the remainder of us are trying to go along, with the system of registering. But it isn't so easy to figure out the complex registration system; consequently, many of us fight the system each time we register. It is remarkable how many times we stand in line for a certain class or section only to have it close when we are next. Then, we have two alternatives, either wait for the section to open again or take the class at a different time. There is one more detail to attend to after registration and before going to our classes—buying books, an education in itself.

But the University does try to facilitate registration and orientation for freshmen by employing the use of Freshmen Advisers. Selected and elected on the basis of their knowledge of the campus and its customs, they are most helpful to newcomers.

Debate has been going on this year as to whether freshmen should possibly register first. Under classmen say Yes; the seniors vote No.

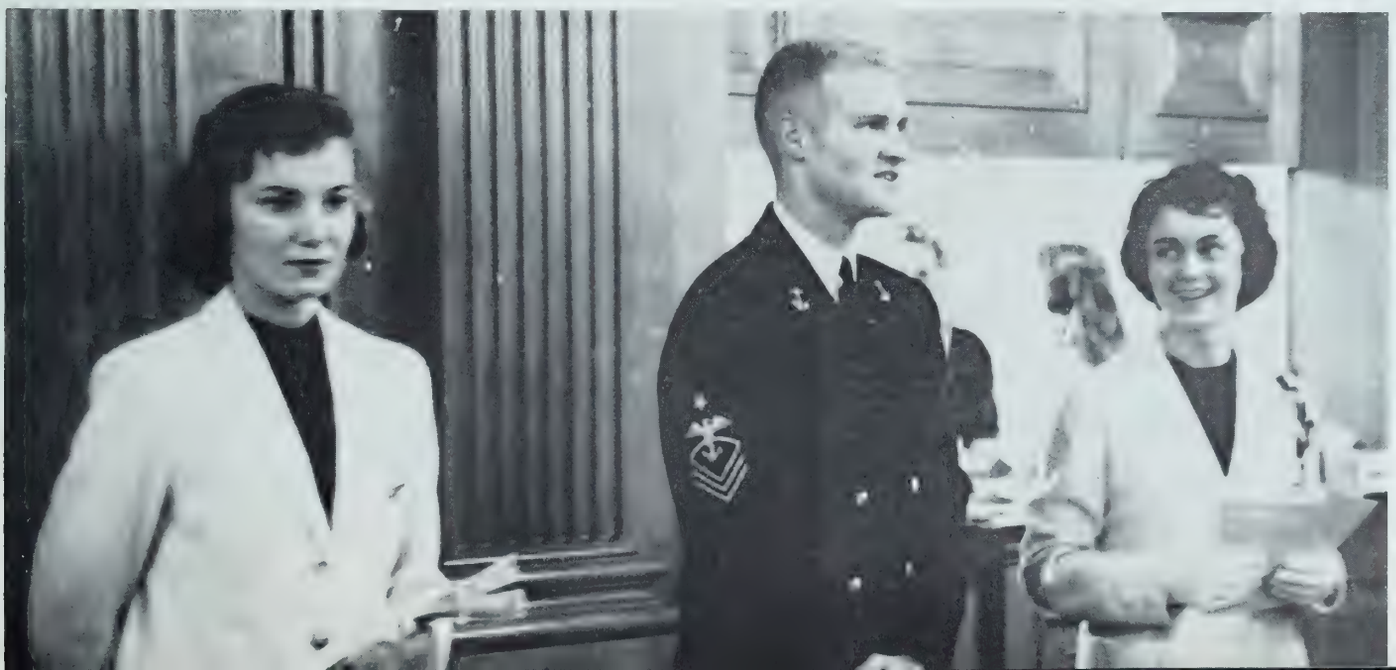

Freshman Advisers either know the answer to a registration problem or direct you to someone else who does.

During registration week, the president holds a reception for the faculty who have just joined the staff.

Hosts and hostesses for the President's reception are selected from Angel Flight and various branches of the ROTC. As the reception is usually held in the Union, these students are invaluable to the new faculty members in helping them to locate the reception room.

Chief Illiniwek assisted the cheerleaders at pep rallies. Illiniwek has now become the symbol of the "Fighting Illini."

Making signs for pep rallies is another tradition of the University. It's the spirit not the spelling, that counts.

Friday Night Before

Cheerleaders form the nucleus for the team support at pep rallies. It is through their efforts our spirit is generated.

To watch football, we arm ourselves with pennants, drinks and food and the ability to sit.

In the fall, before every home game, we gather on the terrace of the Illini Union for a team "booster"—a pep rally. In all kinds of weather, we get dates, organize to make signs, carry them over to the Union and hold them high enough for all to see our accomplishments.

The next day we march to the stadium to watch the Illini battle and some of last night's spirit is still with us, for we cheer en masse when the cheerleaders preform a cheer.

When the game is over, we filter out in all directions to celebrate victory or verbally replay loss, but as soon as one is over, we're ready for the next.

The Game Means a Pep Rally

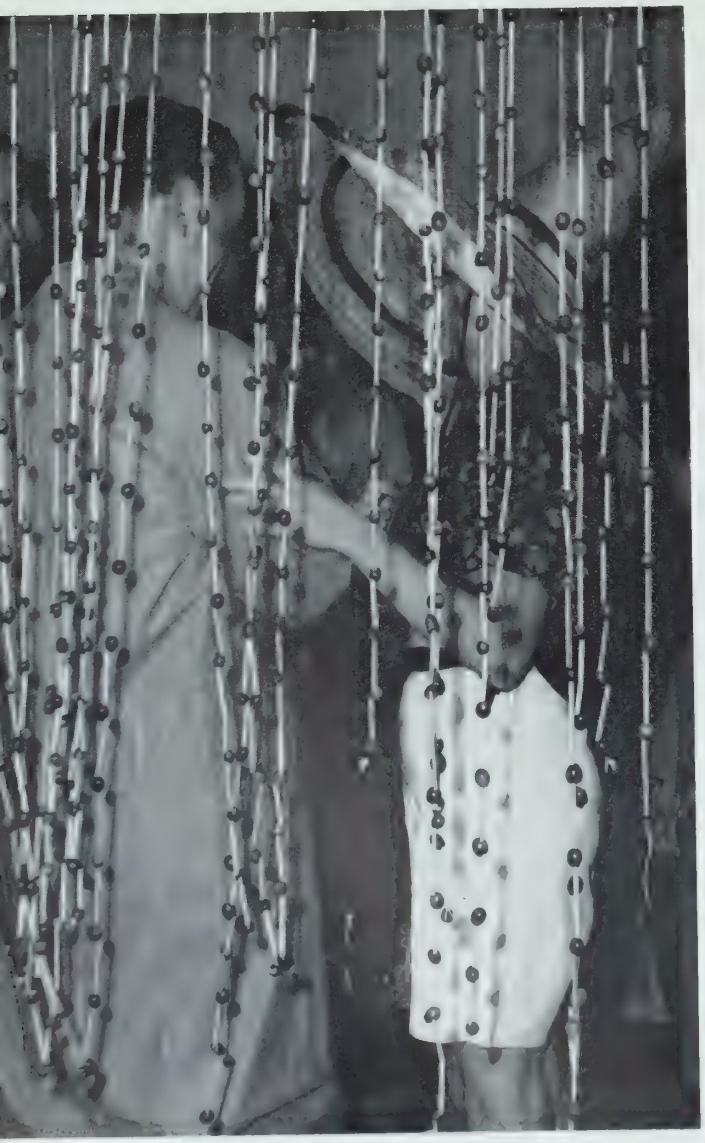

Much of the energy and pep we have for our team must be uncovered and developed by our cheerleaders. With a crew of cheerleaders like this, how could we possibly have an apathetic spirit at a pep rally or game? It's pure Illini tradition when one yells.

Let Down the Hair and Go to a Pledge Dance;

Using cardboard, paint and our ingenuity, we can transform our houses into anything. Choosing the theme is the difficult part.

Behind a bead curtain, lurks pledge-dance-intrigue as "a man in a raincoat" and "a lady in a floppy hat" confer.

Every fraternity and sorority usually has two pledge dances per year, one in the fall and one in the spring. On the day of the event, the house is transformed into a setting for the theme of the dance. The decorating job is done by the members of the house, who find themselves getting up at an early hour of the morning to get the job done. When the decorations are finished, the assembly of appropriate costumes for the dance comes next and anything goes when you're making the final costume selection.

After you and your date have seen each other in your costumes, (and you've stopped laughing to some degree) you proceed with the rest of your house to campus where others stare at you in amazement. Then, you return to the house and set yourself in the mood of the dance. At the stroke of twelve, we must go, but already we await the next one.

Not only the "French maid," but everyone at a pledge dance loves to rock 'n' roll when the drummer starts his "swinging" solos.

It's the Fall of the Year—You Go "Gung-Ho!"

A "demure little miss" and her "gambling" man look preoccupied.

It's not always the costume that makes the impression, it can be the way you're made-up.

The dress of this couple suggests they are at the famous "Shantytown Shuffle" dance.

Bowls and all, this pair appears to have come straight from China to attend this dance. Anything goes at a pledge dance and we see all types of costumes and make-up which create definite impressions, for example, the fellow in the Homburg looks like a diplomat.

Mr. "Illini" Clean was really working in washing out Minnesota in the winning Homecoming decoration constructed by the TEKE's.

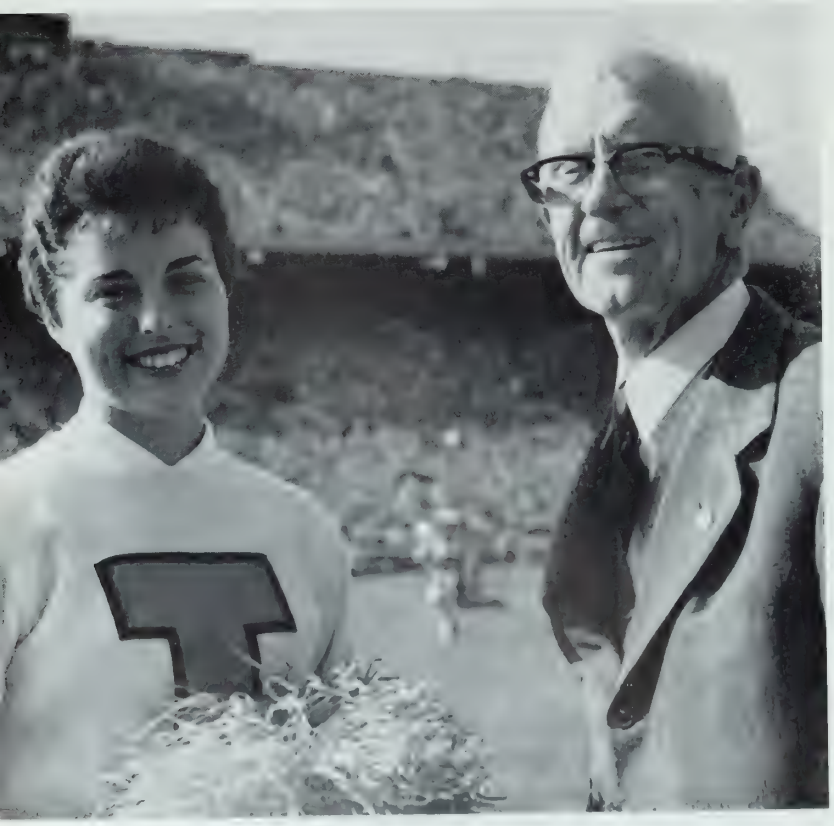

Since the origin of Homecoming on the campus in 1910, there have been 49 meetings of past Illini with current Illini. From that first year, Homecoming traditions have swollen to gigantic proportions. Each year, we find more ways to show the alumni our gratitude.

Traditionally, we have open houses during the weekend, where the alums may gather or recall fond memories, but the preparation for Homecoming starts on the campus long before the alumni arrive to see the progress of this generation.

The two features of Homecoming are Stunt Show and decorations, both of which take planning, everyone's effort and plenty of time to perfect.

This year's theme of "Cartoon Colossus" was carried through in both Stunt Show and decorations and acclaimed by the alumni as "the best Homecoming ever." After Homecoming is over and the alumni leave, we are still faced with returning to the books to pick up where we left off.

Campuswide Events

Homecoming is a meeting of past and present. Here, Robert C. Matthews, first Illini cheerleader, confers with Mary Sue Drendel.

Even "Dogpatch" citizens were here at Homecoming. They met in Granada's winner to defeat the "Golden Gophers."

Gina Gudaitis, left, was accompanied by her sister and escort as she reigned as this year's Homecoming Queen. She sparkled everywhere she appeared during her rule.

A napkin and wire sign takes a long time to make, but the reward equals effort.

Make Each Homecoming a Day of Memories

A top prize in the Homecoming decorations went to Phi Kappa Tau for their clever cartoon characterization of Illinois as a golfing bear and Minnesota as a defeated gopher returning home. In fact, all campus looked like a huge carnival with decorations, cars and crowds.

The immense Homecoming decorations that are built in front of many houses must be pre-assembled on the ground. This pre-assembly takes us many hours, but it's "for the house." We don't worry about the work; we worry about meeting the deadline.

Writing and Rehearsing—Planning and Building

You can't have Stunt Show without costumes which are usually made by the sorority and it's quite a job.

Stunt Show requires props which the fraternity makes. The design may be simple; the representation is obvious.

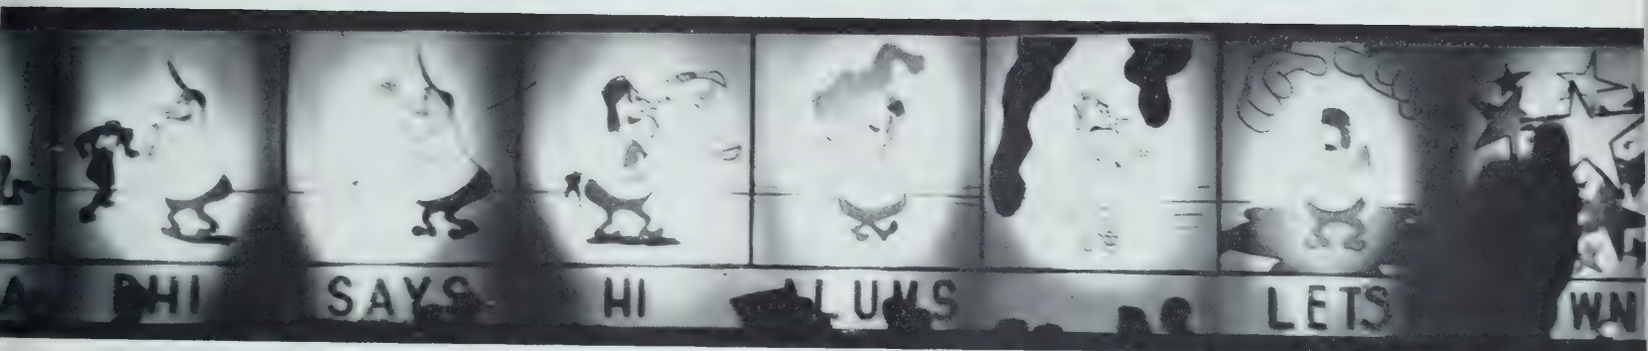

Once each spring and once each fall the entire campus chips in together to present a bigger and better show than ever before. It was a weekend in the middle of October that the Illini laid out their red carpet for returning alumni. As the various graduates were shaking familiar hands and reunioning at the Union, some of the present students were back at the house catching up on the sleep that they had lost the past couple of nights stuffing a "Hi Alums!" sign or sewing the hem into someone's costume for Stunt Show. An amazing amount of ideas, sweat, and toil goes into the house decorations, water shows, stunts, dances, and, of course, the football game. Spirits ran high along with the competition that kept us pushing. It's always a let down on the Sunday evening after, maybe even sheer pleasure to pick up a book again, but after several weeks, we wish we were back practicing dancing on Sunday afternoons.

"The Marriage of Prince Violet" was the story worked up by the Chi Omegas and the Sigs who took second place in Stunt Show.

Are Necessary for a Successful Homecoming

The Alpha Delta Phis worked up a clever character to welcome back their alumni this year. This is only one of the many extraordinary house signs you would have seen either Friday or Saturday night if you braved the traffic and joined the slow-moving tour.

Believe it or not, but this is "Short Ribs of Troy" in the making! The Alpha Gams may have been rubbing their ligaments, minus a rib, or even with a broken hand after this strenuous stunt show practice with the ATO's, but nevertheless, "It sure was fun!"

A heap of hats and a heap of fun are all a part of the Dad's Day Committee's plans for a traditional weekend.

It's Dad's World as Illini Celebrate Their Traditional Fall Event

Illini Dads were greeted in grand style as they attended the activities of the thirty-ninth annual Dad's Day Weekend, held November 8 and 9. Ken Kreutziger, the world's friendliest man, toured the campus shaking the hands of the Dads and their campus companions. Ken broke the world's hand-shaking record by shaking 10,676 hands in ten hours.

Tradition played a prominent part in the activities of the weekend. Events have expanded in the thirty-nine years since the first all-campus Dad's Day celebration held in 1920. However, the Dolphin Show and the Little International Horse Show were a part of the original weekend. The University's first Dean of Men, Thomas Arkle Clark, originated the idea, and the activities held at the first Dad's Day included a pep rally, visits to classes, an ROTC parade, and a smoker. In 1922 the Dad's Association was formed, and "Hail to the Orange" was presented for the first time.

The year 1948 saw the beginning of the strong tradition of "King for a Day." This year's "King" was Irwin Meyer who is the father of Roger Meyer, a sophomore in commerce.

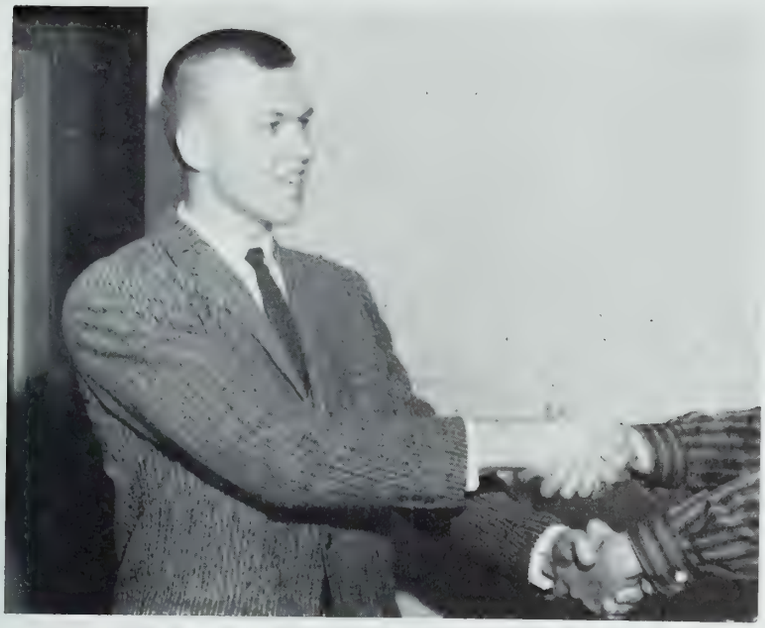

The activities of the weekend were many and most of the Dads went home looking forward to a good rest. However, they left behind them a tremendous number of weary students who had been working for months in advance to make the 1959 Dad's Day Weekend a success.

A special tribute to the dads is made by the cooperation of Block I and The Marching Illini at the game.

Intensive rehearsals for Dad's Day Review begin early in the semester for all the cooperating independent houses participating in this annual variety show.

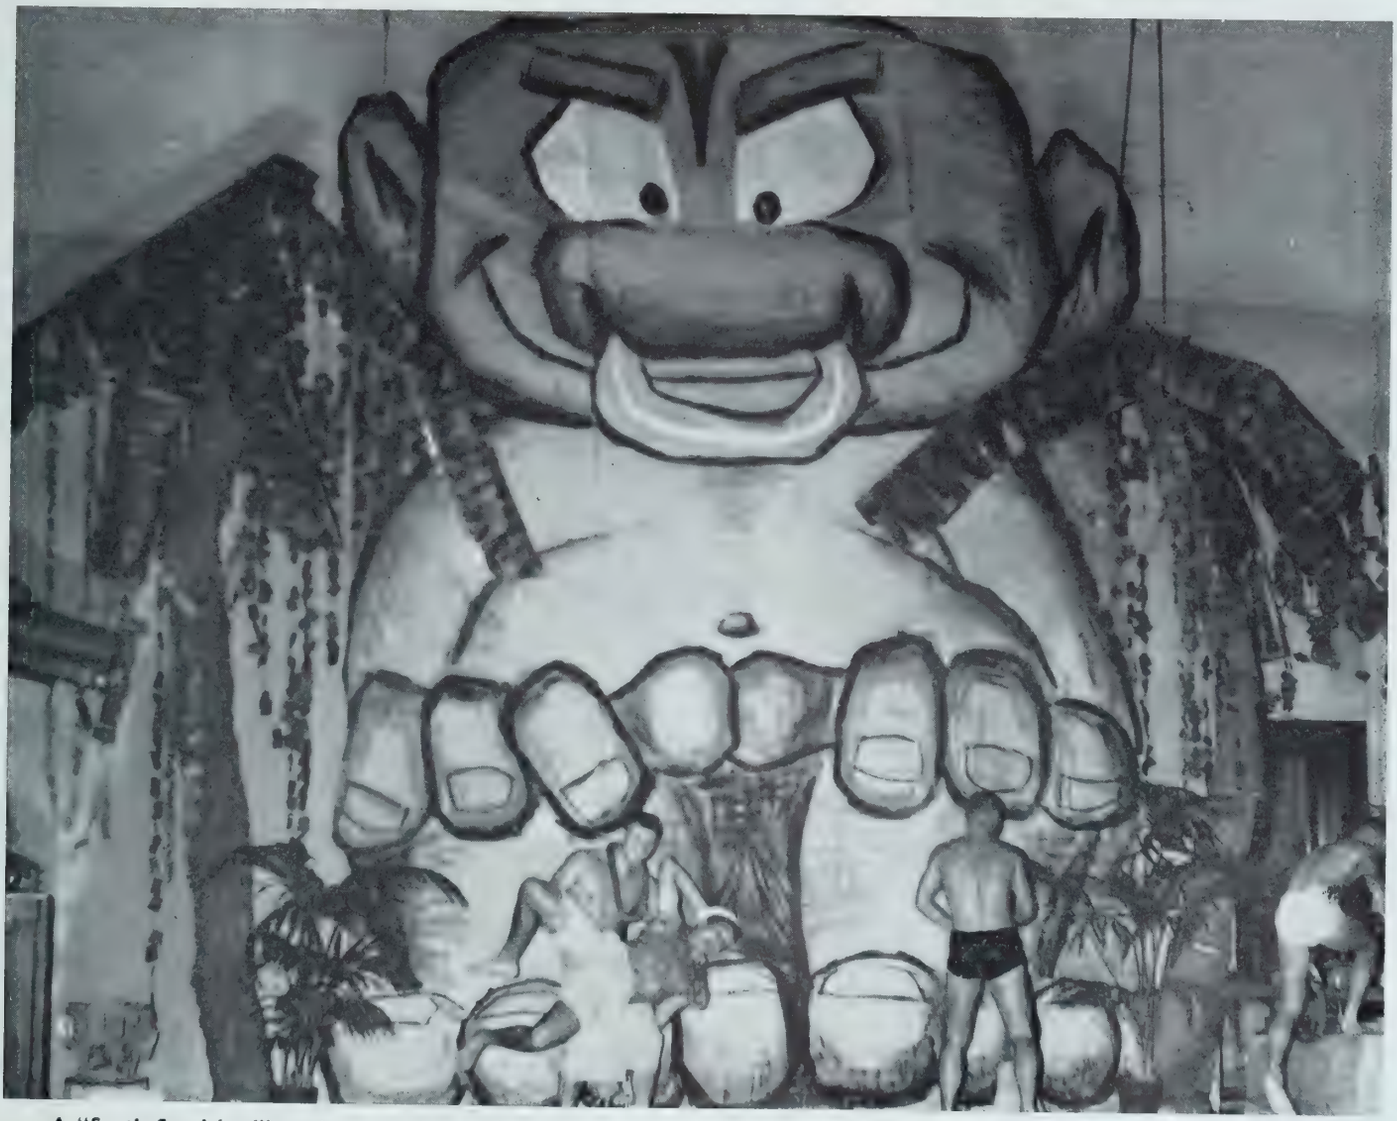

The outstretched hands of Ken Kreutziger symbolize an unusual feat. In ten hours, Ken Shook 10,676 hands, setting a new handshaking record.

Mr. Irwin Meyer was the "King for a Day" on Dad's Day, but, in reality, all dads were King.

A "South Sea Island" setting, complete with water, swaying palms, beautiful girls, and a huge native king, was this year's theme for Dolphin Show. A feature of the show was the crowning of the pretty Dolphin Queen on Saturday night of Dad's Day weekend.

The fraternity men take the indees in 1959. Things like the IF-MIA Tug-Of-War give us a relief from our brainwashing studies, and add fun to college days, as we watch or take part.

Little Things Mean a Lot when It

Fall is still here, but the ice rink opens early to give both young and old practice time.

As campus leaves turn to mellow gold and crimson, the Illini are busily working at all the little events that add up to a rememberable fall. Enthusiasm runs high at this time of year, for students still retain some of their energy after a restful summer vacation. It's not uncommon at all to hear someone about 6:30 in the evening say, "Grab your jacket and let's get over to Pennsylvania Avenue for the Pajama Race!" A traditional sport at U. of I., the pajama races are advertised all over the campus. Fraternity pledges carry little signs around on their backs to let fellow classmates know when their particular street race is going to be held. The winners of the previous year officiate the contest which, believe it or not, brings fellows out into the streets in their pajamas!

An attempt to save the past tradition of tug-of-wars across the boneyard, the IF and MIA Councils challenge each other to a tug-of-war, which is held in the quadrangle. A great big rope and all their men with well planted feet, plus a cheering crowd, are all it takes. These are just a few of the short-lived events in the fall.

It's different, but college students will do anything. The annual fall pajama races always attract crowds of people like this. The races are held early in the evening and only last a short while, so loyal Illini come out to cheer their favorite house on to victory.

Armistice Day was recognized by everyone—ROTC, the Regimental Band, and students, too, especially because we got out of the first fifteen minutes of our eleven o'clock classes.

Comes to Annual Fall Activities

Actives and alumnae of most of the houses work together throughout the year on various projects: founder's days, Homecoming, initiations, and philanthropy projects.

Both the actives and the alumnae of Sigma Kappa are proud of their new house.

Pajama Races—a traditional fall event—add to the rousing campus spirit. Here the Delt's team cheer for themselves after winning the John Street races.

Grinning Sig Nu's are keeping a tight hold on the trophy that they won at the Penn Ave. P. J. Races.

Excitement of Fall Events Keeps Us on the Go

"The Cadets are coming to Champaign!" and a large crowd awaited them as they lined up into their traditional formation.

With 600 extra men on campus, the girls, as well as the efficient Block I staff, were kept mighty busy at the Army game.

A memorable scene in our fall University Life is this one. Here 70,000 loyal students and campus visitors, dressed for the weather of the day, hurry toward our Memorial Stadium in time to be seated before the 1:30 buzzer sounds, beginning another Illini football game.

After we've settled into the comfortable routine of classes and going to school again, we find or make time for extra-curricular fall activities.

On Saturday afternoons, we either listen or go to a game. Friday afternoons are for TGIF-ing. Ten o'clock breaks are for a cup of coffee. And there's always house meetings on Monday nights. Of course, there are other traditional events we go to such as Homecoming, Turkey Run, Stunt Show, dances, dates and Union movies.

Fall is also the time for hayrides, wiener roasts, raincoats and clear, crisp mornings.

But, the greatest event of fall is returning to school.

As the football team left for the Wisconsin game, so did loyal Illini supporters. The Phi Delts were smart to charter a bus, as many others did, because of road conditions.

An annual fall event, held on the quadrangle, is Turkey Run, which draws entries from the fraternities and sororities, who are paired.

The necessary equipment for Turkey Run is both odd and assorted. Two people, a bicycle, a gunny sack and a football are all needed and used in the race that's for the birds.

Any time of the day from ten minutes to the hour until the chimes sound, this crosswalk between the Library and D.K.H. has enough traffic to keep the policeman busy. On rainy days, the stream of raincoats crossing the street is broken only when a car passes by.

Out of the Rubble Come Traditions of the Past & Forms of the Future

It's a population boom in the world and at Illinois, too! In every direction one can see new buildings in construction. These lines and forms join together into more halls of learning to carry on the ways of the past and the prosperity of our future children.

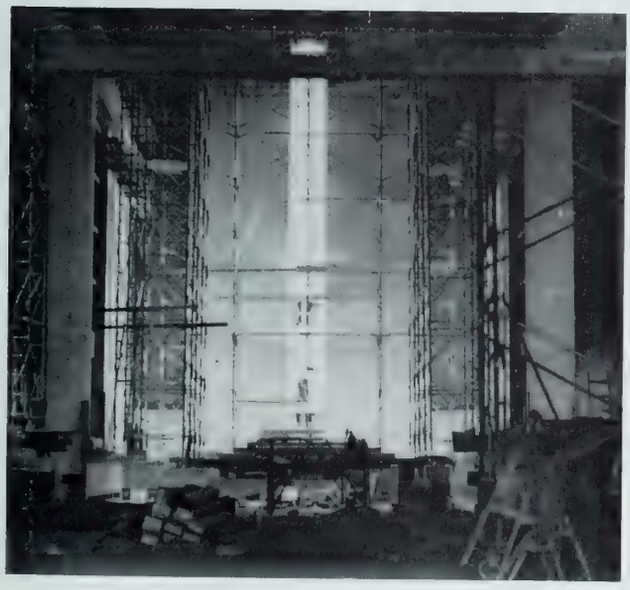

The cupola on the Illini Union exemplifies the Union; in fact, it is so well known, it is used as their "trademark."

On every quarter-hour, the chimes, which we associate as a part of the University, ring out from Altgeld Hall tower.

Adding to the old and the familiar are the new. Wesley Foundation's interior resembles a maze before completion.

To keep up with the expanding enrollment, we build constantly. Burrill Hall was finished for use in the 1959 summer session.

One of the newest buildings on campus is the Fine Arts Building, but even with this new expansion more room is needed.

We Know That It's Mid-year As Winter Brings Us a Sleet Coated Quad

A typical coed butters up Santa at the Illini Union Tree Trim Party. During the busy season students help trim 4 or 5 trees.

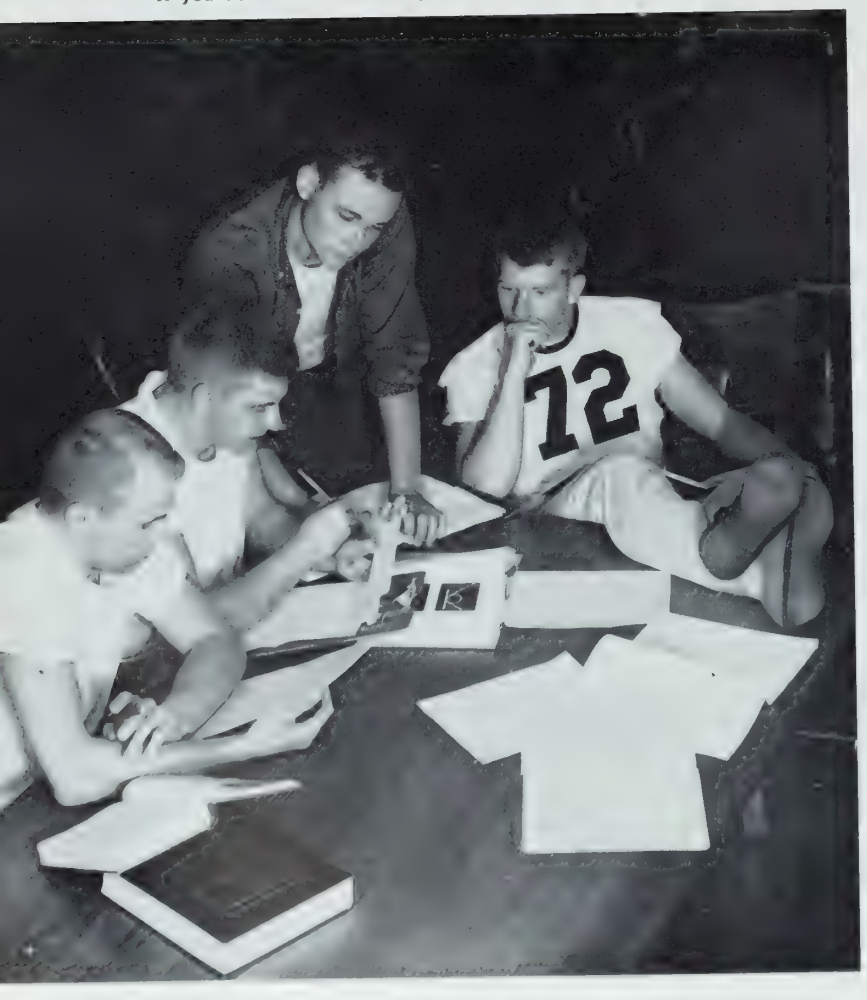

Mother Nature and man-made reflecting lights work together to add an artistic touch to our Georgian style Illini Union. We're not so sure the shivering couple waiting in the bus stop agrees that the Champaign weather adds to the beauty of our campus.

Studying can be reduced to a formula. Find a quiet place, get into a comfortable position and study until an interruption.

We Study to Learn and We Learn to Study

If you don't understand a problem, just ask someone to explain it.

If there is one thing we all have in common here at the University, it is studying. We study in many varied ways. Some go faithfully to the library every day, some must go to seminars every night, others go to Kamm's to study between coffee and classes, but most of us find that studying in our own room is the method to get the optimum results.

There is a rule of thumb about studying which says two hours outside for every hour of class but this is sometimes mathematically impossible and we find ourselves "cramming" and reflecting, "If I'd only planned ahead."

Rarely do we see this scene, both roommates studying.

We can find our concentration in unusual positions at odd times during the night and day, but it's each to his own study habits.

And We Strive to Better Ourselves Scholastically

There are times when we just can't concentrate on anything but sleep.

Often, we need a change of environment to study effectively, but is it for the better?

We Learn to Relax

On Thursday nights, we are able to vacate our books and meditate on the "coolest of sounds" at Jazz-U.

The sound of a trumpet slicing through the dusky light in the "Tavern" at the Union turns attention to the "man with a horn."

On any floor of the library, the stairs serve as a congregating place for us to "take a break" for a few minutes from our reading.

The place to relax in the library is on the first floor stairways, no "NO SMOKING" signs, either!

by Completely Divorcing Ourselves from Studies

There are moments when the pressure of school builds on us and we have to "let off steam." Other times, when we're tired of studying, we take a break. And sometimes, we don't need an excuse, we go out to "have a ball," it's just GO!

Regardless of why we go out to relax, it is a most essential part of our life here.

The campus offers many varied amusements. We can go to a show, play bridge, listen to a concert, play golf or do any of the other numerous activities.

Friday afternoon is the best time for relaxing and our TGIFing which is a tradition with many active participants. After the last class on Friday, we throw away the books for a while and "move out" to the nearest campus hangout and "have a ball."

There are many ways to relax, and shooting a game of pool is just one of them. In fact, we do everything from listening to jazz to bowling to going for a quiet walk.

The basement of "Kamm's" isn't exactly the best place to play a chess game, but we all find relaxation in many different ways. If the spectators aren't very interested in the game and are more interested in "partying," it doesn't matter, they're all having fun.

The attendant of the "Lost and Found" department is one example of the many jobs that the Illini Union offers for students.

We can always use more money while we are going to school. Often the money we earn during the summer just isn't enough to see us through a school year and; consequently, many of us must take a job in order to be able to go to school. Or maybe, we just want to earn some extra money on our own while we're here at school. In either case, many of us work at different jobs while furthering our education.

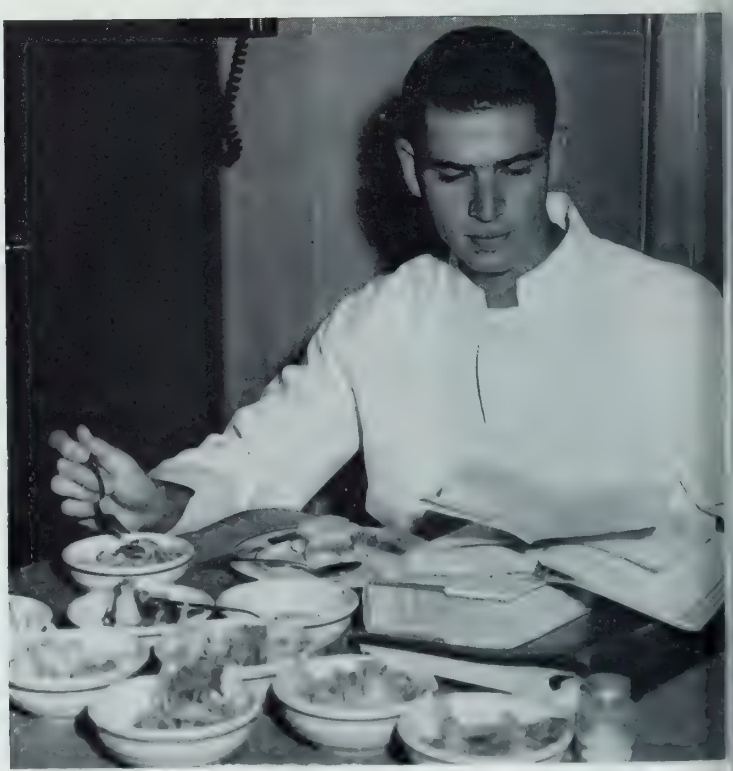

There are many job opportunities here at school, which include washing dishes to sorting and testing soil samples. One of the most common jobs is working as a waiter or dishwasher either in an organized house or in one of the restaurants on campus. The pay for a "meal job" is exactly what the name implies—a meal, but free meals help defray expenses as much as being paid money.

The working student does make his own way, for his job often requires that he stay up very late at night studying to make up for study time he loses when he works.

Many of Us Have to Work and Go to School

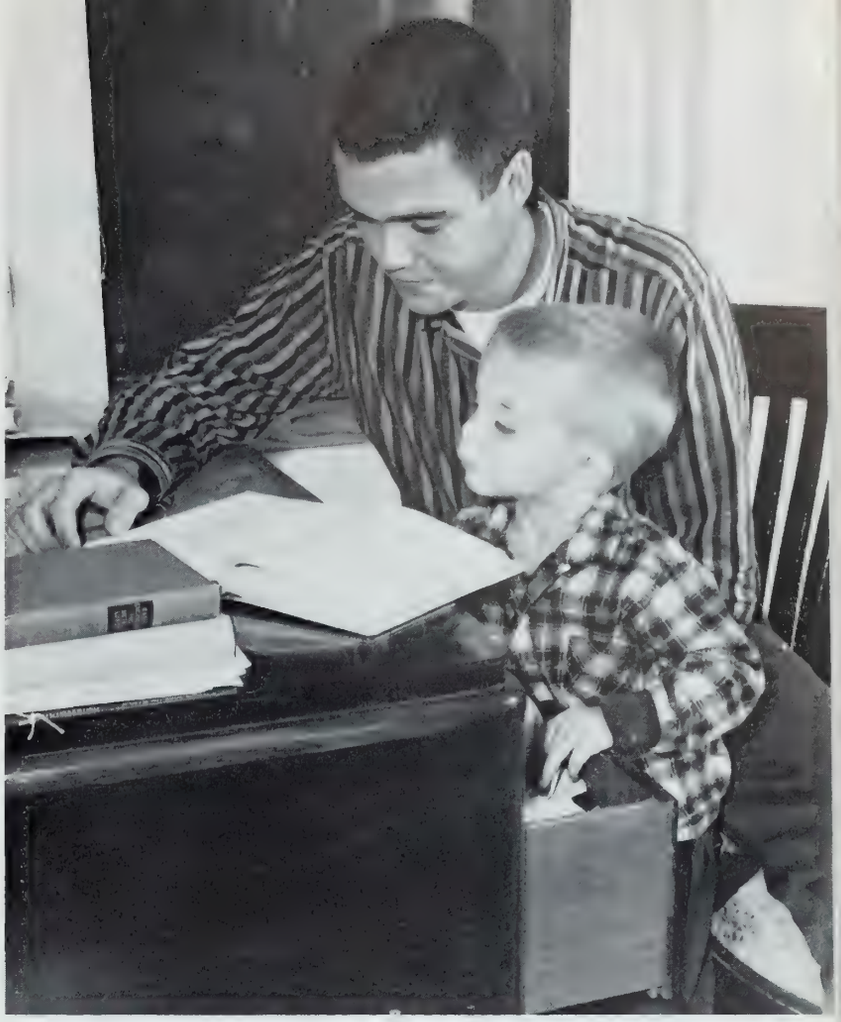

Many working students work as part-time librarians in the various school libraries and find they have to work very quietly.

Even at meal-time, this waiter still finds time to squeeze in a couple of minutes of studying between his meal and job.

The children's bedtime takes these students from thoughts of books and school to other important responsibilities.

"Say, Dad, let me read that book, too!" Like father, like son, these ambitious engineers study for the next day's hour exam.

Married Students Find Their Roles on Campus

Gary couldn't ask for a better waitress than his own wife, Barb, who perks up his studying with real homemade coffee.

Two can live as cheaply as one is the belief of many of the University of Illinois students as shown by the fact that approximately 4,408 students are married. In many cases, the wife works to put "hubby" through school. Others depend upon scholarships, parental help, and loans. A large portion of the income goes for a place to live. The University provides some apartments for students, but most of the young couples must find a suitable place off campus in the Champaign-Urbana area. Activities of the couples include cooking meals, drying dishes, taking care of the children as well as studying for the next hour exam.

Lots of pinned couples no doubt envy these happily married two who now study side by side as the baby "Toby" enjoys a nap.

Courage and Skill on Wheels—It's Gizz Kids

A wheelchair batter swings at a high, hard one as springtime draws paraplegics' attention to America's national sport.

As wheelchair athletes play, it's a small wonder enthusiasm runs high with these cheerleaders to lead a crowd in yells for the team.

Wheelchair fans give enthusiastic support as handicapped athletes meet in hotly contested game at Illinois armory.

No sport's too tough for the handicapped athletes of Illinois and bowling's no exception. Here's a strike on the alleys.

Over the last ten years, the Illinois wheelchair basketball team, commonly known as the Gizz Kids, has played a number of exhibition games in addition to its regular conference schedule. The profits from these games have been donated to organizations devoted to the discovery and cure of severe disease and disability. Over the years, the team has contributed over $15,000 to such agencies as the American Cancer Society, the National Polio Foundation, and the Muscular Dystrophy Association. In recognition of the team's service, the Muscular Dystrophy Association this year awarded the team a citation.

The Gizz Kids are sponsored by Delta Sigma Omicron, a co-educational service fraternity for disabled students. This organization also sponsors wheelchair football, baseball, and bowling. These sports, however, are not just restricted to the male contingent, for a squad of cheerleaders keeps the team's morale high. Competition among the girls for a position as cheerleader is high, and they, too, put hours of their time into drills and cheers.

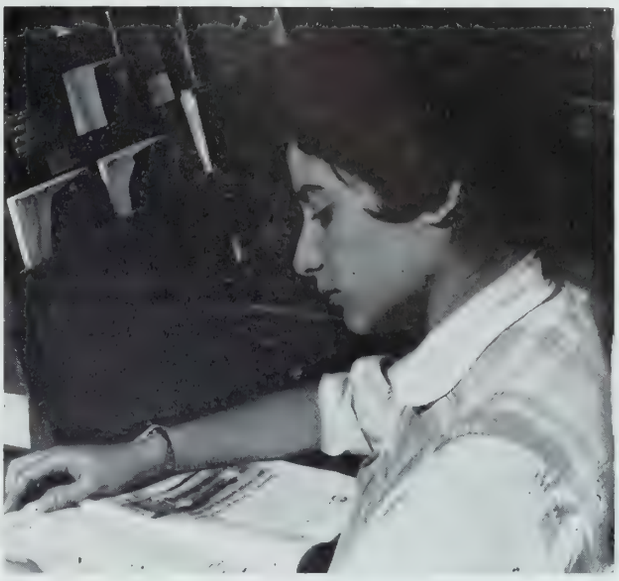

It is evident from these varied activities that DSO has been organized to promote not only the academic, but the physical and social welfare of the handicapped students. Also, the organization explores educational possibilities on the higher levels and investigates occupational opportunities for its disabled members.

We Seek the Goal of International Friendship

The foreign student is a person often forgotten on our campus. He has much to offer us if we take time to meet him. Today's college students are in part, tomorrow's leaders. Learning other nations' customs, ideals, and opinions would be interesting and would increase international understanding and friendship. Let's be good neighbors and hosts!

At lower left are two Oriental girls, seen as they dance together at International Fair. It is in this co-operation that we Americans can broaden our horizons.

There is a time for study, and Ginny finds, as do many other students, the necessity of many hours with her books.

There are the times when we work together or dance together, and we begin to learn and understand more about our foreign ties.

There are also the quiet times when one can relax or talk. Here a group of friends learn the customs of dress in Chile.

There are gay times when laughter or dancing can break the monotony which comes with excessive hours of study.

Maybe you could dance all night, but at least once you'll slip off your shoes and sit the next one out with your date.

Even in the middle of a crowded dance floor with the band playing, you can find a way to talk together quietly.

That certain thrill of getting autographs from entertainers seems to have a drawing power that attracts everyone.

Formal Dances Are One

During the course of the school year, there are many University dances, most of which are held in Huff Gym. The size of these dances grows every year and sometimes it's hard to go through the crowd, much less find space to dance and still hear the band.

Falling streamers reflect a shadow over the dance floor, creating a mirage of light and slender floating clouds.

Several times every year Illinois coeds anxiously look forward to the night of the big dance, one of the six campus-wide formals held at the University each year. The nights of these dances mean something special to most students—the beautiful formal gowns and sparkling cocktail dresses of the coeds, the neatly groomed men in their tuxes, the colorful decorations in the gym, the soft, romantic melodies of lively beat of a "name" dance band, and the crowning of a pretty queen. When the coed leaves her date at two o'clock, the special curfew for these dances, she has many pleasant memories of a wonderful evening. She'll add another bid to her bid string and wish for a date for the next dance.

You name it! It might be the jitter bug, the bop, the cha cha, or even just a plain old "fast dance" at a dance in this decade.

Aspect of Illinois' Social Whirl

From a trombonist's view, we see the popular Illini Union Ballroom filled with an array of couples; some are blind dates and some may be pinned, but to us they all look the same.

Religion Is a Necessary Facet of Campus Life

The Congregationalists sponsored an old-fashioned taffy pull this year. Result? Plenty of fun and gooey, sticky hands for everyone.

A favorite time for all the Congregational students at Seabury Foundation, is when the Supper Club buffet is ready.

Members of the Lutheran faith share a common feeling when they read responsively in an evening worship service.

These vicars of the Episcopal Church rated special balcony seats to watch the Sheepskin parade as it progressed down Wright Street.

Majestically standing at the corner of Green and Mathews is a new Methodist Church. It was dedicated in February.

One of the advantages of a state university is the fact that we can associate with people of a variety of religions. They may be Catholic, Protestant, Jewish, or ever Humanist. Regardless of the faith students follow, some type of religion is an important facet of their college life. No matter what their belief might be, students can find a familiar place to worship. There are sixteen organizations and churches that direct their services toward the students. They provide many activities and fellowship groups. There are the Sunday morning or Friday evening worship services, supper clubs, Wednesday night vespers, choir singing, discussion groups, and many, many more.

At both the 9:30 and 11:00 services students and faculty stream into foundations on campus.

All is still, and then with joy we rise to "Sing Praises Unto the Lord" as the choir enters to begin the Sunday morning worship service.

Many Cultural Traditions Enrich Campus Heritage

The University of Illinois has always been a strong cultural center and each year the tradition increases. Many noted men and women in the fields of humanities and the arts have found recognition here. Currently, we have on our campus a living legend in the person of Dr. Paul Landis. Dr. Landis, who is in his own right a scholar in the field of Shakespearian Literature, is best remembered as the "reader of the Christmas Carol. He is, in fact, a living tradition, for some of our parents can recall hearing Dr. Landis read the Christmas Carol when they were here at the University.

Another one of the truly great persons we were privileged to have speak to us was the famous contemporary poet, Robert Frost. We were so anxious to hear him speak, that on the Friday night he spoke in the Auditorium, all the seats were filled forty minutes before he came on stage and many of us were turned away at the doors.

But, these two events were a very small segment of all the cultural events on campus.

This year students and faculty enjoyed readings of famous literary works given by professors of the English Department at the Union.

With his familiar low voice, Dr. Paul Landis brings to life characters in Dickens' famous Christmas Carol.

We heard Robert Frost say: "Good fences make good neighbors."

International Fair brings students and many outsiders from afar together for fun and learning. These Greek students host their booth.

It was a white Christmas at the Union this year, as students worked together decorating the "modern" festive trees.

One of the many Lithuanian students on campus displays a Christmas tree, her native style. Compare it to our white flocked one.

Our Campus Winter

Rain or shine, snow or sleet, our "Alma Mater" still watches over us.

Champion hockey players rest after hard practicing. The Ice Rink has a full season, with various exhibitions, classes and general public use.

The real Christmas spirit is captured by these houses during their party for cerebral palsy.

Spells a Need for Stadium Boots and Parkas

When the lamp posts on the quadrangle become barber poles, decorated with red ribbon and evergreen, and the Alma Mater is dressed in her winter coat of ice, then campus knows that winter is here. It's a good time to stay indoors and study, but it's also a stimulation for snowball fights and a jaunt over to the Ice Rink for hockey.

One of the biggest events at midyear is International Fair. At this time every foreign student on campus has the opportunity to familiarize us with his own country. This is done thru exhibits, movies, pageants, pastry shops, and bazaars. Also, popular at this time of year are various Christmas parties, often given for groups off of campus.

IHSPA means Illini High School Press Association and also a jam-packed day of learning on the U. of I. campus. It's workshop day for newspaper and yearbook editors.

Throughout the year, as long as the sun is shining, the sundial south of the Illini Union marks the time.

One of the familiar sights on the campus south of Gregory Drive is the ivy-covered gate near the Architecture Building.

This fellow may not be making his first million the easy way, but he is undaunted. Daily, he stands at the corner of Fourth and Armory selling his wares.

This is the "Senior Bench." Yes, sixty years ago the graduating class left this as their memorial and designated it to be used only by honorable Seniors. How many of us share in the guilty consciences of breaking another one of U. of I.'s changing traditions?

The greatest part of life in the spring is relaxing outside. Often though, we find ourselves sleeping instead of relaxing.

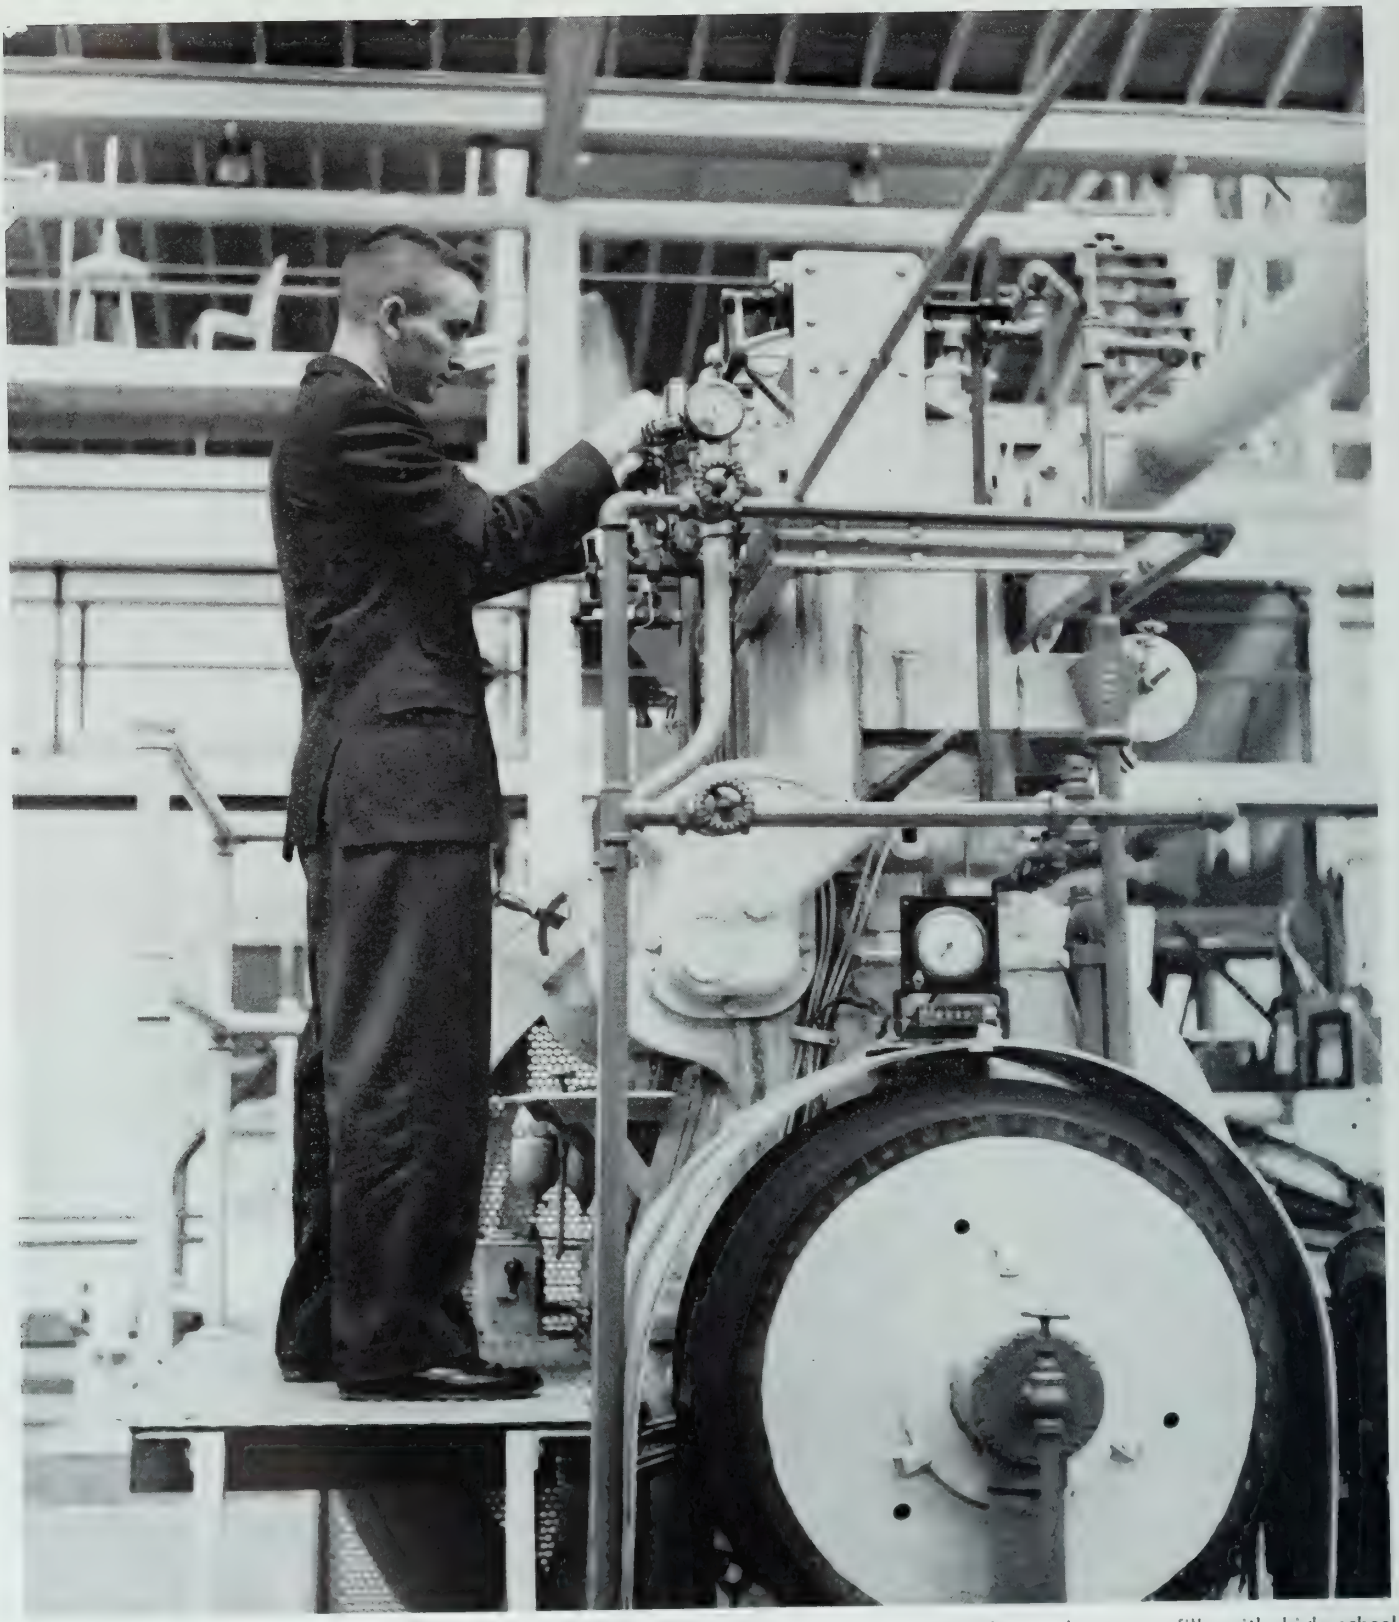

Spring Pushes Us Outdoors to Study and Play

Late spring brings another one of the Illini traditions—the outdoor concerts. On Wednesday evenings, the quadrangle is dotted with people who sit on the grass listening to the band as they perform on the Auditorium steps. Here is the utmost in relaxation.

After being confined by winter weather, we yearn for the day we can study outside. The first day we can go out and study and enjoy the sun, spring and life, we do.

The Engineers: Application = Understanding

Every spring the Engineering College holds an Open House to show scientific progress. The north campus fills with high school students, townspeople, and students from other curriculums who are amazed and impressed with the modern developments of engineering.

Possibly these future Illini are already at work on their engineering problems that they hope to be facing fifteen years from now.

A popular place during Engineering Open House is the "Double E" Building where fellows work on such electronic devices as this.

Every half hour swarms of people crowd around the mechanical engineering lab in every way possible, to see how much force it takes this hydraulic testing machine to smash this solid concrete cylinder all to bits. The loud noise shakes everything north of Green Street.

Barelegged gals, blaring house combos filled Wright Street as Sheequon officially began Friday at noon. The stunts were meant to publicize the events in the Armory—most of us find the purpose more that of letting off steam after much work and just plain partying!

We Gave the Campus Back to the "Indians" and

A walk-weary Indian follows his float on the long parade trek through Champaign. do modern Indians, wear tennis shoes?

Willingly we donate our energy and study time to create a presentation for Sheequon. Sheequon means "spirit of spring" and comes from the language of the Menominee tribe who once inhabited this area. In all probability, their meaning and ours coincide exactly, for Sheequon is the campus-wide event which marks a peak of each spring semester. In our minds, we don't think of it as an activity providing the Campus Chest with funds, but as a trophy case filler and an opportunity for parties and dates. Many a merchant in town always wishes he had had a bigger supply of grease paints and muslin when we decide to become Indians for this weekend.

Sheequon 1959, in its second year, became much bigger and better. More of us participated in the "big show" and it added a new dimension to "spring fever." In the parade, we tried to be legendary or historical or contemporary in our float design.

Saturday afternoon was exciting whether we rode on our float or pounded nails in the dusty Armory. For an afternoon, we completely forgot our student-type existences and were transformed into Indians or Aztec gods, or perhaps even a series of tepees.

Sheequon, with all its noise and color, remains an Illini tradition which will continue as it gives us an opportunity to express our talents for something other than examinations and papers.

We use the utmost ingenuity in constructing floats that bring home a trophy. The Legend of the Piasa Bird is enacted on wheels as these relaxed Indian maidens smile down at the throngs of students and townspeople who turn out for the colorful "Indian Incidents."

We Found in Ourselves the "Spirit of Spring"

Montezuma triumphed as Fiji and Theta took first prize in the parade with the impressive "Montezuma Immortal." Costumes and bare skin caused great concern on a gray day threatening rain on all the beautiful floats made mostly of colored paper.

"Sheequon Saturday" Is

On the Saturday afternoon of Sheequon, the parade route is lined with people who view what we've constructed.

To stimulate interest in the Sheequon night show which is held in the Armory, entering groups will often hold an outside show similar to the old-time "Medicine" show—lots of loud music, beautiful girls and a short preview of "what's gonna happen tonight."

The entries in the parade run the full range of themes from the very authentic historical to the contemporary humorous. The source of propulsion for these floats runs a similar range, from convertible-powered floats to ones motivated by man power.

Full of Color and Noise

As the parade draws near, all attention focuses on getting a good picture—no matter how good the "hand" is.

After the pairings for Sheequon come out, preparation for "Sheequon Saturday" starts. We begin planning, designing, rehearsing and building for a weekend months ahead. Then on the "Saturday of the Indian," all the work, time and effort comes together into a pageant similar to a "party that stretches from one end of campus to the other and lasted from Friday afternoon until Saturday night." One part of Sheequon is the parade that begins in downtown Champaign and ends near the Armory.

The parade is a colorful affair and spectators select prime positions to watch the parade from, hours before the parade arrives. The spectators are not disappointed either, for the parade contains every imaginable type of entry. The parade lasts for approximately two hours and leaves a lasting impression on both the people who see it and the people who are in it—"Whata parade!"

On Saturday night after the parade, the crowd ventures into the Armory to see the second-half of Sheequon—night show. After the parade and before the night show begins, the Armory is a madhouse of activity. Everyone has to put finishing touches on their booths; props are brought in, trucks are everywhere, the sound of hammering is all over the Armory and people are running in every direction. Everyone entertains the thought, "we can't possibly get done in time." We do.

The doors open on the show and the crowd flows in. Here, finally, is the realization of months of work, but the success of the show doesn't depend on the crowd, who pay their "tokens" to see a show; success is measured by our fun. Night show over, Sheequon (except Sunday clean-up) ends.

One of the unrehearsed shows of last year's Sheequon was a flood of water that engulfed part of the night show in the Armory.

This show was advertised to "bring a lake to Champaign." They did! University firemen then tried removing it.

Careful planning had to go into the construction of this float, as it had to be hinged in order to allow for its passage under the viaducts on the parade route.

The Final Product of

On Sheequon weekend, the attitude toward school and studies changes markedly. The whole campus becomes wrapped in an atmosphere only a parade and a show can give. In the time elapse of a few days, we remove all thoughts of studies and the routine of life here and concentrate our efforts on maintaining the tradition to Sheequon-making this year's float and show better than it was last year and having more fun doing it.

Our Sheequon atmosphere is infectious to everyone that comes in touch with it. It is reflected in the faces of the dancers and builders, but noticably in the expressions and actions of the multitudes of onlookers. Visitors and people seeing Sheequon for the first time are literally astonished at its size and the ones of us who have seen it before, share their feelings, for each Sheequon is excitingly new.

The credit for making a successful Sheequon must go to the members of the various committees who move behind the scenes at Sheequon. These are the people who organize and control the entire scope of Sheequon. They must start planning Sheequon months before any of us start to think about it. Their rewards for the job they have done often comes at the wrong time-during Sheequon when they're often too busy to acknowledge their praise with more than a casual nod of the head as they go about their work. Often they don't get to see the result of their work.

Another one of the impressive floats in the parade was one depicting an ancient Indian legend about a big fish. Since the theme of this Sheequon was one of Indians, there was a representation of Indians from all parts of the world, as well as American Indians.

Sheequon Is a Campus of Tired, Happy People

The Illini Hall Steps furnish an excellent vantage point to see the parade when it comes down Wright Street. All along the parade route little clusters of people gather everywhere imaginable to see the parade—they are on steps, roof tops, balconies and car tops, too.

One game booth in the Armory was a pitching contest. If you hit the bullseye, this Indian fell into water.

The night before Sheequon, the Armory was full of scaffolding, 2' x 4's and people readying booths for the next day.

The Psychologists Tell Us Repressed Desires

The moment a phone rings during MERC week, everyone hopes for a feminine voice.

During the spring, the campus undergoes a miraculuos change. For a full week, the boy-girl relationship is reversed. This turnabout week is "Men's Economic Recovery Week."

Throughout the week, the girl takes all the privileges of the male. She is the one who must call for a date, set the time of the date, go over to the boy's house to get him, provide transportation and pay for the date. In addition, she must take care of all the little things that a boy must do when he is on a date, such as, opening doors, lighting all of his cigarettes and making sure he is happy.

Perhaps the most unusual aspect of this week is the nature of the dates, for they are anything, but ordinary. The women think of all types of money-saving devices and the dates are all the more fun for it. Last year, the transportation provided by one group of girls was roller-skates. Another good date that is used is the "study" date and coffee dates are also very popular as an inexpensive date.

As the week draws to a close, many girls breathe a sigh of relief because their financial resources are somewhat depleted, but the men draw a sigh of relief also because, though it was fun, it's good that MERC Week is just a week.

Are Released During the Spring--Merc Week!

It's form a "kick-line" for your choice of candidates during the Most Eligible Bachelor on Campus Contest!

This method of transportation for a date may not be as fast or nice as a car, but it's twice as much fun.

To achieve that feeling of "togetherness," the women sometimes resort to tactics of mass exchange during this turnabout week.

The officials' stand for the Illini Grand Prix Bike Races is all set up and ready to go for the race that goes by the Architecture Building. Fellows line up and we're off for another one of the many individual street races, a unique custom on the U. of I. campus.

Bike Races, Greek Week, Mother's Day, and

Every week is something special and this time of the spring brings us around to Greek Week. One of the very special elections during this time is for Mr. MEBOC, Most Eligible Bachelor On Campus. Naturally, the main requirement for the candidates, sponsored by each house, is that they be single, neither pinned or engaged, and the typical bachelor. All types of campaigning are done, and many favors are passed out to all the girl's houses, the legitimate voters. Greek Week also includes a special kickoff banquet at the Moose Club, exchanges, open houses and Illio-Olympics. The latter, held on Friday of the week, brings forth the best chariot pulling teams around. The fraternities build a real chariot, choose a pretty maiden to ride in it, and then draft their fastest running pledges to pull it around the Armory track. The final event of the week is I.F. Ball on Saturday night. Mr. Meboc is announced—won this year by Al Gerstein. Pat Boughton was named queen and wore a crown laiden with fifty some fraternity pins.

Mr. MEBOC campaigns bring peppy jazz bands as this out on Wright Street at noon hours.

A competitive nonprofessional sport during the spring is the fraternity Bike Races, which are sponsored by Delta Upsilon.

A young man's fancy turns to baseball in the spring, just in time to get in practice for the annual intramural games.

"Eye's Right!" Air Force men, and don't get out of step because your mothers are watching. One of the many events of Mother's Day Weekend is the ROTC Review which includes marching exhibitions and the presentation of special awards in recognition of top service men.

Ado Annie, played by Linda Bennett, laments to Laurey, Carol Oyster, a habit of being unable to resist men.

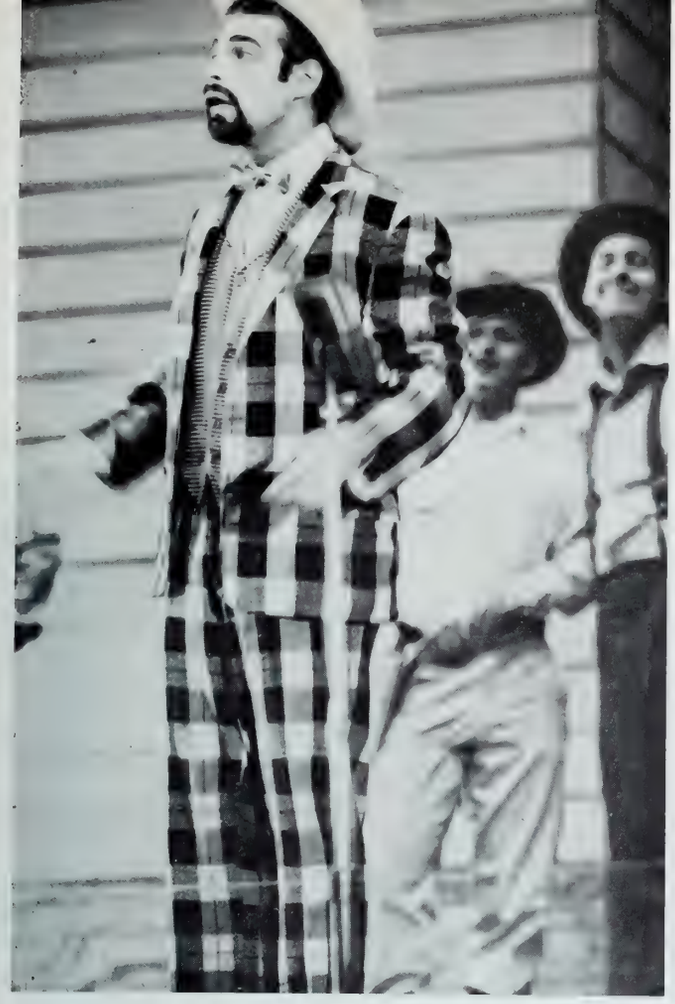

Here on the campus, we set aside the first May weekend as Mother's Day. The mothers arrive on the campus on Friday or Saturday and live with us until Sunday. During this period, there are many events and traditional activities. The weekend is full of bridge tournaments, serenades, "look alike" contests, banquets and merriment.

Spring Musical is just one of the traditional events that occurs on Mother's Day. It is given on Friday and Saturday nights and is consistently one of the best received events of the weekend. Last year's production of "Oklahoma!" was no exception. All who saw it, enjoyed it thoroughly. The comment that the musical was "very professional" was a tribute to the time and effort put forth by all those connected with the show.

Another of the various activities held on this weekend is the crowning of the Mother's Day Queen. The Queen is the personification of the ideal Illinois co-ed. She is chosen on the basis of her beauty, personality and poise, activities and scholarship.

How often do we hear, though, after the last mom has gone, "She wore me out trying to see everything." But we all were happy to have Mom here for a while.

Traditions Come & Traditions Go-

Mrs. Saul Gelman, Illini Mom, reigns happily wih her son, William, on the platform at the Mother's Day May Queen ceremonies.

Modern campus is a far cry from what it used to be when freshmen all wore beanies and the seniors had a prom. Regardless of the changing people and their different ways, a few traditions have survived. The tapping for honoraries has lived down through the years. Mortar Boards still go tapping in the night in their black caps and gowns. As the campus grew and there was more competition, Shorter Board was added to recognize more of the honored senior girls. Ma-Wan-Da and Wa-Na-See, senior men's honoraries, have endured changing times.

Now instead of sipping cider through a straw out at Dunlap Orchard (now the Paradise Inn), students find relaxation in TGIFing, the Friday afternoon beer blast, and precede their finals with a Water Fight. Even Alma Mater was changed into a white faced scoling beatnik and paths were worn across the middle of a grass filled quad. What's happening to the "younger generation?" Not a thing. It's just that an afternoon at the Lake of the Woods or a ride in a top down convertible is more a part of the modern day trend. Students are still human and in the end they proudly march in the traditional graduation processional to receive their diplomas.

Pranksters keep the physical plant busy at work reviving our traditions.

Few Endure the Changing Times

"26 de Mayo" was the prewarning of this year's water fight. The tradition, however, was somewhat squelched by the University administration and the Tribe of the Illini.

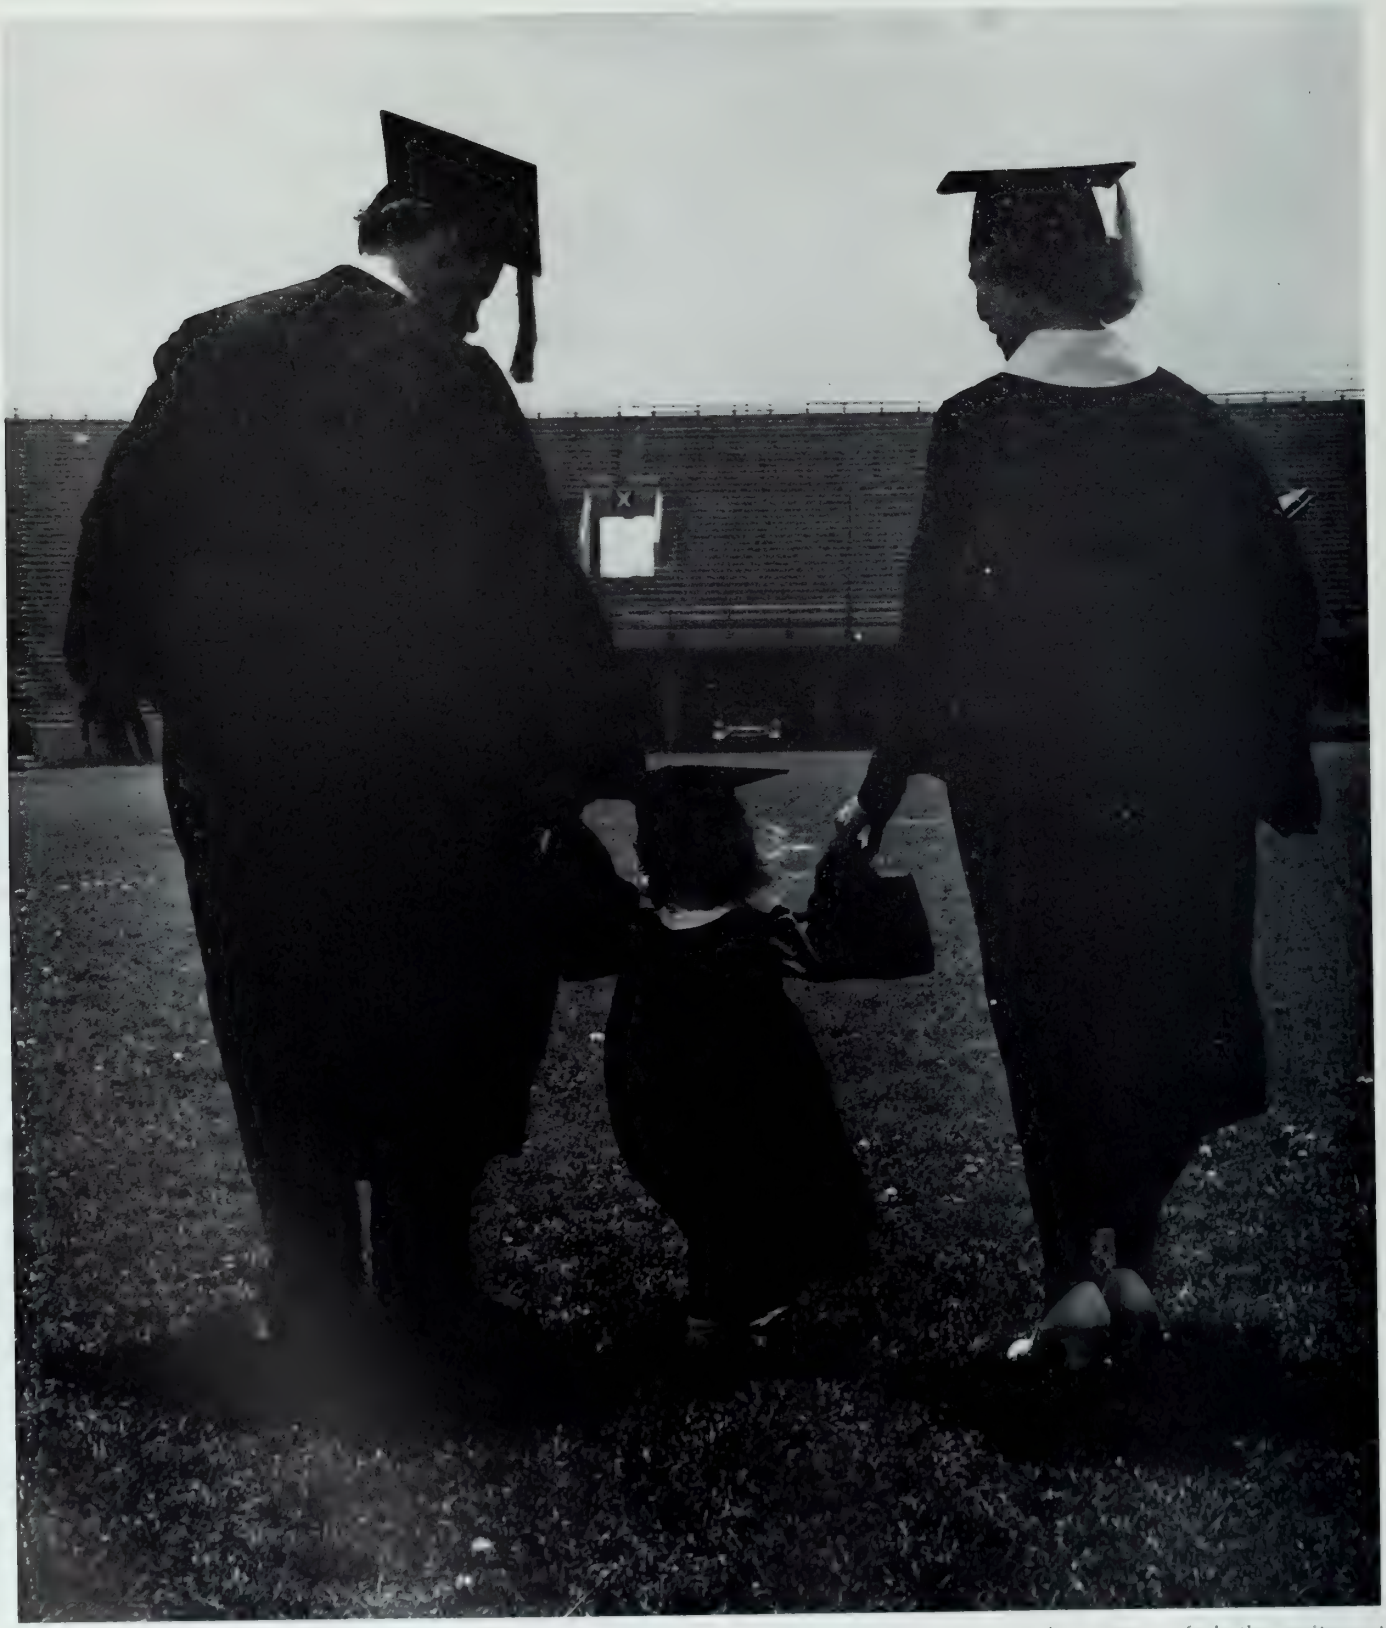

"A true Illini never cuts" is the old saying. Often we need a reminder!

Down through the years has lived the tradition of the Mortar Board girls, senior activity and scholastic honorary. The week before Mother's Day weekend, their song can be heard as they come tapping in the night, fulfilling the college dreams of 25 coeds.

Graduation Marks the End of A Way of Living;

Mommie and daddy and daughter, too, are dressed for the graduation parade. On commencement day, everyone feels the excitement of the moment, for it is then we leave the University and venture into the world. We leave with mixed emotion.

It Is the Beginning of Our Use of Learning

We sit in the stadium and listen as degrees are conferred to us. It is a solemn, yet happy moment for everyone.

Our University President, David D. Henry, is a busy person at commencement, for he confers all our degrees.

Weather permitting, we receive our degrees in Memorial Stadium. This academic procession is the end of learning at the University for most. When we enter the stadium, we present a picture of thousands of black robes moving slowly forward.

Louis B. Howard, Dean of the College of Agriculture, also acts as Director of the Agr. Experiment Sta. and Extension Service.

Ag & Home Economics

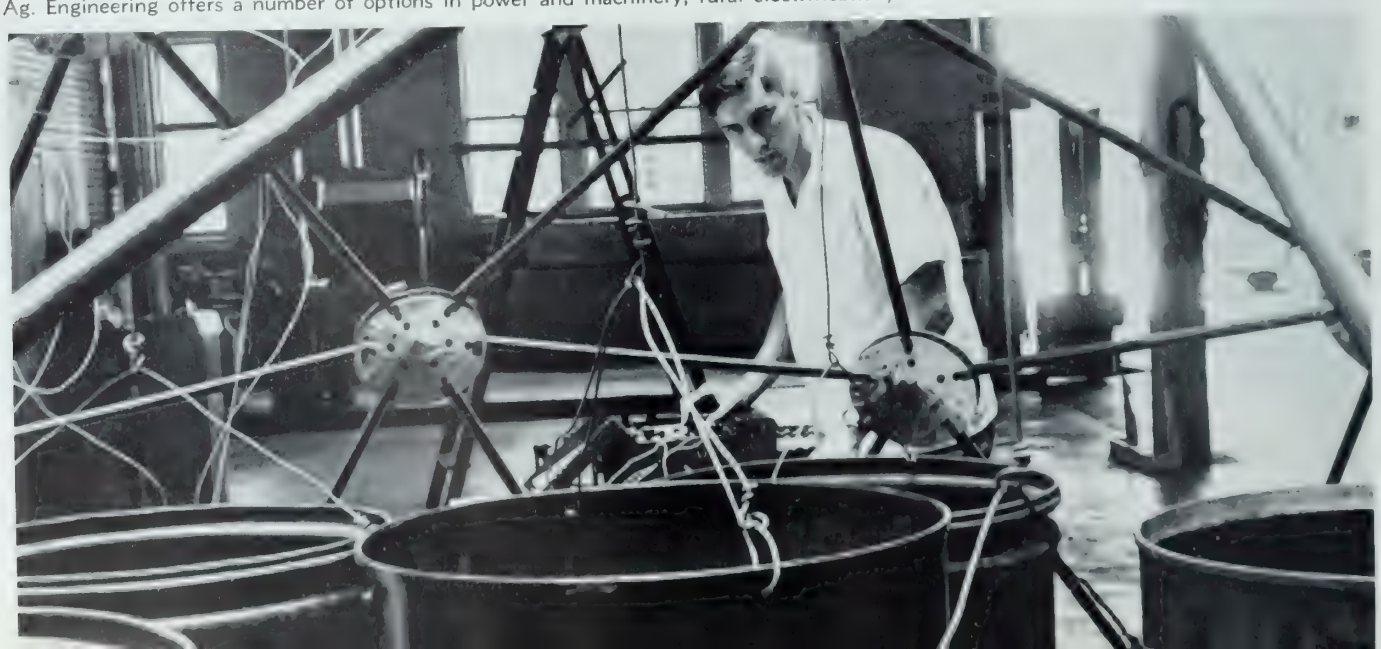

Agriculture was one of the main purposes for the establishment of this Land-Grant College in 1867. Today it still reigns high, being one of the campus colleges to offer the most varied careers. Ag School, including Home Economics, is changing its patterns of education and now offers nine complete options: Ag. Economics, Ag. Engineering, Agronomy, Animal Science, Dairy Science, Food Technology, Forestry, Horticulture, and Plant Pathology. A new advancement in its teaching methods is the teaching machine, developed by Darl M. Hall of the Extension Dept.

Home Economics, headed by Dr. Janice Smith, fulfills the feminine side of south campus. Home Ec. is the study of family living, which is today the most complex human relationship. Home Economists often have the hard job of convincing outsiders that "Home Ec. is learning to appreciate one's children, art, music, literature, and people. It is a scientific field." A degree in Home Ec. is a magic door to good employment in child development, home furnishings, apparel design, textiles, retailing, foods, institutional and restaurant management, household management, teaching, and extension.

Expanding Institute of Aviation Soars Ahead

Although his student enrollment is relatively small, Director Leslie Bryan has a big job heading the growing department.

The Institute of Aviation, directed by Leslie A. Bryan, offers aviation instruction, flight maintenance, and a professional pilot curriculum to 100 students within the school and to 350 other interested students in the University.

The airport, composed only of a few runways and a lone hangar in 1946, has become larger in area than Chicago's Midway Airport. The Institute has gained a national reputation for its many advances, but it continues to look ahead.

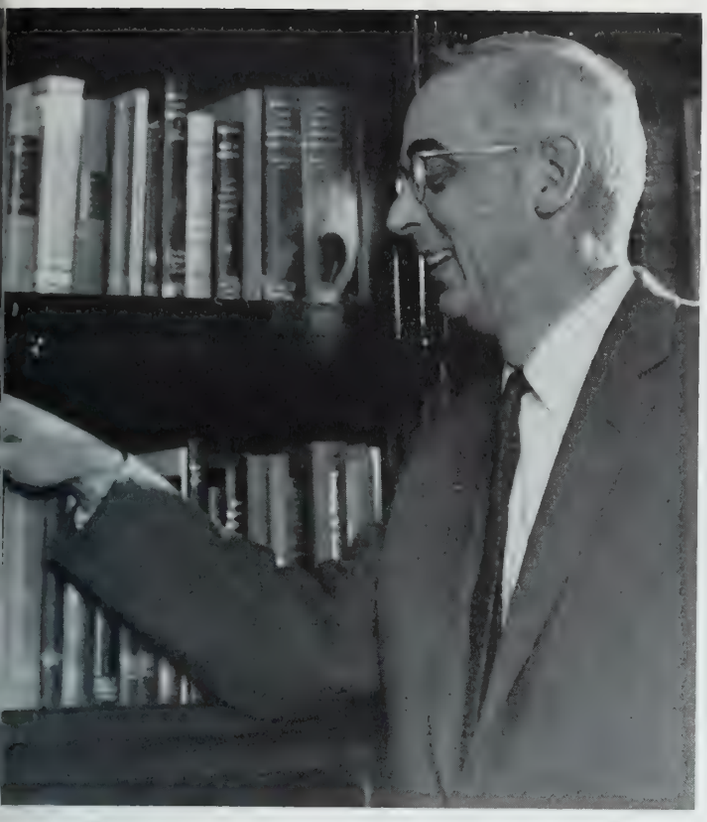

A present expansion program includes the building of a one-half million dollar terminal building and control tower. The building provides office space for the Ozark Airlines; the tower operates as a part of the Interstate Air Traffic System of the United States. A quarter-million dollar project to increase the much-ly needed ramp and parking space is also a part of the Institute's goal.

The lines and forms of this artistic design make up the University of Illinois Airport, which is always in use—be it noon or midnight.

The acting Dean of the College of Education, C. M. Allen, smiles, regarding a group of books, the tools for education.

College of Education Increases Research

The College of Education prepares our potential leaders for their teaching of special educational services. The school offers curricula for elementary teaching, industrial education, home economics education, and education for exceptional children, mentally handicapped, deaf, and hard of hearing. The curricula draws on the broad resource of the University for general education. Graduate courses are offered for development of appropriate fields of specialization.

The percentage of people in the field of education has increased nearly one hundred-fold in the past ten years, and more are turning to teaching. Over half the students enrolled in education are in elementary education.

Research, a major facet of the work of the college, is increasing its programs greatly. University High School provides facilities for testing and developing new programs. The School of Education receives many land grants to aid improvement.

Through this door, that of the Dean of the College of Education, walk educational leaders of the present and future.

Commerce Aims for the Well-Rounded Education

One of the many professional fraternities of Commerce, Alpha Kappa Psi, celebrates its Founder's Day Banquet. Other professional organizations connected with Commerce include the Society for the Advancement of Management, the Marketing Club and Insurance Club.

Dean Paul Green serves both as Dean of the College of Commerce and Dean of the Graduate School of Business Administration.

David Kinley Hall, better known as "D.K.H.," is one of the busiest buildings on campus. It is the established landmark of the College of Commerce and Business Administration.

Through training in modern business practices and in the fundamentals of economics, this college seeks to develop in its student the abilities necessary for responsible positions in business and government. It offers a unified program of basic studies for freshmen and sophomores and a variety of fields of concentration for juniors and seniors. Though the factual contents of many of the courses are directly useful in specific vocations such as accounting, banking, selling, and teaching, students expect to serve an apprenticeship in the fields that they enter after graduation from this College, if they wish to prepare themselves for higher positions. While concentrating in a special field, they are required to select courses offered in other colleges and schools of the University and to secure as liberal an education as possible to avoid the narrowing effects of overspecialization.

The program for the first and second years is organized around courses in accounting, and economics, mathematics and science, language and literature and speech. While this program is designed as preparation for the third and fourth years of the curriculum, it affords a well-balanced combination of studies for those who are in college only two years in preparation for work.

This typing class attests that education in the College of Commerce involves practical, as well as theoretical learning.

In the computer lab, commerce students learn basic fundamentals of skillful operation of many business machines.

The Illinois chapter of the Marketing Club sponsored a three-day trip to Indianapolis this year for the purpose of seeing marketing principles studied in class put into operation on the job. The bus was full, even though the trip began at 7:15 on a Monday morning.

Rapidly Expanding College of Engineering Adds

During the course of their studies, engineering students come in contact with many devices. Here the instructor explains the operation of this instrument to his class. Through demonstrations of equipment the students gain a comprehensive picture of the course.

William L. Everitt, Dean of the College of Engineering, has the responsibility of heading one of the fastest-growing departments in the University. Dr. Everitt is the President of the Joint ECPD-EJC Committee on the Survey of the Engineering Profession; he is on the Advisory Committee for the Pacific Missile Range of the U. S. Navy and on the Army Scientific Advisory Panel. These are only a few of Dr. Everitt's many interests, but they indicate his enthusiasm for the engineering profession and its developments.

Dr. Everitt visited Russia's teaching and research institutions last November as he participated in an exchange program sponsored by the American Society for Engineering Education. This year Dr. Everitt was invited to visit Greenland to see the "DEW" line, the Distance Early Warning radar picket line, which looks across the poles over northern Canada, Alaska, and Greenland and warns of the approach of manned aircraft. Dr. Everitt enjoyed this trip in December.

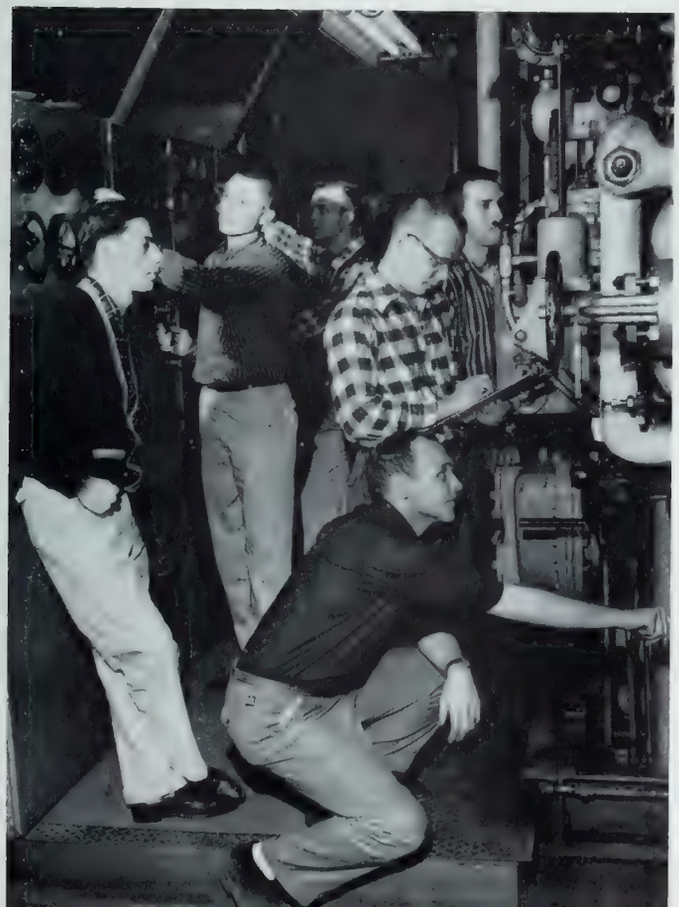

This year's plans for the College of Engineering include the construction of the Nuclear Engineering Building, located behind the Physics Building. The building will house a nuclear reactor, which is expected to be installed and operating in early spring. An electrical radio telescope is being built as a joint operation between the Electrical Engineering and Astronomy Departments.

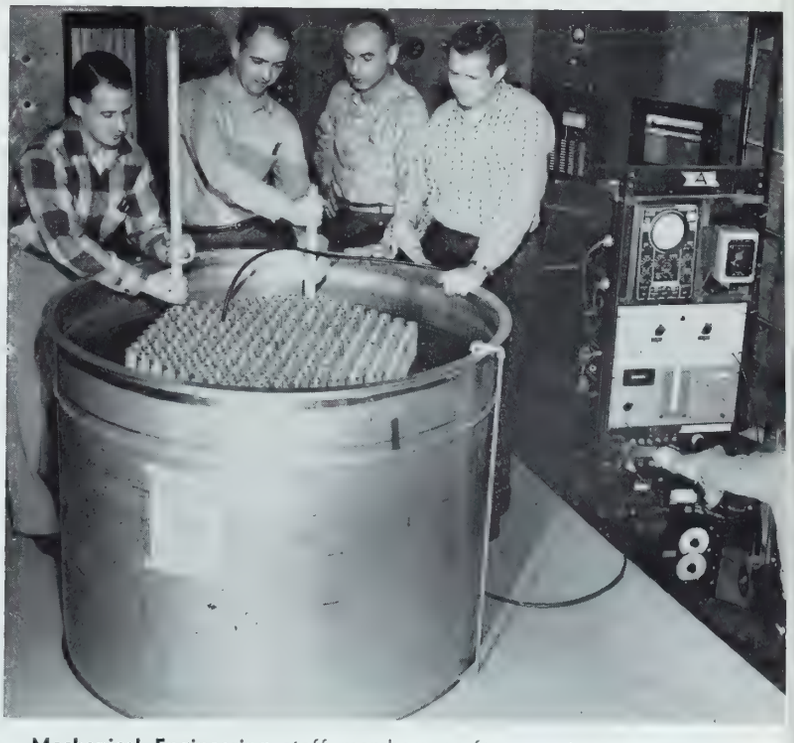

Dean William L. Everitt, who has the responsibility of heading the College of Engineering, examines test models.

University Extension Composed of Nine Sections

Top notch organizations are the keywords of the Audio-Visual Aids Service, the world's largest education film lending library.

A reflection in a foreground lake or in the minds of people who have attended conferences at Allerton Park find this typical scene.

Here's a division of the University that has no faculty! This is absolutely the truth because members of the faculties of every other college on campus participate in the Division of University Extension. There are nine particular sections to the department: (1) Short Courses, Conferences, and Institutes; (2) Correspondence Studies; (3) Extramural Classes; (4) Audio-Visual Aids Service; (5) Music Extension; (6) Engineering Extension; (7) Police Training Institute; (8) Vocational Testing and Counseling for Adults; (9) Information Services. Engineering Extension has a Firemanship Training program, too.

1960 marks the twenty-sixth year of service that Extension has given to the University. One of the interesting facts about their teaching is that it is done in classrooms throughout the state. For many years, University Extension has maintained Allerton Park, and last year just added the Evergreen Lodge there. The facilities at Allerton are used for dinners, conventions, and camps. Te beautiful grounds and interesting imported art works provide a popular place for students. The fact that Extension covers so many areas keeps their office a popular place.

Institute of Government And Public Affairs Is Public Service for All

Director G. Y. Steiner has a massive chore in heading the assembly of data in the Institute of Government and Public Affairs.

In addition to the many Colleges on the campus, the University also provides services to many organzations. One of these services is the Institute of Government and Public Affairs. This service is designed to furnish information and collective data to individuals and groups and government and state officials requesting various types of aggregate data.

Graduate students are employed by this office to do field research and process the data to the different levels of government as well as other groups.

A feature beneficial to students looking for employment in government is given by the Institute. Often, the Institute acts as an agent between students interested in governmental jobs and the jobs by providing information about these jobs.

Labor And Industrial Relations Institute Aids Us

Over the desk of Director Martin Wagner flow the many problems confronting the Institute of Labor and Industrial Relations.

A branch of one of the fields involving required study of sociology, psychology, management and other related fields is the Institute of Labor and Industrial Relations. The Institute is broken down into three distinct divisions.

The first area is the teaching by the case-history method, using students enrolled in the Institute's program. Secondly, students and faculty are employed by the Institute to do reseach on problems that currently face labor and industrial relations throughout the nation.

The third area of the Institute's work is joining in extension work within the state. This entails organizing, preparing and teaching courses to interested personnel from all stations of business and labor, so they may have a better view of problems facing them.

Dean Weller takes time out from his many duties as head of the College of Fine and Applied Arts to relax in his office.

The College of Fine and Applied Arts, administered by Dean Allen S. Weller, is one of the best colleges of its kind in the country. This college offers courses in the Departments of Architecture, Art, City Planning, and Landscape Architecture, and in the School of Music. Also included in the college are the Bureau of Community Planning, the Small Homes Council, and the University Bands.

In keeping with the University's program of giving more advanced instruction to exceptional students, the School of Music offers the Illinois Summer Youth Music program. Fifteen hundred talented high school music students may attend the University for two summers and receive full college credit for the courses they have taken.

Two new buildings, the Krannert Art Museum, a gift of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Krannert, and the Fine and Applied Arts Buildings, should be finished soon. Features of these new additions to the campus include a glassed-in lounge connecting the two buildings and a reflecting pool. Since the Art Department has vacated the Architecture Building and moved to the new building, the old structure is being used soley for architectural and administrative purposes.

Honoring the campus with his presence as a visiting professor this year was Samuel Adler, the noted painter and contemporary artist of New York University.

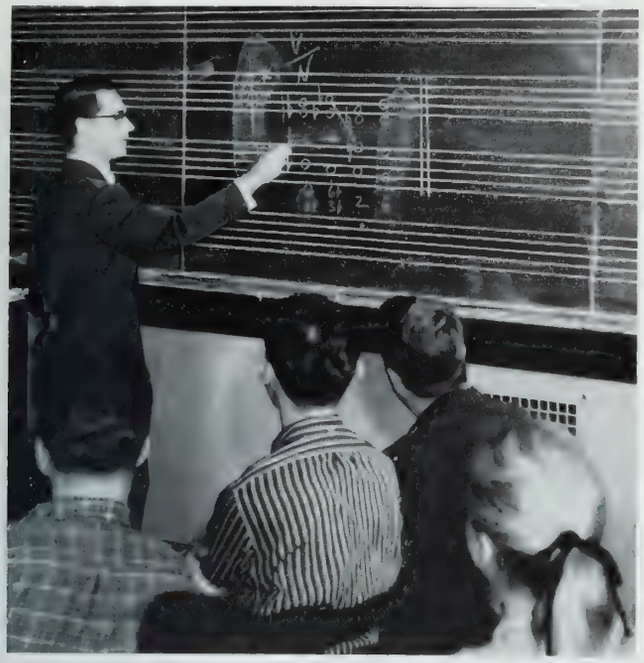

Interested art students carefully study a painting in the Art Gallery, which is located in the Architecture Building.

Journalism and Communications College Changes

In the basement of Gregory Hall, a clatter of typewriters denotes that the reporting lab is in session and students are creating again.

This weird-looking "tinker-toy" is the schematic diagram of personality. An important part of communications is its effect on personality.

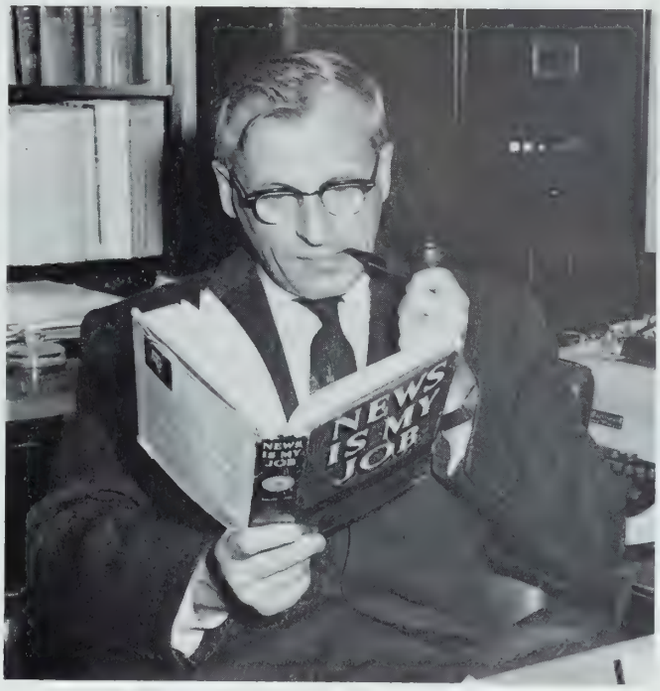

The typography lab furnishes students practical printing experience on a limited scale.

Advertising, Editorial and Radio-TV Programs

This year, the College of Journalism and Communications formalized its program in the Advertising, News-Editorial and Radio-TV fields. This College has offered a degree in Journalism since 1922, but it was not until last year, that the formal division of the field was made.

The College offers both the theoretical and the practical plus some "on the job" experience. The courses that are taught in the Radio-TV field, for example, involve working with TV equipment and producing TV shows. The college even maintains its own Radio-TV station, WILL. Students in professional fraternities of Advertising and News-Editorial have an opportunity to display their talents, also, for Sigma Delta Chi publishes a newspaper once yearly and Alpha Delta Sigma pledges have to sell "sandwich" board advertising to be initiated.

Each spring, outstanding faculty and students of the college are honored at the "Brown Derby" banquet. One of the main attractions of this show is the skits put on by the faculty and the students, which are satirical sketches of faculty as been by the students and vice-versa.

In addition to his duties as Dean of the College, Dean Peterson still takes time to teach some Journ courses during the semester.

In this copy and layout course, practical experience is provided. In this course, as in many of this College's courses, practical application is made of the principles taught. The experience gives students a taste of the problems they will be meeting in the future.

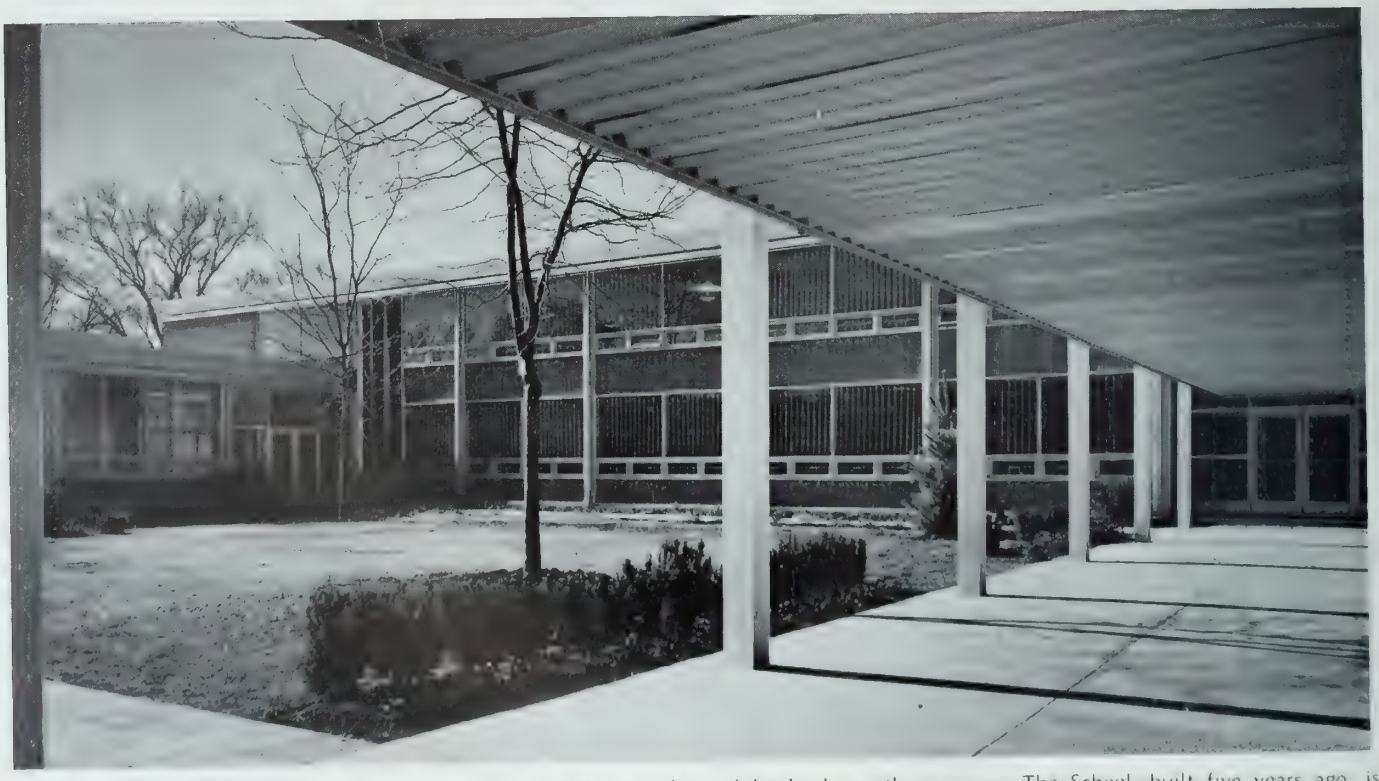

The Law Library is one of the most complete in the country and Law students make considerable use of this quiet, well-lit part of the Law School

This small ante-room across from the law auditorium provides a comfortable place to relax between classes.

Law Students Find

Law School with its modern design makes it one of the most beautiful schools on the campus. The School, built five years ago, is located on Pennsylvania Avenue and the only complaint many students have about school is its distance from campus.

The program of education in Law School is very different from the standardized lecture and discussion type of learning many under-graduates are exposed to. Much of the learning in the school is done by the case history method and its application to modern Law.

The school plays host to a number of varied traditions and activities. One tradition is the wearing of bowlers and carrying of canes by the graduating seniors on Wednesdays. Other traditions include applauding each instructor out of the classroom on the final day of class, mock courtroom trials and Moot Court. Moot Court is designed to give freshmen in Law experience in courtroom policy and proceedings.

One of the highest honors of Law School is an acceptance of an article written for Law Forum, the magazine put out by the school dealing with current legal problems. Students writing the best articles are selected as permanent members of the staff. Another honor is to be selected as one of a team of four students to debate before a Supreme Court in the spring. Selection is made on the basis of performance in the Moot Court of the Law School.

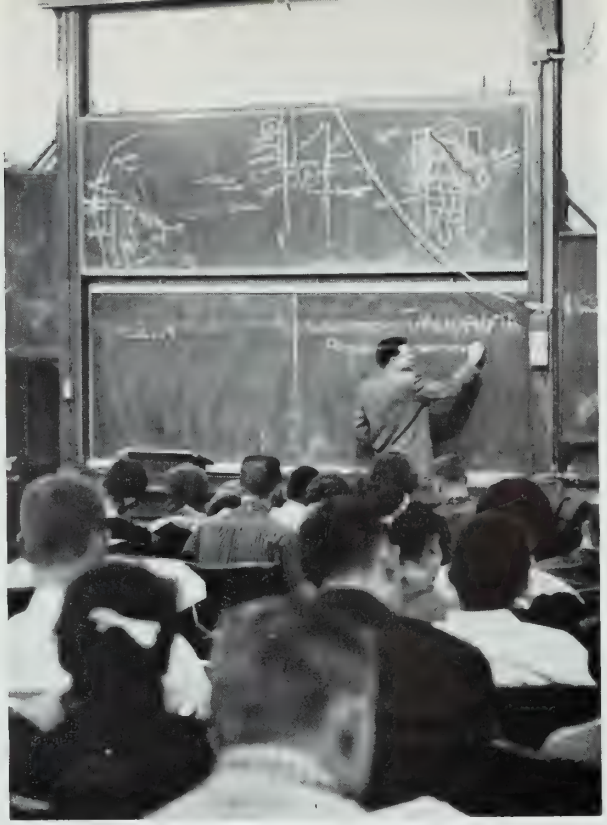

Dean R. N. Sullivan heads the Law School here, from which many of this country's top lawyers and judges have been educated and graduated.

Education in Simulated Court Room Proceeding

Students are given a chance to show their talents as prospective lawyers in these mock court room trials and hearings. The tribunals of judges are men who have great knowledge of the field. This type of experience is invaluable to the student when he starts his practice.

A scribbled blackboard with outlines and diagrams is a good visual aid for the students in Botany lecture.

With the largest increase in enrollment on the Urbana campus, the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences made highly important advances this year in several different ways: a new Language Laboratory; a new program of "honors" courses for superior students in all classes; and a new advisory system in which each student has an individual adviser, a long needed program.

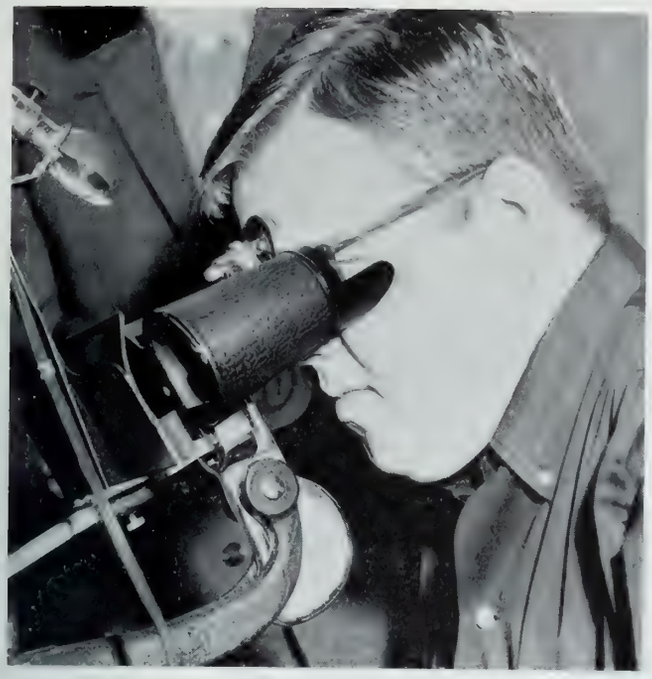

The new Language Laboratory has greatly improved instruction in all of the modern languages. Equipped with the most modern electronic devices, the laboratory is used by hundreds of students each week to perfect their speaking and understanding of the six different languages taught in the college.

Measured in terms of total impact on its undergraduate students, probably the most significant development in L.A.S. this year is the guidance system which is particularly helpful for incoming freshmen. Faculty members spend time helping students work out a program, overcome academic difficulties, and plan careers. Systems as this have worked well in other colleges, but because of its size, it was impossible before in L.A.S.

Increasing Enrollment and Developing Various

The typical lecture section shown here appears only to be the instructor talking and the students writing. We have all been in this scene at some time. We wait for the bell and our attention shifts from lecture notes to clock-watching and planning for after class.

Instruments such as these characterize the modern trend in educational research, a changing and motivating field in itself.

Dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, L. H. Lanier, heads one of the largest divisions of the University.

Liberal Arts Adds New School of Life Sciences

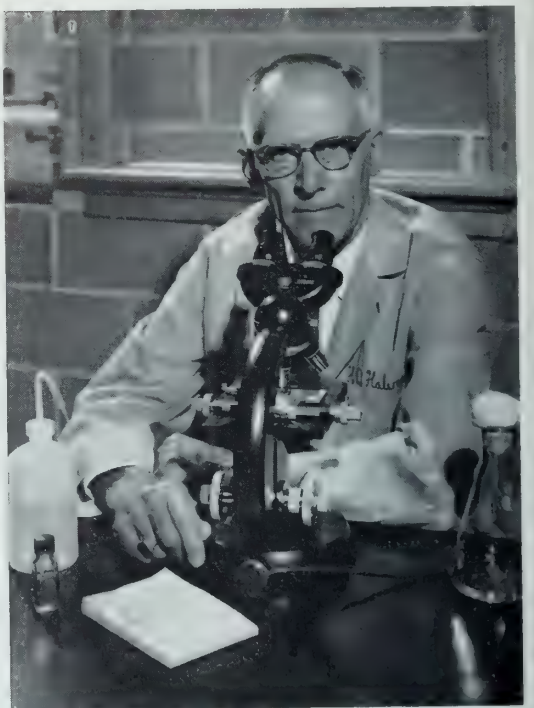

As students looked through their timetables this past fall and checked where their classes were to be, they asked, "Where's Burrill Hall?" Sure enough, there's a new building and a new school on campus. The School of Life Sciences includes the Departments of Botany, Entomology, Microbiology, Physiology, and Zoology. No longer will students of these classes have to crowd into the old Natural History Building which was erected in 1892, the last major building for life sciences. With all this new space, plans are being made for broadening the research division too.

Observing some interesting Petri Plates in the spore laboratory are members of the University Board of Trustees as they tour the new structure.

1959 summer school students in bacteriology (now called microbiology) had the privilege of initiating the new modern equipment and laboratory.

Dr. Halvor O. Halvorson, chosen director of the new school, headed the Bact. Depart. for 10 years.

Library Graduate School Works for All of Us

Every student at some time during his college days will go to the library seeking help for his studies. His wishes should come true, for awaiting him are one hundred thirty professionally trained librarians to guide him to any of over three million, eight hundred thousand volumes. In addition to the eleven special rooms in the main library which are devoted to a total of seventeen different fields, there are sixteen departmental libraries in various buildings throughout the campus.

The U. of I. Library School recently changed its name to the Graduate School of Library Science. This school was founded in 1893 in Chicago but was later brought to a new building in Urbana. In 1897 the school moved to its present location on the third floor of the main University library. Since the founding, over four thousand men and women have graduated from the school. The basis of the department is to train students for careers as professional librarians. They receive job offers in public schools, colleges, universities, research libraries, and other special areas.

The Library School Library was designed especially for the school and contains more than twenty thousand bound volumes, twenty-eight thousand library reports, and thirty-five drawers of vertical files. The Library School is the oldest of its type in the United States.

Dean Robert B. Downs' official title reads "Dean of Library Administration and Director of the Graduate School of Library Science."

A typical class discussion as this could be seen in one of the many class rooms on the second floor of the Main Library. The students you see could easily be graduates from colleges in California, Maine, or Alabama, as the School is known throughout the country.

It's not uncommon at all to see a group such as this in front of Huff Gymnasium. This recreation class is certainly well equipped for a weekend camping trip.

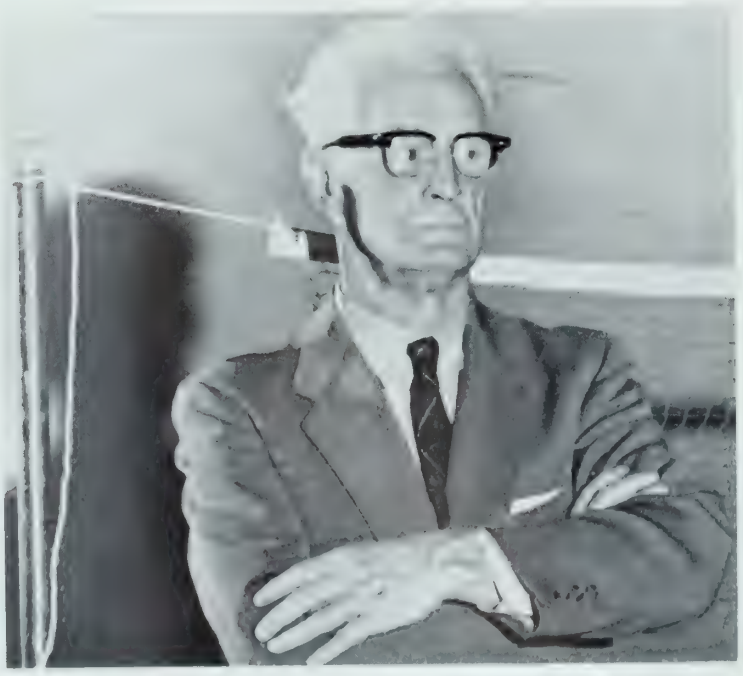

"Can you name every bird on the chart?" Part of the job as a recreation major is learning to set up visual aids and nature games for teaching purposes.

If you want to be a Physical Ed. teacher, a coach, a city recreation director, a TV personality or "Slim and Trim," a health and safety department head, or even a dance director of a Broadway musical, then a major in the "College of Physical Education" is for you. It's been a "College" since 1957. Back in 1932 when "mamma" wore bloomers and middy blouses to P.E., the department began as a "School."

This College may technically be new, but it is hard to miss on campus, for it touches almost all four corners. On the north side is Old Men's Gym. The English Building, once "The Women's Building," still provides the ladies with a gym and swimming pool. On the east is the Women's Gym and we've all been to Huff which borders the west. Besides covering a broad land area, the College offers a broad program to students and boasts the largest enrollment in the U.S.A.

Physical Ed. Offers Serious Study and Fun To

The Program of the Graduate School of Social Work Includes Classroom and Field Instruction

The School of Social Work, unknown to some people, is for graduates only. During the two year program of classroom and field instruction, the graduates acquire an understanding of the social and economic aspects of the society, and a knowledge and skill in interpersonal and inter-group relations.

In order that students can better understand current problems and developments in the field of social work, the University has set up special relations with public agencies and institutions. By studying within a realistic situation, they can acquire social work skills. These various institutions provide students with invaluable experience in research and constitute most of their field instruction. Assignments are given to students on the basis of their educational needs and their area of interest. The specific projects include Child Welfare, Family Welfare, Group Serving Agencies, Medical Social Work, Rehabilitation, Psychiatric Social Work and Public Assistance.

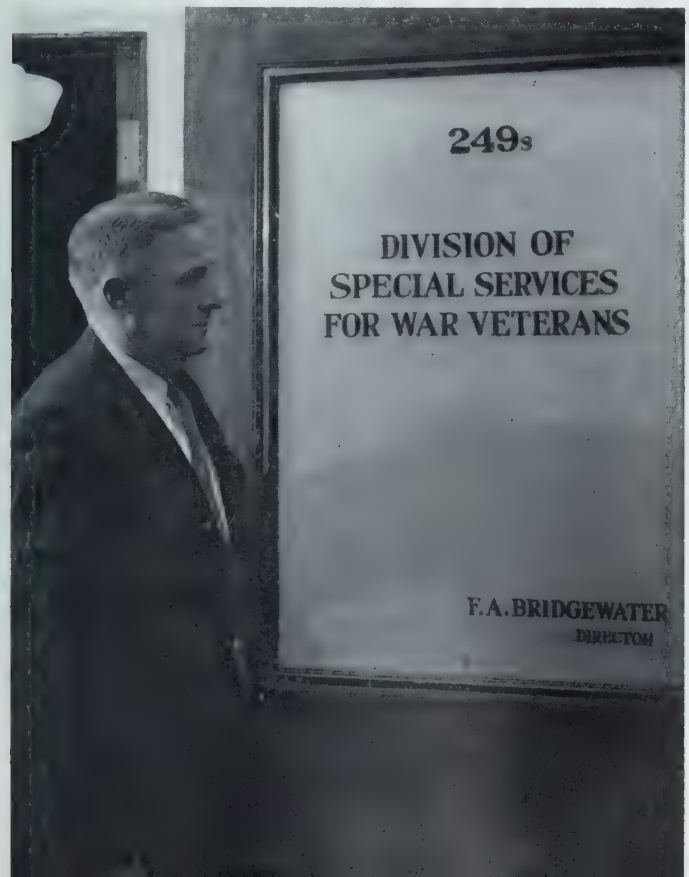

A student may specialize in any of these fields, but the curriculum is designed to enable the student to acquire a broad understanding of social work. This School places emphasis on learning the behavior and organization of individuals and groups in society.

Director Marietta Stevenson coordinates classroom and field work in the School.

Special Services Division Nears Its Demisal

Director Frank A. Bridgewater's small but mighty important headquarters are on the second floor of the Armory Building.

1960 will mark the last year for the Division of Special Services for War Veterans on our campus. This unique curriculum was set up soon after World War II in order for returning veterans to secure a liberal college education. Students have no longer been allowed to register in this division, for its purpose has now almost been exhausted.

One might say that the division does custom made curriculum work for the men and women veterans, for each of their schedules are made particularly for them. Students may take courses in art, engineering, commerce, home economics, or whatever they choose. This enables them to pick up college credits where they need them without going through a complete specified program. This personal attention has proved to be a great asset to the veterans.

Naturally the division is quite small. In fact, there are only 61 enrolled this year. These students will either graduate or change to another curriculum in August, 1960, when room 249 will no longer be open for service.

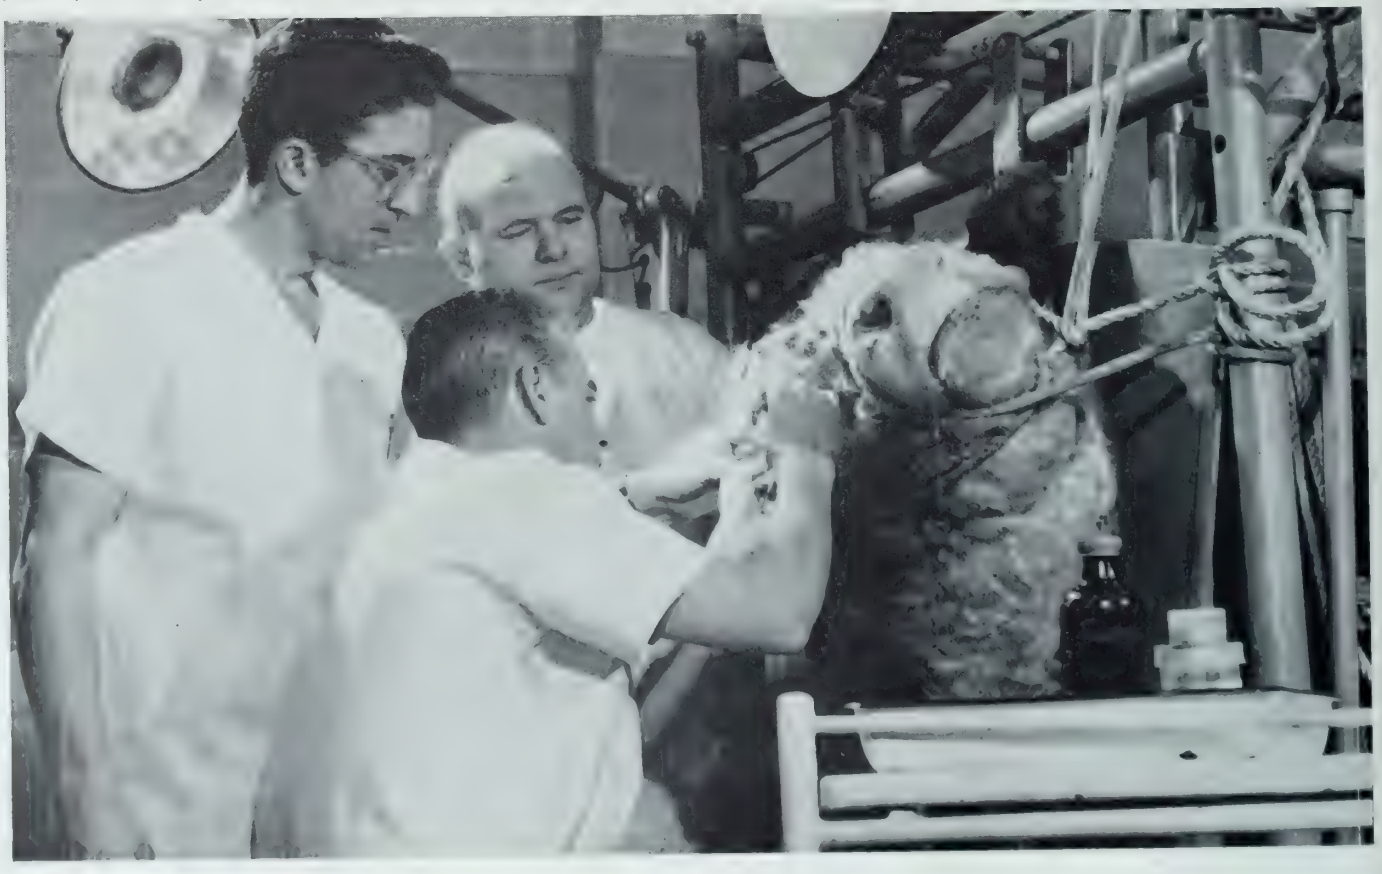

Dr. C. A. Brandly, Dean of the College of Veterinary Medicine, heads all phases of the college-teaching, public service and research.

Continuous Progress Keys Expansion for Veterinary Medicine

Although the College of Veterinary Medicine was established in 1944, it is not a new-comer to the campus. Courses in Veterinary Sciences were offered as early as 1870. At the present time, the number of undergraduate students enrolled in the college is 156, the highest number in its history. With expanding enrollment, the college has grown in two directions-facilities and courses offered.

Recently, a Federal Grant was received for a new Zoonoses Building—a secure isolation unit for research of diseases transmissible between animals and man. The use of radioactive materials has created the necessity for new courses in the college and courses in radiophsiology were developed this year. The college program also includes service programs for animal disease detection and diagnosis.

An operation on a bull's eye is just one of the public services offered by the college. Last year, the ambulatory clinical services handled 29,103 animal patients. Facilities for handling the animals include both a Large and Small Animal Clinic here on the campus.

The Graduate College which has the largest enrollment of any College on the campus offers students advanced study in many different fields of learning. As the field of man's knowledge increases so do the numerous fields of graduate study, for work and research is being done in all fields of science and art. Often the work includes the tying together of research done in one field with its application in another field. Quite unlike the undergraduate colleges at Illinois, graduate college draws its students from all over the nation rather than mainly from this state. Many students return to school after work experience.

Although each College has its own graduate college, they are all united under the Graduate College with its office located in the Administration Building. The graduate program at Illinois is one of the best in the country due to its organization.

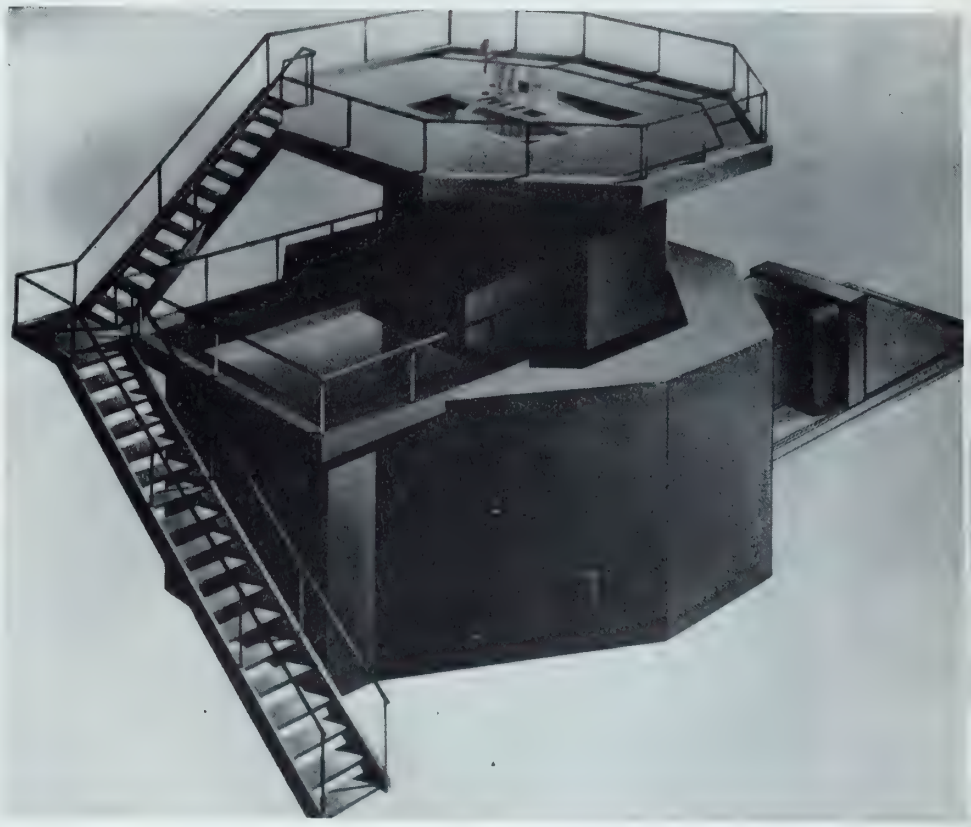

Dean F. T. Wall views the campus from his office knowing that anywhere he looks, he will see a part of Illinois' Graduate College.

All Phases of Higher Education Covered in The Graduate College

Graduate students increase their knowledge of their subject by close contact with the instructors.

A nuclear reactor, resembling the one in this sketch, will soon be built on campus for further graduate research in the field of nuclear physics.

The Deans of Women &

Miriam A. Sheldon, Dean of Women, takes time out from her many responsibilities to enjoy a cup of hot coffee.

The officers on the first floor of the south part of the English Building are known to all women students of the University of Illinois, for here is where our Dean of Women and her staff carry on their many very important services to help make a girl's college days more enjoyable and beneficial to her.

The Dean of Women and her assistants are responsible for the general welfare and the out-of-class life of the undergraduate women. They very cheerfully and willingly help in these areas of responsibility: individual counseling on general problems; referrals, where appropriate, to other offices and services; group advising; and personnel services for women.

They also take a special interest in particular problems concerning a woman's education, vocation, employment, and housing, as they differ from the general educational needs of all students.

Eunice M. Dowse, the Dean of Residence Hall Counseling, has a large number of girls under her guidance.

Mary E. Harrison, Dean of Independent Women, helps promote scholarship and good citizenship through Women's Group System.

Mrs. Beth Hinchcliff, the Social Adviser, works mainly with the many activities of the modern college women.

Ann J. McNamera, Dean of Freshmen Women, gives a helping hand to both the freshmen themselves and their very competent advisers.

Men Serve All of Us

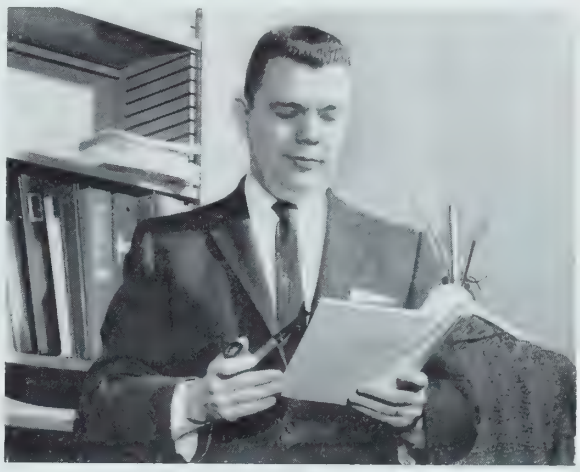

This year there is a new face at the Dean of Men's Office. Dean Knox, who was Dean of Men at a small college in Ohio, is now Dean of Men here at the University of Illinois. He and his staff of three assistant deans are very busy throughout the year performing duties of their respective positions. Besides helping men students with their problems, there are staff meetings, interviews, telephone calls, and a million and one other things that must be done. They strive to help students obtain high scholarship. One means of promoting it is through the competition set up among housing groups. Aside from on the job duties, the Deans are advisers to various organizations on campus such as Phi Eta Sigma, which is the freshman men's honorary. Yes, the Dean of Men and his assistants are very busy, but they always seem to have time for every individual who needs advice about almost any matter.

Carl Knox, Dean of Men, is signing one of the many papers which pass through his busy office each day.

Eldon Park, Dean of Fraternity Men, constantly strives to promote friendly scholastic competition among the various Greek houses.

Robert Culp, Dean of Independent Men, helps to promote good scholarship and good will among students.

This is the first year at the U. of I. for Panhellenic Adviser, Joan Cochran, who is busy directing the activities of Greek women.

A new position in the Dean of Men's Office is that of Richard O'Leary, who acts as the Dean of M.I.A.

Every day Dean Turner has conferences with various students concerning aspects of student government and discipline.

How well do we know our deans? We see them at open houses, honorary banquets, freshmen week speeches, founder's day, and water fights. If we're among the top scholastic group, we may have the opportunity of receiving their personal congratulations. We may be of another special group and go to see them about "getting back in." We're aware that there's Dean Turner when it comes to CSA's passing a bill for a 2 o'clock night. It's when these crucial decisions come to a head that we are aware of the top executive of our campus.

Behind the scenes though, our deans perform a great many services for us. Throughout the year they're always on the go, giving speeches here and there, recruiting more members for our institution. The many papers that pass through their offices in the Administration Building are the valuable documents of furthering our higher educational system. If it were not for their competent administering of the technical affairs of our school, U. of I. would be in chaos.

Office of Admissions & Records Admits 20,219

Charles W. Sanford, Dean of Admissions and Records, stands by the statistics on U. of I. residents from Illinois, proving a high percentage of the enrollment. Champaign County claims 2,368 students this year, with the Chicago and St. Louis areas running close behind.

This past fall the Champaign-Urbana Campus was busting out all over! Literally, anxious coeds were living in the study rooms of L.A.R. and some were even over in McKinley Hospital. This went on about the first month of school until a few of the not so anxious college prospects packed up and went home, leaving their rooms for those who were camping out. 20,219 was the highest enrollment yet to go through the bustling Admissions Office. Added with Chicago Professional College's 2,218, Chicago Undergrad's 4,067, and 3,778 students in Extramural Courses gives another all time high of 30,282 for the University of Illinois. Most of these students were Illinois citizens, but 877 were from foreign countries.

The Office of Admissions and Records is a spectacular place to see. It takes supreme planning and organization to keep twenty thousand transcripts and one hundred thousand class cards in their right place at the right time. IBM has certainly speeded up the old traditional hand filing system of not too long ago.

The Administration Building corridor looks familiar to everyone who has paid a bill, gotten special permits or dropped a course.

Illinois Alumni Are Still Active After Graduation

Gene Vance, standing, confers with members of the Alumni Association. He succeeded Mr. Bowen as an executive director.

As soon as graduation is over, we step into the ranks of an alumni, but we are not forgotten. The Alumni Association extends a free two-year membership into the Association. We are then part of the more than 19,500 due-paying alumni.

Our Alumni Association is one of the largest of its kind in the country and has, for 87 years, served alumni and students by attempting to build a better University. One of the principal functions of the Association is keeping accurate data on the 100,000 plus Illini scattered throughout the world.

In many cities over the country, there are Illini Clubs which are sponsored by the Association. The purpose of these clubs is to bring Illini together for fellowship and cooperation on projects of assistance to the University.

Scott Tyler, the editor of the "Alumni News," preforms the function of coordinating and compiling information about alumni and current University happenings into the Association's newspaper, the "Alumni News" which is issued eight times during the year.

University of Illinois Foundation Recruits Funds

Vitally interested in the general educational and research programs of the University of Illinois, is this active Foundation. It is a nonprofit corporation and acts as a money gatherer for the University. Two of its programs are the Illini Achievement Fund and the corporation's endowment fund.

The service that they provide gives great opportunities for men of research who need grants in order to carry out their talents. They not only aid graduate students but undergrads too. Each year the Foundation provides scholarships for students who prove themselves of excellent aptitude and need financial assistance in order to come to college.

Another one of the U. of I. Foundation's interests lies in the enrichment of library resources. They carry on a special program of collecting volumes to add to the University Library.

Many special projects go through their hands, including memorials for deceased members of the University staff.

Amos H. Watts from Chicago often makes a trip to Champaign-Urbana to officiate his job as president of the Foundation.

The Health Service in the familiar Health Center on Wright Street is under the auspices and direction of Dr. O. S. Walters.

Director Miodrag Muntyan is in charge of the University Press, which recently moved into its new location West Gregory Drive.

At one time or another, all of us will become acquainted with one or more of the departments on this page. If we feel sick, the Health Service will try to cure us. Although we may not come in direct contact with the Physical Plant, we are aware of its influences in clean floors and newly painted rooms.

Another service of the University is the University Press which prints many of the textbooks, lab manuals, pamphlets and bulletins we use. The Office of Public Information serves us by disseminating publicity concerning the University all over Illinois and the United States.

Our University Constantly Strives to Serve Us

Director S. Havens is the man of the minute every minute of the day, for he is the head of the University's Physical Plant.

All of the publicity for the University is channeled through the Office of Public Information under control of Director C. E. Flynn.

Gordon N. Ray, Vice President and Provost, took over the duties of President Henry during the latter's trip to India.

In charge of allocating all University funds is H. O. Farber, who holds the office of Vice President and Comptroller.

Heading the administrative staff of the University is President David Dodds Henry. President Henry, unlike past presidents, spends much of his time in an effort to obtain funds for the operation and expansion of our campus. During the past year, Henry spent two months in India to foster human relations and study conditions there. Working closely with Henry are the two vice presidents, Provost Ray and Comptroller Farber. Another of President Henry's duties is to meet periodically with the Board of Trustees, the group which approves all appointments and makes decisions concerning University policy.

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS

December 24, 1959

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT, URBANA

In interpreting University traditions, the 1960 ILLIO presents a theme which will remain interesting to readers through the years.

The traditions which first come to mind are those which are most readily identified, the colorful, contrasting and sometimes humorous aspects of college life - pep rallies, parades, and organized games are illustrative. Sheequon, Boneyard, Block I, Chief Illiniwek - to name a few - are memorable symbols.

There are other traditions at a university, however, which in many ways are even more accurately a reflection of the fabric of campus life and have deeper meaning.

In the following lines, Illini poet Mark Van Doren was speaking of America's myths, but the words also describe our greatest traditions:

"Gigantic on the path, they never speak.
Unwitnessed, they walked through every hour."

Traditions, like Mr. Van Doren's myths, are in the ways we think and feel and take things for granted; they are "our folkways, our habits of which we are unaware, the unacknowledged forms of our life as we live it".

At the University of Illinois there are the traditions of academic excellence, of great teachers, of intellectual discovery, of pride in state, region, and nation, of aspiration for the best in all aspects of life. There is the tradition of warm fellowship and human interest among students, faculty, community and alumni. A thousand activities and programs - from Union dances to Honors Day, from Student Senate discussions to Forum lectures - are also a part of the traditions of the University of Illinois.

The ILLIO itself is a wonderful tradition. To those who have had a part in the production of this volume, I give congratulations and thanks on behalf of the University.

To those who are reached by this ILLIO message, I give most cordial Illini greetings.

Sincerely,

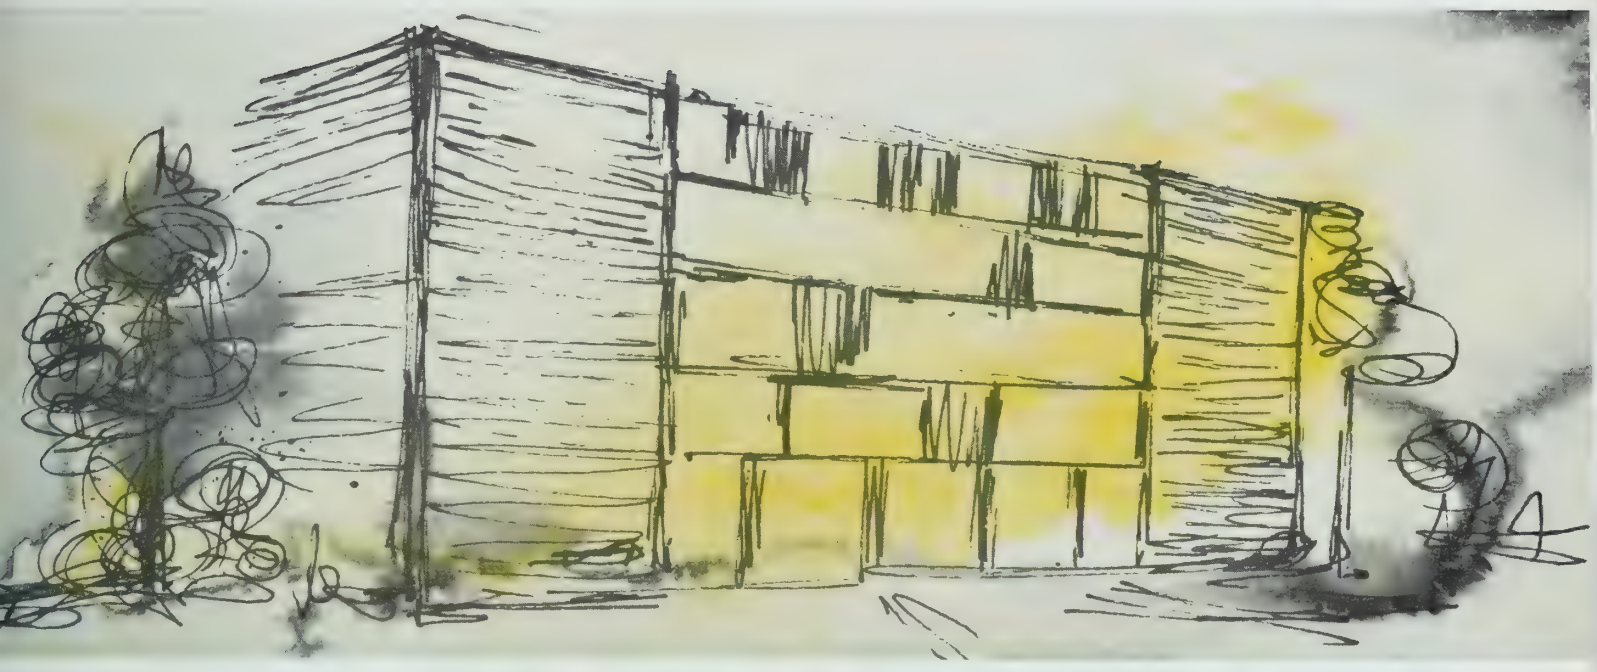

David D. Henry

President

They came. They saw. They conquered. That's what those Alpha Chi pledges did one fine spring evening last year. The event was the annual Alpha Chi Senior Banquet, which at Alpha Chi Omega is given by the pledge class for their "elders." The theme last year was a Roman one—therefore it seemed very natural that the plebes dress as slaves and wait on their guests. Yes, that banquet was quite a sight—and the crowning glory was the pledge who, with an apple in her mouth, was carried in on a platter by her fellow pledge sisters. At any rate, the event certainly set a tradition that'll be hard to live up to!

According to an ADPi song, no fun'll pass them by. The girls are beginning to wonder, however, if it's not OX, the Theta Chi mascot, that won't pass them by. He seems to enjoy following the ADPi's on shopping sprees and wandering into their dressing booths!

As if dogs aren't enough, the ADPi symbol is the lion; luckily the girls haven't gotten around to taking in one of the jungle cats for companionship!

As the swallows return to Capistrano, so the pigeons inevitably return to the ADPi house every year. It seems as if the Alpha Delta Pi's will soon be sponsoring a wildlife reservation!

Little Things Mean a Lot to the Girls of Alpha Epsilon Phi

Mascots are fun—but they can also be rather expensive to keep around, as it has been found. But the AEPhi's have found the answer, they have a stuffed toy as their unofficial mascot! This cute little puppy, a white dachshund, is signed annually by the class having the highest grade average at the time.

"Little Things Mean A Lot" they say, and the Korean orphan who was adopted by the AEPhi's undoubtedly finds this to be so. Not only does the child receive gifts and letters from the gals, but, thoughtful as they are, they are always trying to make his life happier. He might also be termed their mascot!

Secrets Provide Merriment for Alpha Gamma Delta Girls

And what's more collegiate than a hand of bridge?

LaVerne Young, president

"I've got a secret!" is a dangerous line around the Alpha Gam house—especially if the speaker is a pledge and the time is right before the annual fall pledge dance! The theme of the dance, which is always given by the pledges, is kept a secret from the actives, who nevertheless try to find out what it is. As soon as the older members think they've guessed the title, they band together and go parading through the house, singing an appropriate song and dressed as closely as possible to what the believe the theme is. At least, that's the way it happened this year!

Now, girls, you have to look at the camera!

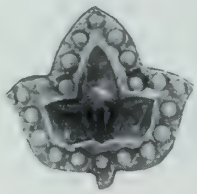

Clotilde Phelps, president

This year finds the AKA's in a new house, which was completely repainted and remodeled over the summer. This apparently gave the girls something to live up to, as every evening from ten till ten thirty all members of the house engage in a period of free—and strenuous—exercise to retain those curves! Those smart gals.

But the Alpha Kappa Alpha's have proved themselves even smarter regarding their pledge dance. Admission to the dance was either a can of food or a quarter which in turn was used to provide needy families with a good Thanksgiving meal.

Every house has its clods—but the AOPi's have a name for theirs! These girls, selected weekly by a purely biased vote, are known as "Fromps of the Week!" How does one qualify for this dubious honor? Merely follow the example of one AOPi who dropped a live ash in her hair, then placed the cigarette quite casually on her lap—and as the crowning blow, finally put the still lit object in a rather full wastepaper basket. Immediately after that, she was fined for breaking quiet hours as she screamed for help. And that, quote the AOPi's, is how one can easily become "Fromp of the Week."

Frances Fishel, president

The AOPi's spend a typical day in a typical way.

April showers may bring dainty little articles like May flowers to some people —but to the Alpha Phis, the onslaught of rain often brings nothing but trouble. It seems that, in some delicate, unexplainable way, the Alpha Phi buzzer system is connected to the basement. At any rate, when the lower world floods, the buzzers simply go berserk. Thus, on rainy nights, confusion reigns in the front hall—a nice system only if you've been dying to date your best friend's pinman.

The Alpha Phis celebrate Christmas with a Saturday afternoon tea dance—complete with a pinmanned Santa Claus!

The house that the Alpha Xi Delta's call home is one with an unusual and highly historical background. In the past, it was known as the Busey Mansion. And this many-gabled structure has another major distinction, for it was built entirely without nails.

Another house which holds much interest for the Alpha Xi Delta's is Hull House, which the Alpha Xi's have pledged to help this year.

On the less serious side, the Alpha Xi's each year take photographs of all unattached seniors for the house scrap book. There's just one reservation—each girl must be sucking a lemon!

When Yogi Says "Chi Omega", That's What He Means

The Omicron Owl is, supposedly, the Chi Omega symbol. However, the noble bird has, in the last year, received somewhat of a rival—in the form of a character called Yogi Bear. A stuffed representation of the critter sits on the Chi O TV set, it is rumored. And another rumor deals with the fact that the bear is really the "Chi O Man" in disguise! At any rate, the girls did use him to decorate the luscious Valentine that they sent to the Phi Gams!

While they don't support a national philanthropy, the Chi O's do maintain a Social Science Award, given yearly to someone outstanding in the field.

Many things keep the year amusing, including the "get even" activities—which always occupy some of the Tri Delts' time. Poor OX, the Theta Chi mascot, often plays the role of victim—but then, perhaps he enjoyed being painted red for Valentine's Day—at any rate, the Tri Delt's had fun.

Stairway to the Stars Graces the Delta Gamma House

When in doubt, the DG's know what to lead—trump!

Margery Hamilton, president

One of the most engaging features of the Delta Gamma house is its quite lovely spiral staircase, which runs from the first up to the third floor. Impressively lit, during rush, with candles held by the crooning DG's, this stairwell also has its attractions on Friday evenings throughout their year. At this time, the DG's gather around it, again, this time to sing sorority and fraternity songs. Thus, this architectural feature serves as a unifying factor, almost as much as does the mystical "Hannah, my Delta Gamma," the spirit of DG, who appears in many of their songs and skits.

"Water, Water, Everywhere!" Wails Delta Phi Epsilon

For many years the DPhiE's were able to brag that they had never been much bothered by floods. But last spring, immediately after buying new furniture for their recreation room, the girls were visited by their first flood—of tidal wave dimensions! Now the girls are somewhat meeker when they speak of floods—or else they knock on wood!

The Deefer's have found rather unusual ways of supporting their national philanthrophy (the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation). Each year the girls in the house pledge a donation; this is then earned by the girls themselves. Even the housemother helps with this!

Leigh Nathanson, president

Music, music, music: Johnny Mathis or Doris Day?

"She may be an Omega sweetheart, or the Dream Girl of Alpha Phi Alpha; she may wear the Kappa diamond or her love may a Sigma be—but if she wears the Delta diamond, her first love is Delta Sigma Theta!" And her second, no doubt, is singing; for their love of singing together is an outstanding characteristic of Delta Sigma Theta! The girls gather whenever they get a chance to croon sorority songs, popular tunes, spirituals, with even some classical numbers mixed in for spice! There's another popular pastime that the girls also enjoy doing together — and that's playing bridge, of course!

Theresa Leonard, president

Singing together is quite an enjoyable pastime.

The DZ's are certainly playing "Double or Nothing" when it comes to supporting a national philanthropy, for the sorority has not one charity, but two! For one thing, Delta Zeta supports a patient, Anne Civil, at Hansen's Disease Hospital, in Louisiana. The woman receives magazines, gifts, and stamps, as well as a weekly letter from the girls of Delta Zeta. Another organization receiving help is Gallaudet College, a school for the deaf, located in Washington, D. C.

Pastels have played a big part in DZ redecorations. The living room is now pink; the solarium, lavender.

Gamma Phi Beta's Moon Over Their Uncooperative Clock

Yes, there are times, declare all the Gamma Phi's, when they'd like to send their grandfather clock to the moon! This wish is usually the result of the clock's weekly breakdown (did anyone ever wonder why few Gummy Pho's are ever punctual?) or of the fact that the clock is again ten minutes fast -- no pleasant thing when the house closes by the same clock!

The Gamma Phi's use the moon for more than puns, for the crescent moon in their symbol. It serves as the theme for such things as a heavenly rush skit, in which all the GPhiB's appear as cherubs or angels. Hmm!

The Year is Happy and Colorful for Iota Alpha Pi

"Hey, come here—look at this picture we found!"

Reva Stone, president

Colors play a big role in the daily lives of the Iota Alpha Pis. To give a good example, the girls pay honor to the red rose as their national flower. Every year on Founders Day, the Iotas carry a rose all day. To fulfill the scheme further, the annual Red Rose formal, Iota Alpha Pi's spring dance, was highlighted by fresh rose decorations (and they were red—natch!)

Again, colors have been important in house redecorating, as, in September, the entire first floor was redecorated in blue and green shades, with black and white accents. The garden effect is an appropriate setting for roses!

Between classes several Thetas gather for cokes.

Molly Moore, president

If you're a U. of I. Theta, not a member of Mortar Board or of Shorter Board, and have committed some embarrassing social blunder in your past, you may be eligible for Springboard. The first step in gaining admittance into this organization, designed as a consolation for Thetas not tapped for other service honoraries, is to dash off a petition listing your qualifications. You'll receive an official Springboard sweatshirt for your work!

The seniors have a small wooden bug named Beatrice, who is annually bug-napped by the juniors—not only great sport, but also a great tradition!

"There is no girl like a Kappa Delta girl" goes the old song, and many campus males will attest to this truth. As a matter of fact, the fellows got a chance to do just that, when they were dinner guests of the Kappa Delta pledges. The event, sponsored by the plebes, was entitled "The Shaft Dinner" and was supposedly given to honor the active chapter. Of course, the guests couldn't be just anyone. So, in keeping with the theme, only old pinmen, ex-boyfriends and fiancés of the actives were invited—certainly a novel enough idea, but one which sounds just a little uncomfortable to outsiders!

Inter-sorority pranks certainly are not new to the Kappas, who once found their bathroom blessed with the pressence of Charlie, a traveling window dummy from some local store. Suspicion pointed heavily toward the Thetas as the instigators of the whole plot.

On the more serious side, the Kappas support the Kappa Kappa Gamma Student Loan Fund, giving financial assistance to any college woman under thirty years of age who has completed two full years of her college work. At least one year of her schooling must have taken place in an institution where a chapter of Kappa Kappa Gamma is located.

Yes, they're certainly cards at the Phi Mu house!

Carol Leonard, president

Sing a Song of the South—and that's just what the Phi Mu's do as they all blend voices in their favorite tune. This song, called "Picture a Girl," presents the ideal Phi Mu: a girl of rare beauty, dressed in rose and white and standing in the candlelight. And if this picture has a Southern belle tinge to it, there's a reason! With Georgia as the state in which they were founded, the Phi Mu's take on a Southern theme quite naturally. For instance, their annual Spring formal is known as Magnolia Ball. Furthermore, a painting of a plantation was just hung in the Phi Mu's dining room!

Odd Remembrances Make Up Phi Sigma Sigma Memories

When the girls of Phi Sigma Sigma sing, "Through the years there'll always be memories of our sorority" you can bet that they have something definite in mind! For instance, there are those quaint little green stools that belong to the pledges, and which are so useful to them . . . and who could forget the den, which is so popular a place that the girls even have to sign up to reserve it! Other more serious memories might deal with the faculty dinner, to which each girl invites an instructor . . . or with the various ways the girls have worked to make money with which to help rheumatic children.

Pi Beta Phi Arrow Aims Toward Helping Unfortunate

Pi Phi smiles and Pi Phi tunes liven up the day.

Nancy Wilson, president

A Pi Phi may be an angel in disguise but there is nothing disguised about Pi Phi's national philanthropy. This involves the able administration of a settlement school in Gatlinburg, Tennessee. During the year, the alumnae and chapter members held a sale with the merchandise, including handwoven linens, pottery, woodwares and jewelry (any golden arrows?), all made at the Pi Phi settlement school.

The Pi Phi's seem to enjoy giving out honors (perhaps they realize the value of praise) for among the awards given within the house is that to the senior who has contributed most to the house.

The Sigma Delta Tau's Proclaim Loyalty to the University

The gay and jovial SDT's gather around the piano.

Ida Bartelstein, president

Be loyal—be an SDT! This is indeed a strange slogan—what lies behind it? Well, it seems that after every Saturday dinner, the girls have their traditional Song Fest. The event begins with the singing of the Illinois song of loyalty, accompanied by the rhythm of tramping feet, as the girls march from the dining room. Other special songs follow in the living room after the formation of a friendship circle.

The SDT's mascot, George, is a very well traveled fellow. Among trips, he even spent a weekend at Purdue as the guest of a fraternity there. By the way, "George" is a small white statue!

Seniors Rate High in Importance with Sigma Kappa Girls

There are several sororities on campus who have the tradition of senior will and prophecy, but few make such a fuss over their seniors as do the Sigma Kappa's. These girls dedicate the entire last week of school to their retiring members. During Senior Week, the seniors eat meals at a seperate table, so as not to be contaminated by their underclass sisters; furthermore, these older girls can request various skits from other Sigma Kappas.

All on campus are raving about the way the Sigma Kappa house has been redecorated. The basic colors are aqua, white and gold—very elegant, indeed!

Joan Edmonds, president

The Sigma Kappa's can tie up the phones for hours!

If House Beautiful is looking for a house to feature, the Tri Sigs would undoubtedly offer up theirs. It seems that the girls have put a lot of work into getting their house ready for the school year, especially as they were moving into a new house! During the summer, several Tri Sigs came down to spend several weekends scrubbing the floors and just cleaning up. With help from outside—the fathers painted the downstairs—plus a little time before school started spent finishing painting—the house opened in September in quite fine style—and just in time to house a "Shipwreck" of a pledge dance!

Karen Yeager, president

Formal and informal meetings dominate our lives.

Elizabeth Martin, president

"Where did you transfer from?" "To what sorority do you belong?" These questions were the most popular ones around Sycamore Hall last September, as 39 girls representing schools all over the country, as well as a few national sororities, moved in together to form the second Panhellenic transfer dorm on campus. Whether the attraction was the fast social pace, a boy friend, closeness to home, or the wide variety of educational opportuities, these girls came from as far west as the U. of Colorado and as far east as City College of New York to become a part of the Orange and Blue.

Theta Upsilon Year Greatly Influenced by French Customs

Though the Theta Us themselves probably don't realize it, the sorority is really pretty indebted to French customs and the like. For instance, for their official flower the Theta Us have selected the emblem of France herself—the fleur-de-lis, which is even found on the Theta Upsilon pledge pin. Moreover, the Illinois chapter models their spring dance on a Mardi Gras theme, complete with excitement, gayety, and colorful costumes! This alone is enough to make any guy sing "Your Theta U girl, she's the only one for you; she will stand by you in all that you do!" And they do sing it!

Kitchen Facilities Offer Advantages to Walnut Hall

re "Remember when . . .?" rules the day at Walnut.

Susan Thomas, president

The members of Walnut Hall, the Panhellenic sorority transfer dormitory, have found that, mealwise, they have quite a few advantages! For instance, they can eat at their sorority houses, or they can serve steak dinners within the boundaries of Walnut. The whyfore? Simply because the apartments available each provide not only living room, bedroom and bath for four, but each also has its own kitchen!

Because Walnut Hall doesn't have a central dining room for all its residents, buffet luncheons, prepared by the girls, are often served, instead, in the lounge—for special events.

Mischief Runs Rampant Among Those Zeta Tau Alpha's

The ZTA's certainly have had their moments of fun. For instance, one Friday one of the girls came home to find about twenty parasols hung all over her room. Another time brought the discovery of an inter-house zoo –someone, taking all the stuffed animals in the house, distributed them about the entrance hall. Among the conspirators was the ZTA housemother!

Zeta Tau Alpha has found numerous ways to support the Cerebral Palsy Foundation. Informative films and booklets on the affliction, coupled with hospital equipment, are several of the articles paid for by the Z.T.A.

The Girls at Philea Find Time to Engage in Pranks

What are they watching? It could be television!

Anne Price, president

Although almost every girl at Philea has a part time job, this doesn't put the damper on full time prank pulling, for which the girls always have time! For example, a "Room for Rent" sign in a window in the vicinity of the rear of the house actually brought two unsuspecting male applicants to inquire about renting a room there! As to how the sign got there—that's a mystery!

But there's surely no mystery about the affair that the girls at Philea have tagged "Suppressed Desire Night." At this time, the girls go to dinner dressed as their deepest desire; and, in general, almost "anything goes"!

Dog Wrecks Tranquil Life of Allen Residence Hall, North

By now, it's pretty easy to see that the Theta Chi's Saint Bernard, OX, is quite often the unwilling villain or unknowing hero of some hilarious episode. Well, at Allen North, he's done it again! One evening the dog wandered casually into the bottom floor restroom, and absolutely refused to move!

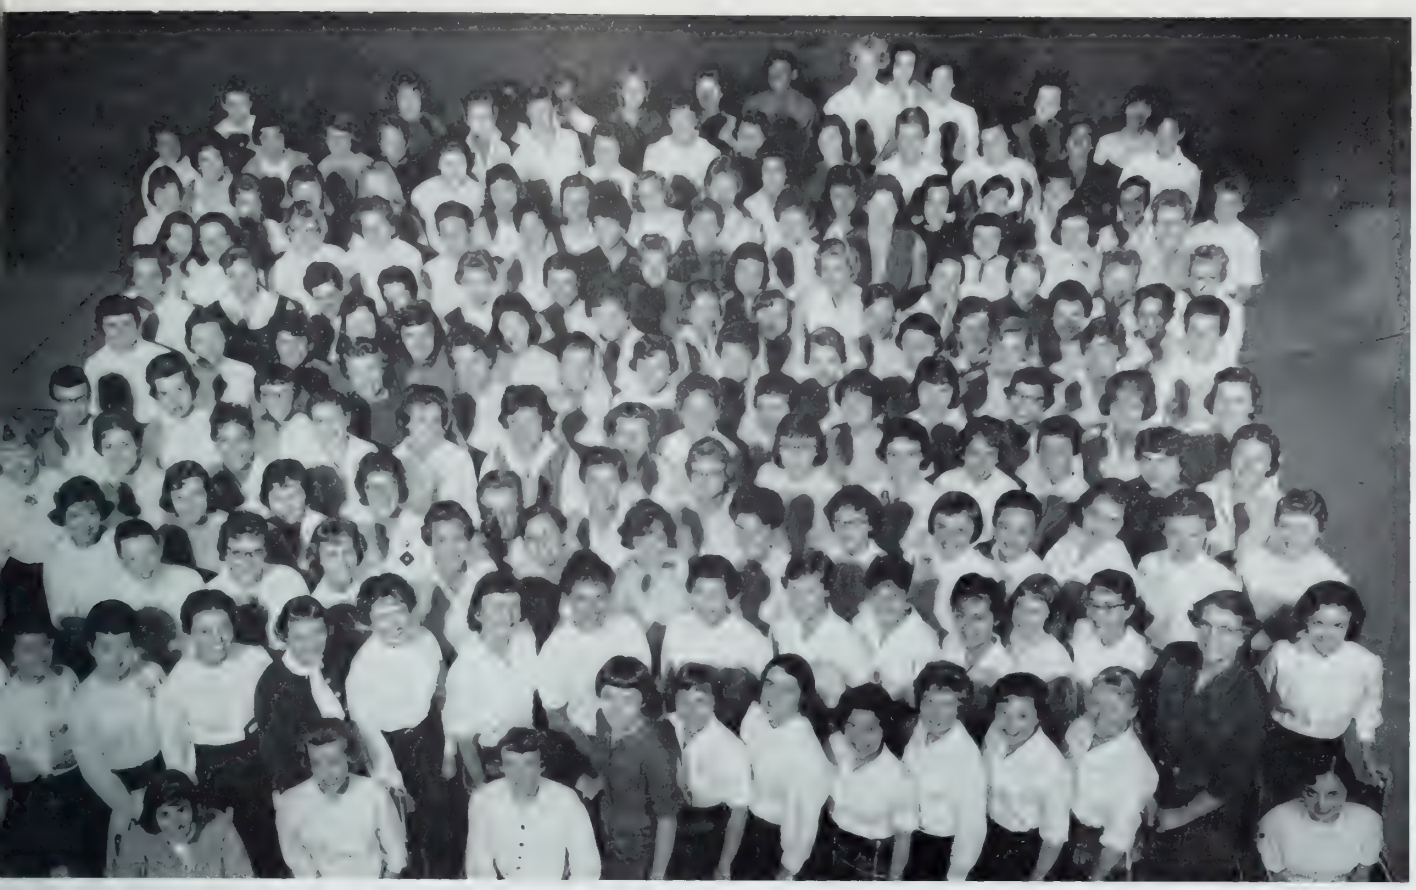

The girls at Allen North are really working hard to improve their grades. This year they started a study seminar in the dining room; this runs for two hours, during which there is a short break. Moreover, it is very quiet at this time—and no one is obligated to attend. They hope this will work well!

The Machine Age Comes To Allen Residence Hall, South

Round table discussions can solve many problems.

Shirley Kroencke, president

Modern appliances have made their mark at Allen Residence Hall, South. The first in a long line of equipment was a goal post, which was placed on the pavilion next to the front door last year during the water fight. Now an electric door has been installed; this article has caused a little bit of trouble, because the people using it always expect it to open inward, which it doesn't do. Ever been slapped by a door? But even that can't beat the redecorating that is always being done for the Board of Trustees Dinner, which is held in the spring. The decorating takes all fall.

Busey Hall Stages Never To Be Forgotton Spectaculars

Nevada Street is the setting for Busey Hall, a splendid example of Georgian architecture.

One night never to be forgotten was the night that Lucy Busey died, according to the popular campus song. But there are other nights never to be forgotten concerning L.B.'s namesake, the celebrated Busey Hall. One such evening fell on the night of President Henry's speech to the incoming freshmen, during Freshmen Week. At that time, a truly Mike Todd Spectatular was staged; 200 girls were fixed up for the event!

Busey Hall prides itself on being a friendly group. Not only do the girls sing on the way to dinner, but also engage in fun filled pajama parties complete with costumes and games.

Pajama Parties Are Another Part of Life at Busey Hall

One pajama party that provided fun especially was that held during Mom's Day. The girls put on skits, after which they picked the mother-daughter look-alikes—and it's often hard, they say, to tell which one is the mother!

With the Christmas season comes a party of a more serious nature. Going under the heading of a "Taking Down The Tree" party, the occasion also features readings from the Bible about the Christmas story and about Hanakkah. Continuing in the same vein, the party ended with the singing of Christmas carols and the dancing of the hora—a way of bettering interfaith relations.

Mix Ups Bring Lots of Laughs to Girls of Evans Residence Hall

They're leaving a gift for posterity—their voices!

Myrna Siegel, president

Sometimes the girls at Evans Hall are a little mixed up. Take April Fool's Day, for instance. Dinner time displayed a scene of utter havoc — tables set wrong, sugar and salt reversed, and a multitude of other things obviously not in their right order!

But the crazy antics certainly don't end—or begin—with a special day; no, they go on all year. Included on the agenda are after-hour exercises held in the halls, snowball fights with the waiters —and an annual waterfight between the members of third floor only! But, though the girls at Evans may be a little mixed up, they have fun!

Evans Also Indulges in Activities of a Much More Serious Nature

Glancing briefly over the score, it seems that there are a lot of little things that the girls who have lived at Evans this year will always recall: coffee hours and open houses after the football games (whether we won, lost, or whatever); that Christmas party for needy children in which Evans supplied its own Santa and clowns; caroling at Christmas, even though a lack of snow dampered the holidays spirit somewhat; the newly initiated scholarship award dinner; Mom's Day Weekend, with its fabulous brunch, pajama party and big dinner; faculty dinners—my, this was certainly a busy year for Evans Hall!

The pillared next door neighbor of Busey is the impressive, stately Evans Hall.

Surprises Abound at Lincoln Avenue Residence, North

Fate seems to have marked LAR North as the stage for some mighty strange happenings this year. A good example revolved around the surprise received by the residents when a future scientist lost control of a chemical experiment going on in the basement. No doubt dreams turned quickly into night-mares as a rather conspicuous smell steeled down over LAR that night!

Miss Connell, a head resident with a sense of humor, also received somewhat of a surprise when, on her birthday, she found that her bed had been rather mysteriously shortsheeted. To the guilty ones, she sent her thanks!

Originality Prevails at Lincoln Avenue Residence Hall, South

Pert and pretty are these ladies from LAR South.

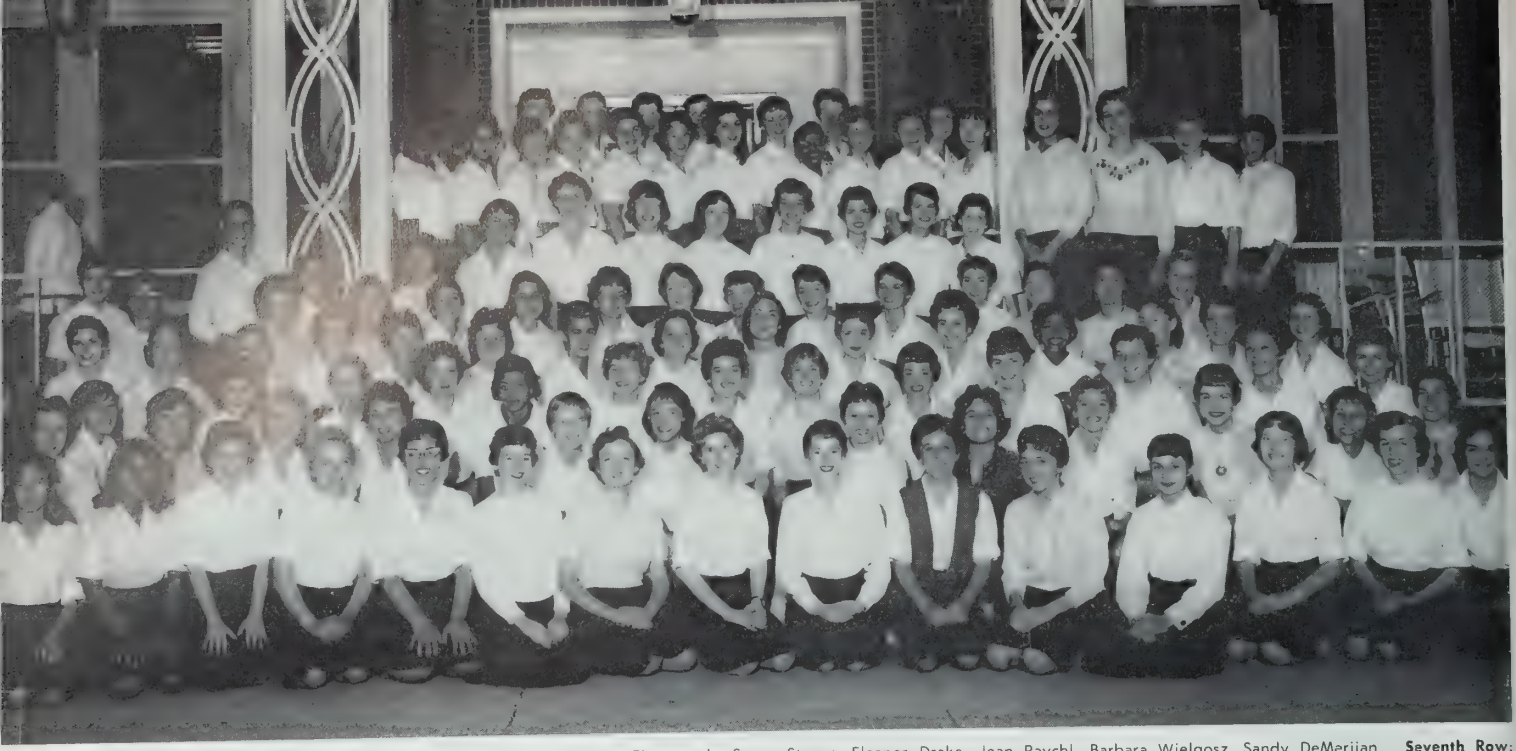

Margot Wien, president

At Lincoln Avenue Residence, South, the girls must work overtime thinking up original titles for house events. Some of their dances are: Candy Cane Cotillion, Crewcut Capers, and Capers in Confetti. The C's predominate!

Just to prove how friendly they are, the girls at LAR held an "at home" in November, to which the deans and several men's houses were invited. Along the same order, LAR can offer biweekly cocoa hours (especially nice during all those cold winter evenings) and monthly birthday dinners. These events indeed help to make the large dormitory "a home away from home" to its inhabitants.

Let it never be said that the girls at 4-H House aren't avid fans of U.I. football. One Saturday morning, as a matter of fact, found the girls so excited over the impending game that a few careless mistakes were made—and a pressure pan full of potatoes exploded as a result. That afternoon one poor freshman girl listened to the game on the radio; at the same time, she scraped potato remains from the battle scarred ceiling!

Even if the damage had been permanent, the girls wouldn't have been too upset, as future plans include a new house for the girls at 4-H House.

"Aw, come on, now—just a hand before luncheon!"

Judith Gelman, president

Turn about is fair play with Indeco House during International Week! The gals didn't have to search far for foreign students to invite for dinner as their waiters just happened to fill the bill! In lieu of masculine waiters, who were then guests, the girls themselves served as the waiters, to the tune of much fun and folly.

Indeco managed to carry out further an international good will policy, as they sponsored and helped support a Belgian foster child, Andre. The boy also received much mail from Indeco girls. Another international charity that received Indeco aid was CARE.

"Something Old, Something New" Chants Laurel House

In one of their songs, the girls at Laurel House praise the residence for bringing them together and cementing long lasting friendships. Moreover, following the same theme, one of the best known symbols of Laurel House is the Laurel wreath engraved upon their front door. As any student of antiquity can tell you, the laurel is the symbol of friendship and cooperation.

Luckily for the members of the residence, tile floors were recently put in on the second and third floors—a deed greatly appreciated by the girls in the house; they're hoping this'll mean the end of hardwood splinters!

Steaks and Seaweed Decorate Events of Leeman Lodge

It's so nice to have a pianist around the house!

Mary Keyes, president

Anyone will tell you that college is definitely getting harder, which means that a little more effort and encouragement are needed to promote higher scholarship. The girls over at Leeman Lodge think they've found the answer: a Steak and Beans Dinner with a new twist. This time both the Steak-eating Snobs and the Bean-eating Bums dressed to befit their scholastic achievement. How does an "A" look?

Leeman Lodge girls proved that they certainly weren't "all wet" when it came to giving "Underwater Fantasy," their annual spring formal, which included a lifelike sunken treasure!

The time? Many years from now. An old McKinley Hall resident, overhearing the word "college" begins to reminisce. Just what is it that she recalls about her McKinley Hall days? Two to one, she remembers those snowball fights with the waiters; those popcorn parties late at night to keep all the girls going during study sessions; that great demand for peanut butter for every meal . . . or maybe she thinks of the cluster of girls watching Wright Street parades (Sheequon, perhaps) from the third floor screened in porch. Then, there was the twisted house emblem . . . Memories, memories!

Six smiling sweeties—and all living at Palamar.

Evelyn Brown, president

"High upon a hilltop," the opening line of one of the more favored songs of the girls living at Palamar, might stir up a bit of curiosity as to just what is up on that hilltop! Could it be Palamar itself? To get an answer, one had best contact Palamar.

Palamar events this year are listed somewhat differently from those events of many other organizations. To give an example, here is one part of their busy social calendar: "Stole Granada Club's crest, returning it later with special ceremonies; set up diet table for those with will-power . . ." and so on, for this was merely a sampling!

Presbyterian Hall Celebrates the Year in Various Ways

Presby Hall has been known as just that for so long that it is often a shock to hear it called Presbyterian Hall. However, few outsiders probably know the residence's real name, which is Lyvia Ball Memorial Presbyterian House for Women. This house was left as a memorial to three Ball sisters.

A Christmas tradition is to present each other not only with gifts, but with poetic tributes to one another—these can often be quite hilarious!

Each spring the Grace Welsh award is presented to one of the more outstanding seniors. The award is based on the girl's contribution to the house.

Sherwood Lodge Finds Itself Tagged With New Name

—and at Sherwood, they're whistling right back!

Nancy Lanier, president

With a name like Sherwood Lodge, it really isn't surprising that the residents should receive a lot of strange phone calls asking for Robin Hood and Little John. But new fame—and a new name—this year came to the residence. It seems that, during fraternity rush, the Sigma Chi house was in somewhat of an uproar, due to the redecorating being done there. Therefore, Sherwood was used by the Sig's for rushing purposes. Since then, many jokes have arisen as to Sherwood being the Sigma Chi Annex!

Along with giving a Christmas party for local orphans, Sherwood also gives a faculty tea, at about the same time.

While other residences might have received the benefit of a more glamourous scheme of decoration, none could beat, in humor, the decorative addition that recently graced the front of Stratford House—a sign advising the students to order their telephone service there! Amusing? It surely was!

All roads led to Rome when it came time for Stratford's quite unusual banquet entitled, "Ides of March." And who presided? Julius Caesar, naturally, surrounded by the girls dining on mattresses and sipping grape juice out of trophies. Toga-togged jesters helped provide the entertainment.

Barbara Kumler, president

"Togetherness" might be the key word to describe Wescoga, where the members sing, "We will endeavor to strive for God's kingdom on earth and in so doing prove Wescoga's worth." Here, working together, whether that means cooking, cleaning, or what all, seems to be the vehicle for much enjoyment. The secret spice behind it all can be found in this phrase: "co-operating on all matters of our own free will." This attitude has certainly paid off, not only scholastically, but also in the smooth operation of extra-curricular events, such as the tea the Wescoga residents give for their sponsors.

Men of Acacia Trade One Old Tradition in on Another

While the Hatfields and the McCoys may never have settled their arguements, at least the Acacias and AKL's have managed to make up their differences. This event not only ended the imaginary feud between the two, but also put an end to their traditional feud dance. However, the Acacias are not weeping, for now they can present "Night on the Nile" instead. Not only is this dance traditional to all chapters of Acacia, but it also serves as a reminder of their Masonic founders.

Another Acacia tradition is to shower all new pinmen — and since there've been a lot, the pledges have been busy!

Men of Alpha Chi Rho Often Retreat to Prehistoric Times

East Side, West Side—but Front Side's the best!

Charles Mullett, president

The men of Alpha Chi Rho must be rough and tough. Why else would they choose a caveman theme for their pledge dance? Officially known as Caveman Drag, the dance presented the Crows in very ancient attire—like animal skins, even! (Could this be the answer to the Ivy League Look?) Then, of course, the house followed the theme by suddenly becoming a fairly authentic cave. That happy hollow was entered through a long tunnel, both dark and dangerous, which ran through the basement. To complete the regression, all present consumed the meal in true caveman tradition!

With some outside aid, the Alpha Delt's sing out.

John Kibler, president

The pledge dance, "The Last Straw," complete with straw and house mascot, "Rughead," for that true barnyard effect, started off the social year.

A Christmas tree decorating party erected a 28 foot tree to add its cheer to the Christmas Formal Dinner-Dance, proceeded by the Alpha Delt-Pi Phi party for underprivileged children of the Champaign-Urbana Community.

The nationally traditional Dads Day was founded by Illinois Alpha Delts, and has special meaning at the house.

If there's any truth in the saying, "Like father, like son," then one can certainly expect a lot of laughs from the AEPis—who will only be living up to a tradition set by their dads! It all started, it seems, on Dad's Day this year, when the older men put on, for the benefit of their AEPi sons, a frolicking, rolicking satire of television cowboy programs. The audience was so busy rolling in the aisle with laughter and demanding an encore that they almost missed the example set!

Humor and Splendor Mark Alpha Gamma Rho's Spring

While sorority senior banquets are usually tearful, fraternities seem to enjoy leaning in the other direction. A good example is the AGR's springtime banquet. At this time, their graduating seniors, in wild attire, proceded to give away the many trinkets they'd accumulated at school.

But the ridiculous quickly changes to the sublime when the AGR house becomes decked with thousands of roses. The occasion is their annual spring dance, the "Pink Rose Formal." Again this year the vision of "rosey" loveliness became a reality as the campus again received a beautiful event.

Alpha Kappa Lambda Finds Self Steeped in Local Tradition

The AKL's take care of those trophies they've won!

Richard Schwarzlose, president

The AKL's have some pretty unusual traditions. For instance, the sweetheart song of the fraternity was written by an honorary alum—Lloyd Morey, President Emeritus of the University.

Another tradition dealing directly with AKL involves their cook, who is their pingirl — pinned to the entire house! She wears her pin constantly.

The Alpha Kappa Lambda's have set aside a part of their house as "sacred territory." Called Happy Hollow, the section of the house claims a certain amount of sovereignity. Not only are partitions often used, but this part even has its own social exchanges!

The Alpha Rho Chis Do Not Build Their Houses on Sand

Yep; paddles, they get paddles at Alpha Rho Chi!

Richard Diedrich, president

A unique APX tradition is that every semester the pledge class throws the graduating seniors into a mudhole located in back of their house. Now, this is especially ironic, as Alpha Rho Chi is basically an architectural fraternity—and what nice, modern bit of architecture has something as trite and old fashioned as a mudhole around?

Also, on the realm of the unique is the art show which is held each year in the Alpha Rho Chi house. This is how the fellows show that they lived up to their oath to build anything—from temples to cans. However, their mudhole isn't part of the exhibition.

Strange Acquisitions Characterize Alpha Sigma Phi's

The Alpha Sig's have managed to pick up some strange things around campus. For a short time this year they were the proud possessors of the front and back doors of Sigma Sigma Sigma. But detectives in search of these fixtures would've had a hard time quizzing the Alpha Sig's, who have acquired a novel language all their own. They call it duck talk, and it usually revolves around rather confusing antonyms.

Reverting to the more sophisticated neutrals for their Black and White Formal, the Alpha Sig's wore black tuxes, while their dates, in white, also matched the dance decorations.

Roger Jones, president

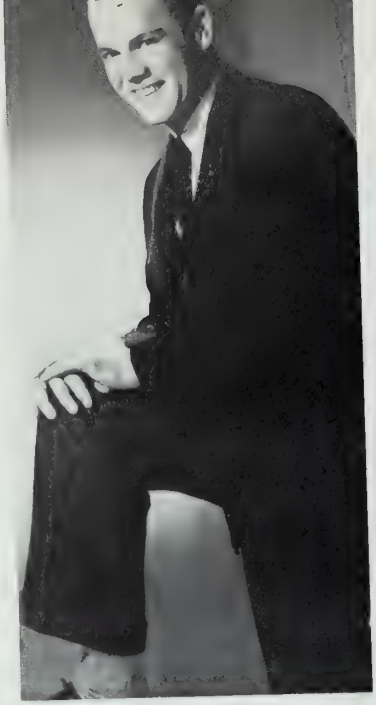

'Sometimes it's hard to convince people I'm right!"

Besides he fact that they enlarged their house by some eighteen rooms and several floors, the ATO's, during the year, also acquired another new addition—a house mother. Because of the fact that their recent construction included (besides an indoor barbeque pit) ample quarters for their new housemother, she fits in just fine!

Nothing amusing ever happens at ATO—at least they won't tell about it, which makes it hard to write anything about them. Their hall clock works perfectly, and they don't even snowball each other, just sororities. What a year for those "hairy chested men!"

When fellow officers meet, anything can happen!

Thomas Hecht, president

The men of Beta Sigma Psi have found the worth of their kitchen help. For one thing, the fraternity has, as its employee, a cook with a quite developed sense of humor. This characteristic came to light one April Fool's Day, as a cotton ball was placed in the center of each homemade roll for dinner.

The Beta Sig's also have found that their waiters are unusually talented. One night at dinner, after a series of clownish antics on both sides, a song was sung by the waiters for their employers. The Beta Sig's enjoyed the entertainment so much that now the waiters sing about once a week for them.

Smart, smooth and sophisticated are these Betas.

Jerry Manion, president

The Betas received the benefit of a redecoration spree this year, for the entire interior of their house was done over. On the outside the familiar Beta pillars received a new coat of white paint —and numerous attempts have been made to alter their appearance since that time, it is rumored.

Another object of many pranks is a large oriental gong which the Betas, between pep rallies, guard with their lives. It seems that the gong has a habit of wandering—to other fraternity houses. Now the relic is safely cached in the house mother's quarters! (Apparently Mrs. B. is to be feared!)

The day that the rains came was a rather disastrous day indeed for the Chi Phi housemother. At that time, she had to be rescued from her basement apartment, where the water level had risen to more than twelve inches!

A quite progressive pledge system is the pride of the Chi Phi's; according to their system, actives and pledges share house duties. But rowdy times prevail on other occasions, none-the-less, and a newly pinned brother is still apt to find himself receiving a mudbath. This latter deed might someday prove a tragedy, as a new living room rug was just installed!

It's a fact: Chi Psi was the first fraternity in the world to have a fraternity house. (Actually, the building was an unused hunting lodge situated in Ann Arbor, Michigan.) The acquiring of the building was quite a revolutionary step—especially since fraternity houses were illegal at that time! By the way, apparently in memory of that first building, Chi Psi's always call their fraternity house a "lodge."

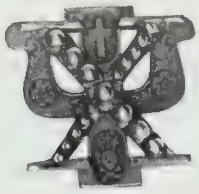

At the end of last year, the Chi Psi's gave what they had thought would be a very impressive Founder's Dinner. It was impressive, alright. It seems as if the kitchen caught on fire that night!

The key to modern living: controlled casualness.

Walter Schramm, president

"To each his own" is apparently the feeling that prevails in the Delta Chi house. At any rate, each senior roommate receives ten dollars at the beginning of the year to paint his room as he sees fit. Also, he is free to make other improvements to the room.

The Delta Chi's and dates really go hobo for their Warehouse Dance. The decorations, naturally, revolve about advertisements, posters, billboards.

Spring is an ideal time for charity the Delta Chi's feel—especially when their "good deeds" evolve around a Boy Scout troop which they sponsor. Hikes in the spring are part of the agenda.

Life Is Merely One Big Blast to the Delta Kappa Epsilons

One of the "band of brothers in DKE" one day got the bright idea of trying to startle the other DKE's by throwing an envelope full of explosives into a house fireplace. Unfortunately, this stuff was more powerful than he anticipated. The envelope detonated just as he neared the fire, and the blast nearly blew the culprit through the wall, as well as depositing the soot from the chimney all over the room. Everyone got a hearty laugh (it says here) over the whole affair. Luckily, no one was too seriously injured! (Is it any wonder, then, that their mascot ia a neurotic boxer?)

For Something New and Better, Contact the Delta Phi's

A Delta Phi plunks "The Old Piano Roll Blues."

Jerry Stelle, president

In search of something new to do—that's Delta Phi. And they certainly have found new horizons! For example, how many fraternities have "dorm exchanges?" On the night of the event, the Delta Phi's put on their pajamas, grabbed some pillows, and marched on the sorority. Once there, the members rushed into the living room to the lively tune of their dorm song!

Schizophrenics had a hey day at one of the Delta Phi "at homes" this year. The do-it-yourself type entertainment included a finger painting fest; the colorful results were then analyzed by one of the house psychology students!

Delta Sigma Phi Indicates Interests in Egypt and Music

William Burke, president

The fact that their national symbol is the Sphinx must have influenced the Delta Sigs somewhat. For instance, the boys certainly went Egyptian when it came to choosing and naming a mascot. The pet? An alligator (stuffed, that is) and appropriately named Pharaoh.

Let it never be said that Delta Sigma Phi is not a musical house. For, among the crew that make their home there are two drummers—who are apparently so inspired by their evening meal that they engage in drum duels almost every night, right after dinner. However, they don't have much accompaniment—the piano is broken.

Delta Tau Delta Hosts and Wins Own Basketball Tourney

Perhaps the biggest event on Delta Tau Delta's sports calendar this year was the Delta Tau Delta Invitational Basketball Tournament. Held in December, this year's tourney was the first in what promises to become an annual series. In all, fifteen fraternities competed for the Beer Keg Trophy, but the Delts, playing the role not only of "host" but of "victor," still managed to walk off with their own prize.

A new mascot graces the Delt house this year—Pharoah, a Boxer puppy, who is being groomed, boast the Delts, to take on Theta Chi's "OX." The battle has not occurred yet—officially.

Bridge would be fun except that it's too legal!

Robert Young, president

Busy, busy, busy boys are those mischievous DU's. Although, it isn't fair to blame them for all the pranks that they have been accused of playing, is it? Especially when one takes into consideration the fact that the DU's live midway between two arch (though friendly) foes, the Tekes and the Sig Pis. Egg throwing contests—from one dorm to the other—have proved a favorite recreation in the past. However, with the advent of winter—and with a little snow—a new weapon was discovered. A somewhat exaggerated report had the DU's losing twenty-two windows in one day—a record, if it's true!

They're right, too, about the happy-go-lucky spirit that prevails among members of the fraternity; this attitude is helped along by the casual, informal atmosphere of their house. Also adding greatly to the spirit is what is commonly recognized as probably the largest Great Dane on campus, Caesar. He has developed the habit of following his masters to class. Lambda Chi Alphas Prove That There Is A Marlboro Man mand performance—a jazz ensemble swings out.

Jimmie Keller, president

This has been an exciting year for the Lambda Chis. They started saving their Marlboro wrappers early and, by gosh, they won that fancy new stereo. (cough, cough!) Another type of victory came about in Stunt Show, thanks to Casper and his Ghostnik friends.

An annual Lambda Chi event is their yearly pledge-active football game — which almost always turns out to be a victory for the actives. Senior refs will do it everytime, they all say!

No one'll deny that the Lambda Chis are a musical house. Besides a quite well known quartet, they also sponsor a jazz group, along with Sigma Nu.

The Phi Delt's have been excelling at athletics for so long that it is strange to think of them in any other capacity. Still, come their annual Community Service Day and those Phi Delt's all pitch in to serve any community organization requesting aid. Successful? Their national headquarters apparently thinks so, as they presented the Illinois chapter with their national Community Service Award.

When the campus lovelies begin to sport all blue outfits and cardboard pins, you can bet that there is one more annual Phi Delt contribution in the offing: the She-Delt weekend.

Arthur Serck, president

Sometimes girls just don't appreciate anything you do for them. That's the sentiment of the Phi Ep's, especially after the experience of giving a "sleep-in formal." Because the guys would be moving out of the house for the night leaving their dates in control, the Phi Ep's decided to really give the old hut a thorough cleaning. And what happened? The girls became jealous because the PEP house looked so much better than their own did!

Actually, the Phi Ep house is unusual for more than its cleanliness—it seems that the house was actually (and unintentionally) built backwards!

Things just aren't the same around the Phi Psi house these days. There's a big vacancy in the hearts (and the Fourth Street parking lot) of the Phi Psi's. This spot was once filled by a large grey hearse, the private toy of the rather morbidly minded sophomore class, who had actually used the auto for parties and dates—up until Thanksgiving vacation, that is. For at that time, two of the more adventurous members decided to take the vehicle home with them. However, engine trouble soon set in. The hearse now reposes in isolated splendor in a cow pasture somewhere between here and St. Louis.

Skull and Bones Prevail at Phi Kappa Sigma Dance

One of the major events on the Skull social calendar during the year was the "Skull Dance," an informal affair held at the chapter house. The dance centered around a haunted house theme as decorations such as a maze of tunnels in the basement and wierd drawings on the walls added to the quite sinister atmosphere already pretty prevalent.

The pledges of Phi Kappa Sigma tried their hand at carpentry this semester by constructing a powder room in their basement. The pledges did most of the actual work in their spare time, but actives pitched in with technical aid and construction materials.

Phi Kappa Tau's Gravely Salute the Army With Song

The Phi Taus display their rather unusual talents.

Thomas Rowley, president

The U. S. Army Cadets, on campus for the Illinois-Army football game, must have thought that the navy had beaten them here, heaven forbid! For, as the cadets marched by the Phi Tau house, the guys in grey were stereophonically heralded by the strains of "Anchors Away." After the game, to make amends, the Phi Tau's played host to ten of the same senior West Point Cadets.

An annual winter formal with a very original twist was that given by the Phi Tau's. The theme was Scotch, and to prove that they meant it, the Phi Taus erected a Scottish castle, even with a drawbridge, within their house.

During the week before formal rush this fall, the men of Phi Kappa Theta entirely redecorated their house. An impediment occurred, however, as a gallon of paint managed to upset itself, thoroughly soaking a grand piano, woodwork, windows, and living room rug—the day before rush began! Needless to say, an "all nighter" was in order.

A much beloved campus character is Smitty, the favorite cook of the Phi Kappa Theta's. Smitty, who has been supplying the chapter with tuna fish salad for many a Friday meal, not only wears a derby, but prides herself on being the only Episcopalian present.

"What's New?" the Campus Quizzes Phi Sigma Epsilon

The knights of the round table discuss and plot.

Gaylon Lathrop, president

A newcomer to the Illinois scene, Phi Sig Ep, established on this campus only last year, spent some time hunting for a new house. Time and effort payed off, as this year they were able to move into the English Gothic house, vacated by the Tri Sigs at the corner of Third and Chalmers. To give the house a more masculine look, the Phi Sig Eps completely redecorated the living room, sun porch, besides most of their all important study rooms.

Begin on campus such a short time hasn't stopped them in starting new traditions. Already they claim an annual Founder Day Celebration!

Monkey Who Thinks for Himself Hits Phi Sigma Kappa

According to the Phi Sig Sweetheart song, the girl with golden hair and eyes of shiny blue is the one that'll steal a Phi Sig's heart—and pin.

But this scheme was definitely disturbed when Bo-Bo, a pet monkey, took up inhabitance in the Phi Sigma Kappa house. Harmless at first, he merely began swinging from room to room, investigating all curious objects. But Bo-Bo's true character came out when he was exposed to women; he astounded the brothers by being hostile toward the fairer sex! Thus, it seemed, as long as the monkey remained there'd be no golden beauty for the Phi Sig's!

Pi Kappa Alpha Nays Slogan "Better Get a Horse"

If a convertible can be defined simply as a car without a top, then that is what the PiKA's have! Of early vintage, the red and white Ford not only has proved a familiar sight on campus, but also has provided the Pikes with much entertainment. When the weather permits, and when the brothers are in a daring mood, "Leapin' Lena" is apt to suddenly take to the open road.

Trophies Are Causes of Confusion at Pi Kappa Phi

The sports car phase is just one part of college!

"Where did this one come from?" asks a puzzled Pi Kappa Phi, holding up a trophy which, according to its inscription, was won by Pi Kappa Phi—but not at the University of Illinois! Last spring, it seems, brought a round of trophy "exchanging" among Pi Kap chapters in a two state area—and now no one is quite sure anymore just what trophies belong to what chapter!

But in between secretive trips to other campuses, the Pi Kaps managed to take time off to absorb a little culture. The dinner music selections at meals ranged from Tchaikovsky to Brubeck and, at times, even to Elvis!

Pi Lambda Phi Pledges Are Only "Taking up Space"

The pledge class of Pi Lambda Phi showed itself to be a competent group of missile men by building a gigantic rocket ship as a decoration for their pledge dance this fall. Guests at the dance passed beneath the ninety foot high ship as they entered the front door, and walked into the interior of the house, which was decorated to appear like the cabin of a space ship.

In addition to enjoying a sparkling social season, the Pi Lam's topped off their athletic achievements by capturing first place awards in Intramural swimming, ping pong, and wrestling—showing a great diversity of talent!

"Will brains or brawn predominate?" is a sort of unconscious question that the Psi U's ask themselves come spring time. It's during this calmer season that the fraternity holds its annual "36 and over" softball game. Everyone with a thirty-six inch waist (or over) is on one team, which plays versus the other team, consisting of the Psi U's who don't quite "measure up."

The fact that Psi Upsilon has established a million dollar scholarship fund is really no shock to the Psi U's themselves—who know that, among their alums are men like Nelson Rockefeller, Cornelius Vanderbilt, and others.

Fight fire with fire? Well, that's not exactly the way the SAE's would do it. At the first alarm, the Emergency Fire Brigade would spring into action as two pledges would immediately shut up the telephones to make sure no one could call the local fire department. Of course, the proper authorities undoubtedly would be notified—a letter would probably be sent to the Arizona Fire Department. In the meantime, a fan would help spread the flames. Why are the SAE's so concerned about their house? It couldn't have anything to do with the fact that the house is one of the oldest buildings on campus. . .

If the Sammies lead an eight sided life, it's no wonder! The fact that their national symbol is the octagon would almost be saying enough—almost but not quite, for the story is just beginning! For not only is the Sigma Alpha Mu pin in the shape of an octagon, but the national government of the fraternity is formed, also, on an octagonical scale. Furthermore, the national magazine of the group is entitled—you guessed it!—the Octagonian. It seems that this symbol came from the eight founders of SAM.

Sigma Chis Are All In a Whirl Over the Game of Frisbee

Ever see a Sig without a frisbee in his hand? Such a sight is rare indeed, for ever since the discus-like sport hit the campus some years ago, the title frisbee has been almost synonomous with Sigma Chi! At any rate, the Sigs have found it to be a real ice breaker on exchanges with sororities. The game also gets a lot of practice on the home front, in the annual Sigma Chi inter-house Frisbee Tournament. Not only do two all-star teams compete for a trophy, but a "Most Valuable Player" is selected at the end of the game!

Other news is that the Sig addition and house remodeling are now underway.

Yes Indeed, Sigma Nu Uses Sand on Dining Room Floor--

It's always great to have one of the alums back.

Paul Bowman, president

- - that is for their Beachcomber's Ball! Almost twenty-five tons of sand were put on the dining room floor to give a beach effect. Another Sigma Nu dance is the annual White Rose Formal, in which all the fellows' dates move into the house; appropriately, this dance is termed an "overnight"! Oh yes, the guys move out, incidently!

The entire Sigma Nu pledge class in jail? Yes, this did happen—luckily, the fellows were on the right side of the bars! This event took place last year, as the pledge class literally drenched the Champaign City Jail by washing the cells and walls there.

We have been told that the Sigma Phi Delta house contains the greatest conglomeration of "do-it-yourselfers" on campus—and this may well be, considering the fact that the men are all engineers! To prove that this isn't all just theory, the men have worked about the house, doing things like putting in ceilings, landscaping, fixing the TV, building a house stereo, working on plumbing—and even moving the drive way over three feet — quite a chore! Everything is not along the do-it-yourself line, however. The pinning showers inevitably turn into showers for everyone in the house!

Red-faced Tom promptly registered his car — an item that he had omitted."

Men of Sigma Pi "Go Native" and Back Again—and Quick!

Under a huge canopy extending from the Sigma Pi porch there was a beautiful Hawaiian setting including such rarities (to Illinois) as imported willow trees, orchids, a pond with goldfish, and a waterfall three stories high! Soon to appear on the scene were the fellows in Bermuda short-like tuxedos and with dates dressed equally cooly. Now, this may sound fine and picturesque, but this happened to occur on a night when winter made a last return to campus! All present soon moved into the house to dance on the living room floor and admire the decorations from steamed up living room windows.

Sigma Tau Gamma Members Find Everything Against Them

When a fellow is in a hurry, what does he want the least? High on his list is probably a temperamental shower that changes from hot to cold with fickle abandon. But Sigma Tau Gamma has such a shower! Luckily, their house is completely and soundly wired for electric blankets, so those extra cold showers aren't too horrible!

An annual event of the house is the Toilet Bowl game between alumnae and active members. The sport, which is staged during Homecoming weekend, must involve some sort of "payola"—it seems as though the alums invariably win the event! But the actives keep trying.

The Tau Delta Phi's Know What to Do for Cold Showers

One evening, the Tau Delt's suddenly were faced with an unexpected problem: their hot water heater had just broken down, forcing the boys to take their showers at the fraternity next door. Both houses had their spring formals that night, which only added to the quite obvious inconvenience to all!

What "little things" make the Tau Delt house different from all others? For one thing, the members will swear that their water cooler has the coldest water on campus. Moreover, they have a sixty-five year old porter who possesses but one tooth, as well as a definitely astounding laugh!

The time: May of 1959, a momentous day in U of I history. At that time, the Armory floor was turned into little more than a mud pit. It seems as if the TEP's had boasted that they were going to bring a lake to Champaign—and they did. Their elaborate Sheequon booth, which included an actual water fall, began to leak, soon surrounding the booth and its neighbors with water. However, the TEP's managed to right all wrongs by sending nicely worded letters of apology to all groups with nearby booths. Now the campus is wondering what the TEP's will find to grace us with this year!

Not only is it a beauty—it is even registered!"

Louis Landt, president

The poor Teke's. Somehow, situated where they are, they can't help but end up in the middle of every water and snowball fight that rocks campus. Of course, the Teke's themselves have nothing to do with starting the events.

It's understandable that a complete remodeling of the first floor of the house is being planned for the summer. It seems that, during the annual Teke Cafe Carnation Rouge formal, the inside of the house is made to look like a garden —complete with flowing stream and waterfall. However, other decorations, such as a colorful canopy, have not deteriorated the house as much!

It seems as though OX, the Theta Chi Saint Bernard, is about the most popular bachelor on campus — so other MEBOC candidates had better prepare for defeat if the well known dog is nominated!

Theta Chi is trying to keep up with campus tradition—they have lost two trees from the Dutch Elm disease. In order not to become complete conformists, however, they hold some pretty unique events—a "Go to Hell" Dance, for example. But they still hang on to some tradition in that they claim to have initiated Mothers Day Weekend at the University of Illinois. So who says individuals can't be conformists?

When the poet, Robert Frost, an alum of Theta Delta Chi, visited their fraternity house this year, he was given a complete tour of the building; quite appropriately, this tour made the library of the house the last stop. But there the great man caused the Theta Delt's not a little embarrassment when they asked him to autograph a copy of one of his books. However, it seems that they didn't happen to have a copy in their library—what a time to find that out! (They've since ordered a copy.)

If the Theta Delt's look tired, it's probably because of the extremely loud exhaust fan found in their dormitory.

Now we know whom we're to thank for helping us get rid of our tensions. But what is this—it seems our Theta Xi reporter has added something else—"Just kidding, honest!"

Last spring, the house succeeded in improving a great deal, scholastically; the "non-participation in water fights" helped, maybe? The chapter was also very fortunate in having received, for several years, a National trophy for the outstanding Theta Xi chapter publication.

The Golden [Slide] Rule Directs the Lives of Triangle Men

Lest we forget—studying is still an intregal part of college life (though we'd often like to forget it, if only our profs would let us) is an axiom practiced by the members of Triangle fraternity. Here, as a spokesman states, "the thing that characterizes this group from other fraternal groups is that perhaps we study harder than the average group, because we are all aspiring engineers." It must be true!

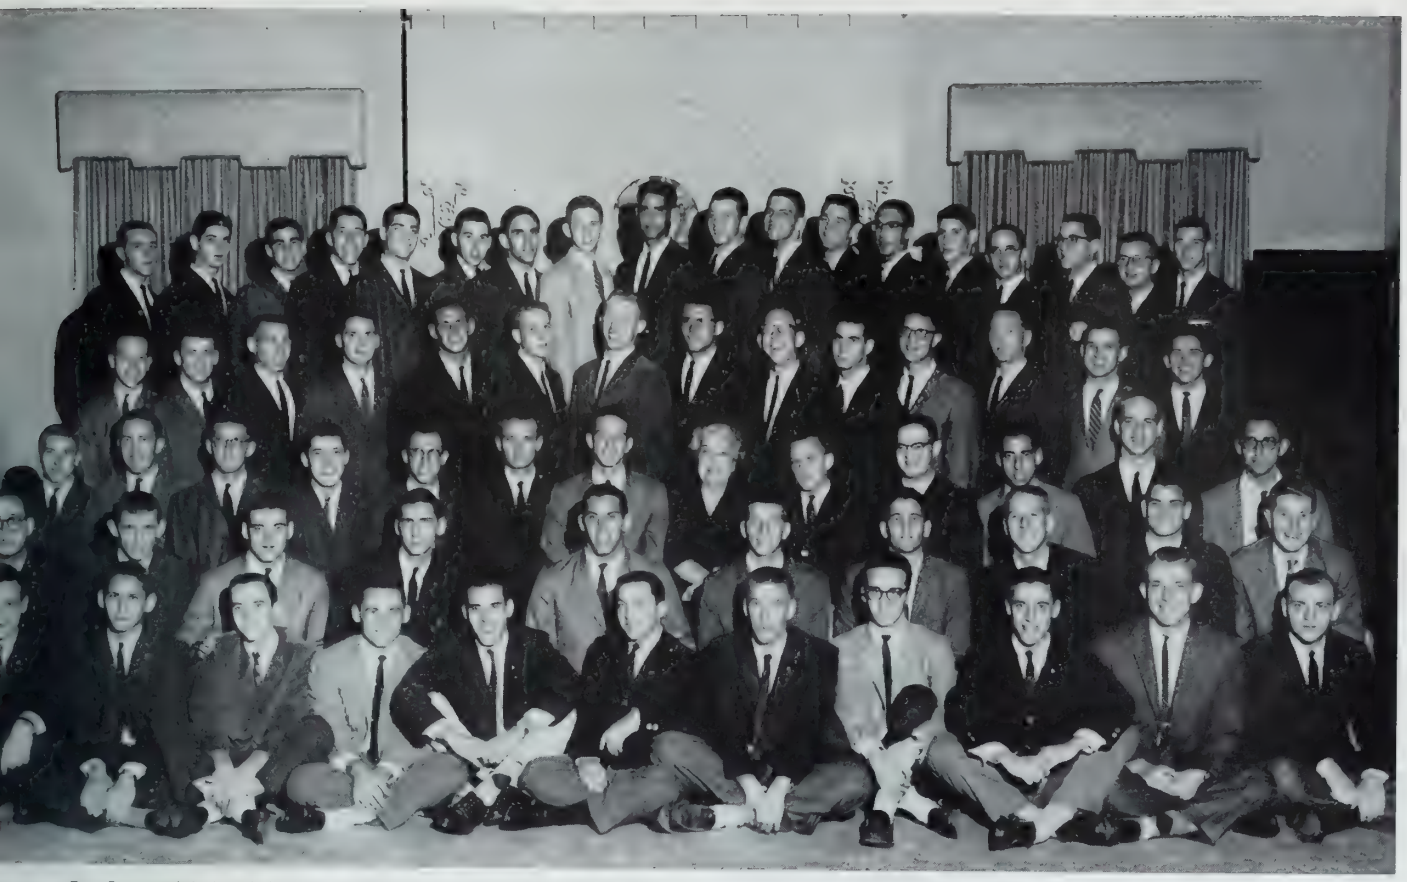

Therefore, it is pretty easy to say that the slide rule must be Triangle's symbol, just as it is of every engineer; everyone knows that the slide rule is an engineers aid in many problems!

If there is a house on campus that can be typed as Ivy League, that would probably be Zeta Beta Tau. At present, the latest ZBT kick is pipe smoking—which always did lend a distinguished air to a man. Black unbrellas are also very much in vogue around the ZBT house—half of the members have them!

The ZBT's had something very unusual happen to them one evening when they all went to pick up their dates, only to discover the girls were gone. To find the girls, the fellows had to follow a treasure map, which led them, at last, to the Elmwood Roller Rink and to, at the same time, their lost dates!

A Horse Steals the Day [and Mom] at Zeta Psi Party

Now, it may seem strange to see a horse on John Street—but even stranger is it to see a "Zete Mom" riding on the animal! It seems as if included on the Zeta Psi social calendar is an event termed a Kentucky Derby Party, complete with a pari-mutual window, mint juleps and authentic derby programs. Moreover, the activity takes place during Mothers Day Weekend. This year, one of the mothers "lost her shirt at the race" and was obliged to ride a thoroughbred horse down the center of John Street—a sight indeed!

Success Follows Luck and Hard Work at Armory House

When the men say they mean business—they do!

Evar Miller, president

Although Armory House is relatively new to our campus—three years is the life span of the residence—all sorts of nice things have happened. Prizes were taken in many past events, most of which were, moreover, large scale campus events, such as Sheequon, Homecoming, and so forth. Of course, the fine results haven't been merely luck but actually bear living testimony to the saying that "all good things come to he who," which is what Armory has been doing these past three years!

A more tangible acquisition is a new house crest. The five by three design in enlivened by a shield of pearls.

Did you say you had the blues? This is nothing unusual if it happens that you are a resident of Balmoral Club. It seems that the inhabitants have a tradition of giving a winter formal every year. Moreover, a change in the theme is in order from year to year. Now, this in itself is not especially unusual, for many other campus residents have similar traditions. The difference lies in the theme itself! The last dance, entitled Blue Fantasy, centered around bluish decorations—blue lighting in particular. While the dance sounds lovely, still it must have been a shock to have a blue date!

It's a not-too-well-known fact that the world's best chefs are men (a rumor undoubtedly begun by a man). Probably inspired by that statement were the men of College Hall who decided to try something a little out of the ordinary on Mother's Day Weekend. The enterprising young men, it seems, not only gave a dinner in honor of their mothers at that time, but even cooked and served the meal themselves! This must have been quite a shock to Mom.

Thanks to long hours of song practice the members of College Hall were able to serenade the sweetheart of a member for the very first time!

"Something new" and yet "something old" is one way to describe a recent acquisition of Granada Club—a house crest. Inspired by the family crest of one Pedro de Granada, an olden day Moorish prince, the present pattern was drawn up by a firm in England.

That most loved of all flowers, the rose, reigned supreme at the Rose Room formal dance given by Granada Club in the fall. The lounge was decorated with approximately fifty dozen roses; after the dance, the girls were free to take the flowers home with them! Moreover, a large sign flashed out the name "Granada Club."

"Where are more buckets—we've just found another leak!" might have been a familiar statement as the dorm roof started to leak last spring. But there was a good side to the problem; the buckets of water collected worked beautifully for inter-house fights!

Koinonia, a co-operative house, is associated with the University Baptist Church. While only on campus for six years, it seems to be quite active as they participate in Homecoming as well as several athletic events. Within the house, they have Homecoming and Mom's and Dad's Day Banquets, dinners with Stratford house, and initiate dances.

Minawa Defines Purpose and Reason for Its Organization

Minawa, a house for Christian young men at the U of I, provides an opportunity for Bible study, both individually and with groups. Besides their internal activities, members participate actively in other religious organizations. When men are available and opportunities arise, members are sent to nearby communities, to help with church services or youth groups.

The men of Minawa boast that their finest event of the year is the Mom's Day Banquet, held during Mother's Day weekend on campus. Not only are the members' entire families invited but a prominent guest speaker also comes.

Fun and Frolic Help Speed Newman Hall Year Onward

Francis Gannon, president

Again playing host at Christmas time to the orphans of Anabel Huling Memorial Home were the inhabitants of Newman Hall. F. J. Gannon, the president, got the pick of the crop in six-year-old Debbie, who managed to walk away with considerable loot by extracting a tooth (whose, we're not quite sure) in front of all the partygoers there.

Newman Hall can also claim a great turnout for the pep rallies. This is due in part to the fact that several of the cheerleaders stop by the cafeteria during suppertime. Another reason just might be that the rally route cuts through several womens' houses!

The Praetorian's Marching Song Is a Key to Their Being

Arthur Reisman, president

"One, two, three, four; and now a tale of Praetorian lore" is how the Praetorian's marching song goes. The lore that they're singing about is, indeed, quite interesting. It seems that the title of the organization is derived from the word "Praetor" which is actually a proper name—the name of the chief of the Roman guards. This is certainly a romantic beginning!

Praetorians is quite an unusual group. Not only do they not have an official residence, but they also have no compulsory events for their members and, glory be! no fining system whatever! The last is very unusual in itself.

Union Beehive Buzzes With Student Activity—

LLYN FORREST, Director JOHN NELSON, Director

MARILYN MANN, Director KAY DANGERFIELD, Director

The dynamics of University life are personified in the activities and facilities of the Illini Union. The familiar colonial style structure located at the north-end of the quadrangle offers services ranging from a large efficient cafeteria accommodating thousands daily to an obscure lost and found department in the corner of the billiards room.

Through recreation, the Union fulfills that part of a students life not satisfied by books. A beehive of student activity, the Union provides an opportunity to play cards, chess, ping-pong, checkers, and billiards. Those students interested in more active recreation find at their disposal a modern eight-lane bowling alley.

Cultural activities are also available through displays of outstanding student art work on the ground floor of the Union. Musically-minded students may play the pianos, enjoy record concerts in the Wedgewood Lounge, or check out records from the lending library in the Browsing Room.

Several lounges, some with radio or television provide added social relaxation for students, faculty, and guests. Every week a full schedule of dances gives students an excellent chance for free entertainment.

The proper functioning and coordinating of the Union's operations is a time-consuming task involving many people. Through the officers and student directors of the Union, the student activity programs are properly balanced with the academic requirements of the University. The more than thirty programs of the Illini Union provide the University with its varied and spirited social calendar.

The quadrangle view of the Illini Union is more than a daily sight to U. of I. students. It is a landmark of campus activities from pep rallies in the fall to ping-pong in the spring. Within the Union doors are opportunities for recreation and service activities so welcome to students.

Staff of Union Advisers Preserve Continuity,

To preserve the continuity of the Union staff, faculty service is necessary, for the student leadership is in the hands of different students each year.

The Illini Union Administration, composed of eleven members including the director, associate director, social director, and three assistants to the director, is charged with the responsibility of coordinating and supervising daily services and activities of the Union.

The administration has organized a most adequate Union program, where all students can come to rest, relax, study, or participate in cultural, recreational, social and educational programs.

Help Students to Utilize Leisure Hours Wisely

The Social Programs Department of the Union helps the student make the best use of his leisure time while contributing to his individual personality.

Programs are set up which aid in leadership and provide opportunities for students to develop skills in human relations through associations with other students.

Illini Union Board provides continuity and administration for the many activity programs. The Board membership consists of eight senior directors, five student representatives of University housing groups, three faculty members, an alumni representative and the Director and Social Director of the Illini Union.

Block I, Stunt Shows Give Spirit to Fall Campus

Block I, the largest card section in the country, is seen in Memorial Stadium at every home football game. The Block I Committee designs colorful stunts and puts them into operation. The stunts are coordinated with the band and with the central theme of the weekend. The double Block I sections of 2,200 students on both sides of the stadium provide much of the spirit and color of football season.

The Stunt Show Committee handled all the publicity, tickets, judges, and arrangements for this year's Stunt Show. An orchestra was provided for pre-show entertainment and for the background music. The final show, a highlight of the Homecoming Weekend, was enjoyed by all and was climaxed by the awarding of trophies to the winning shows.

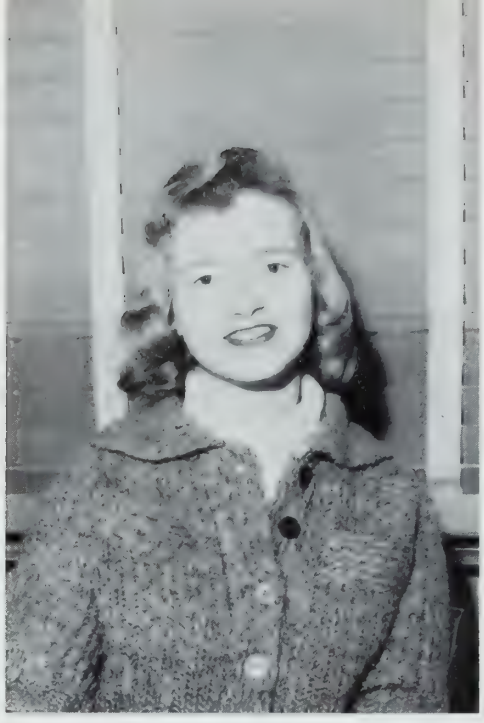

The unbelievable noise, color, and spirit of the Armory every spring is the result of months of preparation for Sheequon by students and the Sheequon Committee. The Committee coordinates the entertainment and arrangements which are seen by thousands of University students. Proceeds from Sheequon go to charity, and the students receive fun and experience.

While International Programs Fill Entire Year

A friendly atmosphere for American and foreign students is created by the International Programs Committee. The social programs sponsored by this Committee are highlighted by style shows, exchange dinners, and a pen-pal program—all designed to form a closer friendship between foreign and American students.

The first week in December is International Week, filled with an International Fair, exchange dinner, and pageant. It is a week for foreign and American students to share in understanding and mutual fun. Many people buy novelties from foreign countries during the fair to use as Christmas gifts. The profit is used to set up foreign student loans and individual scholarships.

During the State Basketball Tournament in March, the Elite Eight Committee provides entertainment and activities for the high school students visiting our campus. The events include a cheerleading contest, a queen contest, the tournament dance, a vaudeville show, and a concession and information booth. A banquet for the cheering squads and queen contestants climax the weekend.

Committees Work to Plan and Produce Activities

Spring Musical is one of the big attractions of Mother's Day weekend. A student cast with professional directors combine to produce the spectacular. The Committee on Spring Musical makes the physical arrangements, selects the musical, casts, costumes, and is responsible for publicity and tickets.

Five times during the school year, the Night Lights Committee converts the ballroom of the Union into a night club. The ballroom is filled with strains of music from a featured band and also serves as a show case for campus talent.

Every weekend, the Dance Committee makes "dance" the word at the Union by providing dance facilities and music. The Committee also sponsors dance lessons, special hops, and, of course, the big campus Union dances. The Campus Talent Committee auditions and keeps files of campus entertainers for the use of Union Committees and other organizations.

From Fall Homecoming to Spring Musical Show,

Activity Night, planned by the Illini Relations Committee, started off the Union activities this year. The Committee plans coffee hours, the 100 Banquet, and other events involving Union personnel.

As Homecoming approaches, house decorations with colorful designs and slogans appear on campus. The Homecoming Committee organizes a contest for the best house decorations and for Miss Illinois and her court. It also publicizes the weekend's events and sponsors a coffee hour before the Homecoming game.

Social Forums Committee is designed to help every student help himself in making sure he is socially correct. The forums, in the form of discussions, are held in any organized house on campus.

Dad's Derbies, Foreign Films, Bridge Games,

Films sponsored by the Cinema International Committee make it possible for everyone to visit a foreign country via the movies. The variety of foreign films shown enrich students' experiences and provide many entertaining evenings during the school year.

Every Friday and Saturday night the auditorium is filled with excited students about to see a number-one movie brought to campus by the Union Movie Committee. The low cost of admission is an added inticement for thrifty University students.

One dad becomes King-for-a-Day, but the Dad's Day Committee plans a royal treat for all the dads. Wearing their derbies, the dads attend a pep rally, a pre-game coffee hour and a Dad's Association gathering. King Dad is crowned during half-time of the football game and a banquet is held in his honor.

The Committee on Games and Tournaments arranges for bridge lessons, special co-recreational bowling tournaments, and supervises billiard and bowling tournaments. Students are given the opportunity to improve as well as practice their skills in these fields.

The Jazz-U-Like-It Committee contracts combos and special performers for appearances on every Thursday evening in the Union Tavern. Besides supervision of the jazz programs, the Committee also conducts a "Just Jazz" contest every March in which combos from many organized houses compete in presenting their instrument versatility.

Putting good art before the students, faculty, and townspeople, is the objective of the Fine Arts Committee. Art appreciation is promoted by the use of coffee hours, lectures, and a complete lending-library system. Many students pass through the Union Gallery in the basement and stop to admire the types of art work displayed there throughout the year.

Classics to contemporary is the order of music played from 3:00 to 5:00 in the Wedgewood Lounge of the Union. A lending library of music is also available to University students, and several special programs highlight the school year. Every Christmas special programs, several of which feature nationally known artists, are presented for the enjoyment of campus music lovers.

Frequent Evaluation of Finances and Publicity

Advising the Union committees on good publicity is one of the big tasks of the Internal Publicity Committee. It holds publicity workshops for all Union Committees and also publishes a yearly publicity handbook.

The Public Information Committee, in charge of external publicity for Union events, advertises through newspapers, TV, and radio. The Committee publishes a Union newspaper called the "Blue Dial," takes pictures of all campus activities, and prepares the Union display for the Illio.

Two very important phases of Union activities are the workshop and orientation program conducted by the Personnel Training Committee. After an activity is finished, the committees then have an evaluation program to seek improvement for the coming years.

The Personnel Committee has the responsibility of keeping the Union's Committees supplied with members. The Committee develops enthusiasm and interest in the Union by sponsoring an activity night each fall, particularly aimed to interest incoming freshmen.

Leads to Improvements

The newest and smallest committee in the Union is the combined committee of Sales and Finance. Finance conducts a watchdog position over the Union's monetary affairs. It also takes inventory and does research into financial matters in hope of finding methods for greater economy in Union activities.

The Sales Committee is charged with supervision and records of all Union activities' purchases and sales throughout the year. The committee sells Homecoming badges, Dad's Day derbies, and has the concessions at the Elite Eight Tournament.

Illini Union, operating financially in the realm of a large business enterprise, has a definite need for the advice to be gained from such a committee.

Student Senate Emphasizes Academic Attitude,

ROBERT BACKOFF, president

Student Senate is the undergraduate student governing body at the University. Its sixty members, serving staggered terms, represent all phases of campus life. Senate's program is similar to that of the United States National Student Association, of which it is a member.

Senate's work this year has been primarily directed at raising the students' academic attitude and developing a sincere interest in political and international affairs. To initiate this program, Senate president Robert Backoff addressed student leaders and academic personnel on "The University in Perspective." This "State of the University" report outlined problems in student-faculty relations, academic standards and achievements, and student obligations in college policy formation.

Supplementing this address, student senators who had attended the USNSA National Congress participated in a speaker's program which brought this academic emphasis to the various housing groups and organizations.

Pushes Bond Issue and New Student Programs

Executive Committee—Standing: Hugh Tyndall, Lewis Collens Seated: Marcia Morgan, Sharon Garman, Nancy Dinnella, David Brown, Robert Backoff, Gary Brownstein, Michael Neff

The newly organized Political Affairs Committee initiated a program to arouse student concern on the Illinois State School Bond Issue to be considered by the voters in the fall. Students were encouraged to acquaint themselves with the specifics of the issue, and to persuade voters to pass the referendum.

"Fair Play All the Way" was the slogan adopted by Senate in its attempt to prevent discrimination among local merchants.

One significant accomplishment was the development of a new student week program which was initiated in the February Orientation Week. After hearing an address by Provost Gordon Ray, the new students assembled in groups to discuss the challenges of the speech.

The Senators listen attentively to the presentation of a bill by one of the members. During the weekly Wednesday night meetings, Senate attempts to follow the decorum of the United States Senate in the formality of procedure.

Freshmen Seminar and Committees Investigate

A modern record was established, with over 5,000 votes cast in the fall Senate elections. Election Committee efforts and a voters guide prepared by the public relations staff projected campaign issues and candidate opinion throughout the campus.

The ROTC Investigation Committee conducted a student opinion poll. Male students were asked to state their views on the ROTC program at Illinois. The results were incorporated into a committee report with other University ROTC programs. The report will be used in considering the possibility of replacing the present two-year compulsory program with a voluntary one.

The newly formed Student Research Bureau helped student travel reach a new peak. The Bureau arranged three student flights to Europe and stressed USNSA sponsored student tours.

Student senators, faculty and administrative officers discussed matters of University concern at the annual Allerton Conference. Another conference in the fall, consisting of student senators and representatives of the five housing groups, formulated and coordinated the year's program. The conference off campus included the "Challenge" programs sponsored by Yale University and the Foreign Student Leadership Project's evaluation conference held at Trenton State Teachers College.

Freshman Council has been completely reorganized. Now under the name of Freshman Seminar, the group is a committee of Student Senate and meets in seminar session once a week to discuss the problems of higher education. With their own constitution and business meetings, the group acquires practical experience in organization development.

Proposed Bills and Execute Senate Programs

Much of the research work of Student Senate cannot be done by the group as a whole, but investigation must be left to committees. Here the Senate is seen in discussion groups, attempting to organize subject matter which will appear later on the Senate floor.

"Code on Student Affairs" Governed by CSA

Composed of members from Student Senate, the housing groups, and faculty members, the Committee on Student Affairs forms a representative legislative body. The committee establishes policies for the supervision and guidance of extracurricular activities and the affairs of undergraduate students.

In coordination with Student Senate, CSA proposes and adopts changes to the "Code on Student Affairs," the regulations and standards governing the extracurricular activities of undergraduate students.

All Student Senate legislation is considered and voted on by the CSA before it is presented to the Dean of Students.

Difficulties encountered in maintenance of proper balance between campus activities and academic life also come under the jurisdiction of the Committee on Student Affairs.

Coordinations Reviews Queen Contest Procedure

Qualifications for complimentary ticket lists and the specifics of the queen contest policy were two areas in which Coordinations expressed initiative this year.

This committee planned the campus calendar and prevented near calamity when Military Ball and St. Pat's Ball sought conflicting dates.

The Coordinations Committee establishes and enforces the regulations that govern the many campus events that are sponsored by the recognized student organizations and boards.

Coordinations is an important sub-committee of Student Senate; its chairman is selected from among the members of Senate.

Scholarship improvement in both the active and pledge areas of fraternity life was emphasized by the 1959-1960 Interfraternity Council.

The Interfraternity Council is the governing and supervisory body of all fifty-seven social fraternities at the University. Largest and oldest in the nation, the Illinois Council holds an important position as a leader in fraternity government.

The president and a junior representative from each fraternity compose the IF Council. They serve as legislators and members of the various committees such as pledge training, scholarship, Greek Week, intramurals, rushing, and public relations.

Greek Week was again sponsored this year with Panhellenic for the purpose of promoting sorority and fraternity life. A monthly newspaper, the Illigreek also calls for cooperation between Panhellenic and I. F.

Interfraternity Council also planned the fall Pajama Races again this year and arranged for Christmas parties for underprivileged children in the Champaign-Urbana area. Speakers were sent to high schools throughout the state to explain the Greek system to incoming freshmen.

Basic policies of the Interfraternity Council are formulated by the Board of Fraternity Affairs. The aim of actions taken by this group is to develop each and every fraternity so this system may take its proper place in all phases of the University. In addition to acting in an advisory capacity to Interfraternity Executive Council, this body also serves as the board of appeals for Judicial Committee decisions and is final authority on violations of interfraternity rulings.

The Board is made up of three faculty members who are alumni of fraternities on campus, three local alumni, the five elected officers of Interfraternity Executive Council and Dean of Fraternity Men.

Left: An example of fraternities competing together in friendly rivalry is the Illini Grand Prix. Sponsored by Delta Upsilon, the event is held annually in May and attracts many spectators to witness the grueling four-hour race.

Junior Interfraternity Council has followed the goal set by Interfraternity Council in aiming for higher scholarship in all fraternity pledge classes during 1959-1960. Stimulating and maintaining high social standards and cultivating freshman interest in interfraternity and University activities were also objectives of the organization this year.

A newly formed Public Relations Committee was largely responsible for publicizing the various projects and endeavors of the group.

January again witnessed the annual "Pin and Paddle" Ball, sponsored by Junior Interfraternity Council.

Monthly "Illigreek" Paper Publishes Greek News

House meetings are slightly disrupted during one meeting each month by voices discussing the latest copy of Illigreek.

Written and distributed by Panhellenic and Interfraternity Council members, the paper contains news items and feature stories of interest to both groups. Subscriptions are sold at the beginning of each year for this monthly Greek newspaper.

Each fall the first issue of the Illigreek is devoted to pictures of all the sorority pledge classes on campus. Male students scan its pages in search of faces and phone numbers for future weekend dates.

Giving added publicity to such Greek events as Panhellenic Ball, Interfraternity Ball, and Greek Week is a necessary job of the paper. In addition, Illigreek states the Greek stand on current campus issues and gives credit to outstanding Greek students. "Views from Mt. Olympus" is a popular informal column presenting the viewpoint of Illinois students.

Greek Week Features Illiolympics, Open Houses

Filled with activities, Greek Week opened fraternity and sorority doors to give the public a view of campus life through open houses and exchange dinners. On Sunday a kick-off banquet was held for representatives of all Greek houses, various student executives, and faculty advisers to the Greek system.

The week included meetings for officers as well as activities on the lighter side, such as the Illiolympics and the MEBOC contest. An addition this year was the selection of Outstanding Greeks, based on superior achievement in scholarship, activities and athletics.

In an attempt to acquaint all with the Greek organization, the committees strove to incorporate all campus functions into the variety of events. They demonstrated ways in which Greeks are actively trying to achieve their goals of furthering scholarship, developing leadership, promoting social awareness and supporting philanthropic projects.

During the evening couples danced around a central billboard portraying the queen candidates. Dance music was by Richard Maltby's Orchestra and intermission music was by the "Eight Balls."

IF Ball in Early Spring Takes Marlboro Theme

"A Lot to Like" was the name of the 1959 Interfraternity Ball held on April 11, in Huff Gymnasium. Contest posters of the "Marlboro Man" decorated the gym.

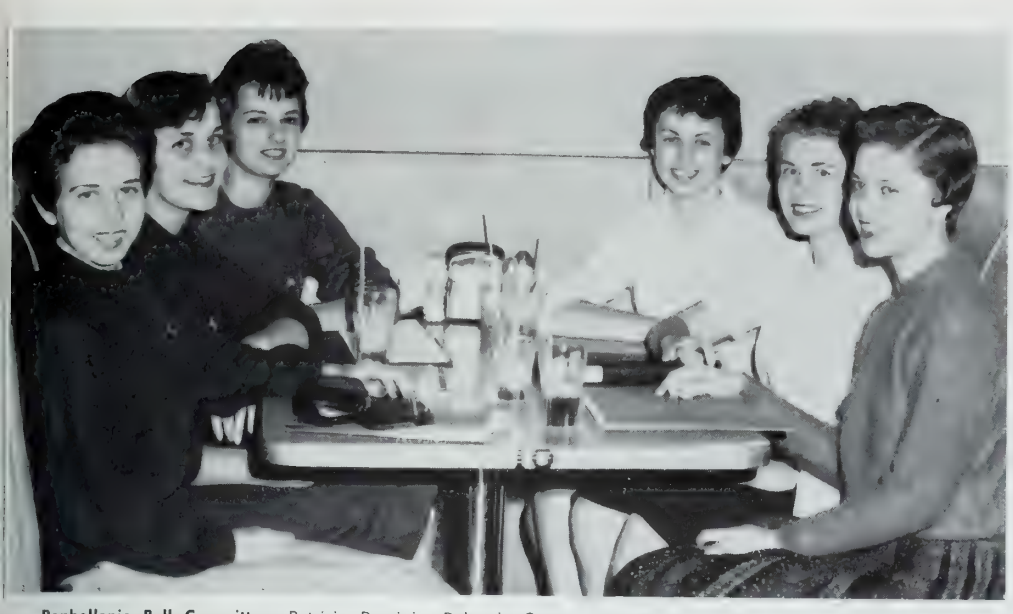

Pat Boughton was chosen IF Ball queen from among the nominees selected by each fraternity. The candidates were interviewed by a panel of judges and the other finalists made up the queen's court. Colorful posters appeared on campus during the week previous to the dance, advertising the queen candidates. Voting was done by tickets at the ball.

Nominated by Sigma Phi Epsilon, Pat was crowned with the traditional purple velvet crown, which contains the pins of all the fraternities in the Interfraternity Council.

Winner of the title of "Marlboro Man" was David Livingston, who received recognition during the evening.

Pat Boughton was crowned queen with the traditional crown of velvet and fraternity pins.

For that mystical Halloween mood, the 1959 Panhellenic Ball, "That Old Black Magic," was decorated in abstract designs of silver, black, blue, and purple. Don Jeris and his orchestra contributed to the atmosphere of the dance with his sentimental music. During the intermissions, the Coachmen sang popular tune selections.

The highlight of the evening was the presentation of the twenty-seven Ideal Sorority Girls. Each Ideal Girl was chosen by the members of her house as the girl most representative of the high ideals, standards and goals set forth by her sorority. The girls were introduced by Alan Jaffe, President of Interfraternity Council.

The Ideal Girls were honored at a banquet at which Miss Joan Cochran, Dean of Sorority Women, addressed the group. Each Ideal Girl received a silver bracelet to remind her of this honor.

Panhel Activities Varied, Unify Sorority Girls

VIRGINIA RISER, president

Panhellenic's activities this year included the annual All-Pledge Welcome held during Fall Registration Week and Panhellenic Ball in October. Profits of $900 from the Ball were used for the Panhellenic Scholarship fund. Panhellenic participated again in the international Foster-Parent Plan by supporting an underprivileged child in Greece.

Panhellenic is the governing and policy-making body for the twenty-seven sororities and the two Panhellenic Dorms at Illinois. Activities of the Junior and Senior levels of Panhellenic are coordinated by the Executive Committee which is composed of four elected officers, senior chairmen, senior pledge advisers of the five departments, Shi-Ai President, public relations chairman, and Senate representative. The Executive Committee also makes policy recommendations to President's Council. President's Council, consisting of all the house presidents, is the legislative body of Panhellenic.

All sorority pledges belong to Junior Panhellenic which is sub-divided into four Junior Departments. Purpose of Junior Panhellenic is to make the pledges aware of their responsibilities as campus citizens and members of Panhellenic.

That "lost" feeling common to freshman women is curbed by the work of the Freshman Advisers. These "big sisters" are concerned with assisting freshmen women in making a satisfactory adjustment to the University by familiarizing them with campus standards and customs.

Selected or elected from their respective houses, the advisers are prepared for their position through workshops held at the beginning of each semester. The workshops are planned by the Freshman Advisers Executive Committee and its adviser, the Assistant Dean of Freshman Women.

Through this group, including both members of Panhellenic and Women's Group System, information tables are maintained on campus during New Student Week. The Freshman Advisers also serve as hostesses for the President's reception and sponsor the All Freshman Exchange.

"If We Could" was the imaginative theme chosen for Dad's Day Revue this year. Four shows, complete with elaborate costuming, lights, and scenery were presented to the dads by Men's Residence Halls Association and Women's Group System. The final four shows actually staged were the result of eliminations during try-outs in October.

After the last performance on Saturday night, trophies were awarded to the first and second place shows. Winners were determined by the total number of points awarded each show by the judges on both Friday and Saturday nights.

Working to promote leadership, fellowship, high scholarship, and interest in campus activities, the 1959-1960 Women's Group System continued many of its past programs. The activities and functions engaged in by independent undergraduate women are supervised by the self-governing WGS Council.

The Executive Council is made up of the officers of WGS, the major chairmen, and Dean Harrison, faculty adviser. This Council handles scholastic inquiries, assists in the planning of various activities, and acts as an advisory board for freshman programs.

An organizational newspaper was published again this year by WGS to keep the girls informed on important events and to stimulate interest in controversial issues. Teas were given for the presentation of scholarship and activity awards. Other functions initiated by the organization were an adoptive tutoring system, coffee hours, and mixer dances. Freshman Board was set up for the purpose of voicing the problems of freshmen girls and encouraging them to become active in WGS.

Dad's Day Revue and Sno-Ball were sponsored this year with Men's Independent Association.

MIA Government Convenes in Monday Council

Starting off a year of improvement and progress, the Men's Independent Association used as a basis the Spring '59 Evaluation Conference to correct several aspects of its operation and to strengthen its internal structure. The representative body of the organized men's independent houses on campus now feels that it can do a better job of working for the interests of the men not living in MRH. Dean Richard O'Leary was appointed the new adviser to MIA.

Monday Council, the governing power of the group, changed its construction from a board of directors to that of having eight vice presidents. This was done in order to form a more closely knit group. Each vice president now has charge of a certain area such as personnel, external affairs, and public relations. To stimulate participation in Monday Council, MIA began awarding a one-hundred dollar scholarship to the best representative each semester.

Monday Council turns out in full force to discuss an important matter demanding action which has come under its jurisdiction.

To Discuss, Plan Activities and Exchange Ideas

Attempting to give the independent male student a solid background in all aspects of campus life, MIA is active in promoting scholarship, athletics, and social events. One of the most important functions of MIA is that membership provides the students with a direct channel for having their opinions heard in those important organizations on campus, such as Illini Union Board, CSA, and Student Senate, which do not have immediate contact with the living units.

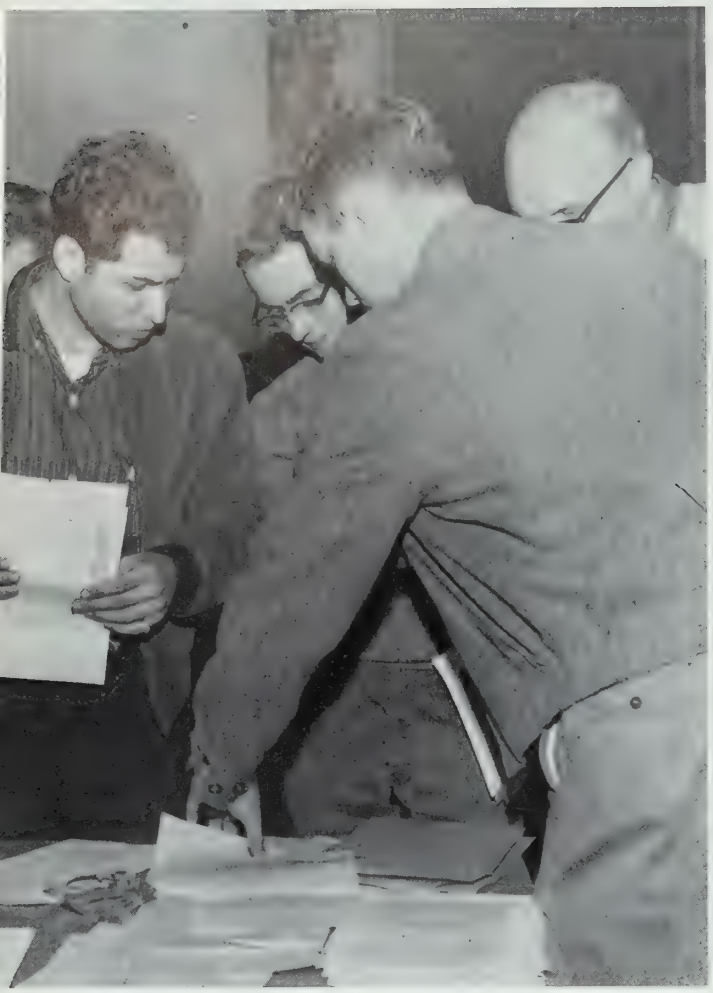

Sno-Ball, co-sponsored with Women's Group System, remained one of the top social events of the campus year as indicated by its first-day sellout of tickets. Dad's Day Revue, also presented with WGS, was a special highlight of Dad's Day Weekend. In addition to these social events, coffee hours and mixers are held in conjunction with other organizations.

MIA has received outstanding national recognition for its efforts on the behalf of independent students.

Year-old MRHA Evaluates, Then Enacts Change

For Residence Hall Progress and Improvement

Only in existence for one year, MRHA, the youngster of the five housing groups has gone far toward reaching its goal of making better facilities and opportunities for the individuals residing in the men's dorms, and representing them to the residence hall management. Exemplifying their progress is the new literary magazine, Insight, and the creation of the Calvin S. Sifferd scholarships. Men's Residence Hall Association also formed the MRH Glee Club and compiled an officers' handbook for more efficient house government.

The group through which MRHA operates is the Presidents' Council meeting every Monday. The MRHA constitution has been completely rewritten to create a unicameral government, with the Judicial Code evaluated and changed. Another structural change was the formation of a secretariat to better disseminate information to the large member body of MRHA.

A Residence Halls Council, composed of representatives from MRHA Executive Council and the presidents of the Women's Residence Halls acts for the coordination of both programs.

Secretariat: Philip Okun, Martin Lewin, Kent Smith, Donald Coroneos

Plans to take effect soon in MRHA include a re-emphasis of the freshmen advisers and speakers programs so they will better serve the residents in the days they spend here getting an education. Soon, too, there will be music hours in the Clark House Lounge, and a booklet for orientation of freshmen.

The MRH newspaper, The Rez Herald, this year took on a new format as part of the improvements in existing programs of this year-old housing group.

For the first time, MRHA residents will have an official pin. The design for this accessory was approved by the group's Presidents' Council recently.

It is busy in the Noble House basement where the offices of the Association are located and the many impending plans for the improvement and betterment of the men's dorms are put into action for continued progress of MRHA.

Elizabeth's regal, composed appearance during this scene from Mary Stuart is deceiving to her court, for she is faced with a difficult decision concerning her prisoner, Mary Stuart. If she chooses to give Mary her freedom, the safety of her throne may be in jeopardy; if she decides in favor of Mary's execution, she may face the condemnation of the English people for her inhumane act.

Acting, Producing, Directing Offered by Theatre

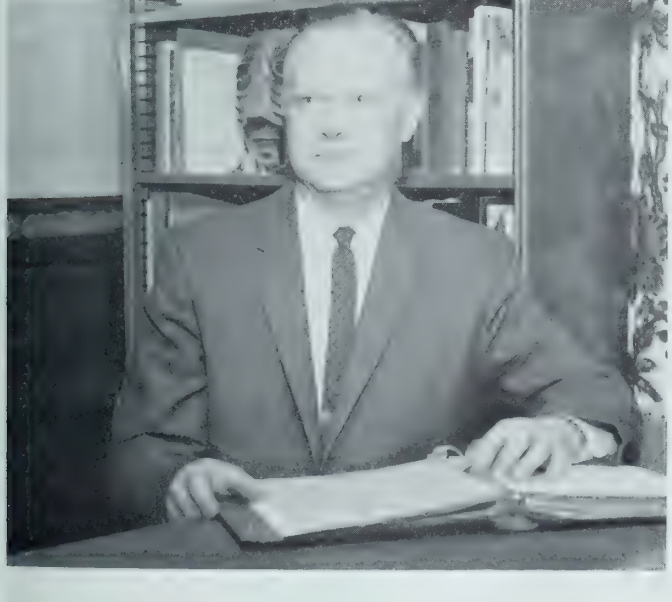

"Five great plays by five great playrights," stated pre-season publicity for the University Theatre. Subscribing to the belief that there is only time to present the best plays, the 1959-1960 Theatre group presented Love for Love, Mary Stuart, The Hairy Ape, and You Never Can Tell.

The organization is divided into two staffs: the student staff and the faculty staff. The faculty staff directs and supervises the operations of the Theatre. The supervisor and the co-ordinator of the work of the faculty staff with the student staff is the executive director, Mr. Joseph W. Scott.

The Student Staff provides the personnel direction and manpower for all Theatre productions. This staff is headed by Linda Gail Bond, the general manager.

The University Theatre provides practical training, and educational and recreational experience in the theatre for University students.

As 1959-1960 Theatre Casts Present...

Faculty and student staffs work together to make the University Theatre an activity providing the richest theater entertainment for Illinois students. Students handle the acting and producing; the faculty staff does the directing.

The direction of the 1959-1960 season of plays was handled by four faculty members. This year's season began with the play Love for Love by William Congreve, directed by Charles H. Shattuck. The second production was Mary Stuart by Friedrich Schiller, directed by Clara Behringer. The third production of the season was The Hairy Ape by Eugene O'Neill, directed by Charles H. Shattuck. You Never Can Tell by Bernard Shaw, directed by Mary Arbenz, was the final production of the playbill.

The student staff is divided into four major divisions: the Senior Manager division, the Junior Manager division, the Sophomore Assistant Manager division, and the division of crew members. Each of these staffs is in turn divided into several subdivisions and minor committees.

"Love for Love," "Matchmaker," and "Condition III"

A ladies' hat shop at the turn of the century was the colorful stage setting for The Matchmaker, a rollicking comedy presented by the Theatre in the spring of 1959.

A family of "Six Characters" descended upon the stage of another play and provided an eerie interruption to the practice session in progress. Pirandello, the playwright, used new innovations in stagecraft to produce this play in the early Twentieth Century.

Four plays rounded out the spring and summer season of 1959 productions.

Six Characters in Search of an Author was directed by Charles H. Shattuck. Pirandello's "play within a play" proved to be a highly stimulating performance for University Theatre goers.

Webster Smalley directed one of the 1959 summer productions, The Cave Dwellers, by William Saroyan. Humor and pathos blended in displaying a rich panorama of delightful Saroyan characters.

Bernard Hewitt directed Condition III, Peter Bowman's prize winning play, for the 1959 Festival of Contemporary Arts. This play is one in a series of original scripts which have been given their premier performance by the Theatre.

Thornton Wilder's rollicking farce, The Matchmaker, gave a colorful climax to the 1958-1959 season. Mary Arbenz was the director of the play.

The laughter of this humorless clown was accompanied by electronic music. Six Workshop Theatre Productions Per Year

The Cave Dwellers, a realistic fantasy about people who find themselves on the stage of a New York theatre which is about to be razed, was a summer production of University Theatre. The lives of these people gain new meaning through this strange experience.

Canadian-born prodigy Glen Gould has dedicated his life to perfection of his musical talent. His mother began his formal musical education by instructing him in piano when he was three years old. At the age of ten, he began to study under Alberto Guerro of the Royal Conservatory of Music in Toronto. After four years of study under Guerro, Gould made his formal debut in a concert with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. Since his first American appearance in a Washington, D. C. recital, January, 1955, his career gained momentum. An internationally acclaimed artist, Gould displayed his versatility and depth of talent when he appeared as piano soloist at the Stratford, Ontario Music Festival in 1956 and heard the first concert performance of his string quartet at that festival.

In Star Course Panorama of Prominent Artists

For sixty-nine years Star Course has brought to campus a varied program of popular and classical concerts in the fields of music, dance, and drama. This year's series concerts included Inbal, Dance Theatre of Israel; William Primrose, violist; Robert Shaw Chorale; Glenn Gould, pianist, and the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra. Featured in the extra concerts were the Alfred Deller Trio; Stan Kenton, June Christy and the Four Freshmen; Michel Senechal; Hal Holbrook; Erroll Garner; Martha Schlamme; Ahmad Jahmal; and the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra.

Student Managers handle Star Course activities with two senior managers serving as the over-all directors. Aside from working with the board to formulate general policies, they work out the plans and budgets which provide a working pattern for the entire organization.

The Robert Shaw Chorale, now in its twelfth year of uninterrupted activity, has received world acclaim through its concert tours, radio appearances, and recordings. It has appeared in twenty countries of Europe and the Middle East, and conducts yearly tours in the United States. Through the originality and brilliance of its founder and choral director, Robert Shaw, it has become one of the brightest attractions in the musical world.

No person has done more than William Primrose to re-establish the eminence of the viola as a solo instrument. Glasgow-born, he began his career as a child prodigy on the violin, forbidden to touch his father's viola. He had well established himself as a violinist before he was allowed to change to the viola and work to the unparalleled position he holds with that instrument today. In his concert for Star Course, as soloist for the University Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Primrose played superbly the famous "Harold in Italy," by Berlioz.

The Yemenites migrated to Israel from the Southwestern corner of the Arabian peninsula 2500 years ago. Isolated from the Jewish world, they preserved their traditions. After Israel became independent, Miss Levi-Tanai organized Inbal, Dance Theatre of Israel, resulting in a unique blend of ancient Yemenite dance form and aspirations of modern Israel.

A student-operated activity, Star Course is conducted on a non-profit basis. All finances are controlled by the University Concert and Entertainment Board, a group comprised of six faculty members and six students. The board is responsible for such matters as policy, selection of programs, and financial budgets.

After the board has handled the contract-signing procedure, the managers have eight duties to perform for each concert: publicity, advertising, ticket sales, public relations, concert arrangements, personnel, physical plant arrangements, and office management. Each of these divisions is handled by a Junior Manager who in turn is responsible for directing the work of the sophomore staff.

Artistic devotion and technical precision of the members of the Orchestra coupled with the musical brilliance of conductor George Szell have resulted in the Cleveland Orchestra becoming one of the world's greatest symphony orchestras. Illinois students who attended its Star Course performance were just as delighted with the Orchestra's music as were those who heard it in the musical capitals of the world.

June Christy, top-flight vocalist, recording star, and nightclub attraction, began her career in the Stan Kenton band. Kenton, one of the most popular and talented band leaders, has traveled to the Continent several times for a widely-heralded series of engagements. He has given many young artists a start in show business. The Four Freshmen, now firmly established as one of the top acts in show business, were assisted by him in their early career. All of these artists combined to give a top Star Course performance.

Forty sophomore managers work on the various committees, under the direction of the junior managers. Every week one member of each committee rotates to another one. The sophomores also usher at all Star Course concerts.

The 120 freshmen managers are divided into ten groups of twelve. Two of these groups work in the office while the other groups work on research projects under the direction of the sophomores. These projects give Star Course information such as which media of advertising are most effective and how the local ticket prices compare with those of the concert series at other schools. Every month these groups rotate to give each freshman the opportunity to meet all the personnel, to work on each committee, and to become acquainted with all phases of Star Course.

IPC Oversees Production of Campus Publications

Chartered by the state as a non-profit corporation, the Illini Publishing Company carries out its purpose of printing, publishing, and distributing student publications. Operating from the basement of Illini Hall, IPC uses its own modern printing plant to do a variety of commercial printing for student and University connected organizations. The company operates under a board of control composed of four students and four faculty members.

Besides printing The Daily Illini and Illinois Technograph, the IPC Board is also responsible for administering the Illio and radio station WPGU.

Serving both the Daily Illini and the Illio, the photo staff is under its own organization as part of the Illini Publishing Company. Throughout the year the photo staff works to take pictures for the DI and the Illio. While the bulk of the Illio pictures are taken in the fall, there are still spring shots that must be taken for the following year's book as well as pictures taken every day for the Daily Illini.

Working under the direction of a photo chief, two assistant chiefs, and five night editors, the staff works many long hours walking from one end of the campus to the other carrying out the whims and pleadings of the Illio and DI editors as to the pictures that they want taken. Besides the battle with uncooperative subjects and other adverse conditions there are always the eternal jobs of developing and printing.

It was late at night on March 12, 1960 when it finally happened—the last page of the Illio was completed in form for the printer.

Work on the 1960 Illio began before the end of the spring semester of 1959, with workshops and retreats by the business and editorial staffs in order to train new personnel. Fall was the time for taking photographs, collecting questionnaires, and selling yearbooks. Soon it was Christmas, but the "holidays" were spent by the staff in many hours of writing copy. With the new semester, came headlines to write and more pictures to crop. A final all-out effort was still necessary to get the Illio to press on time.

An attempt to record campus life in all of its phases was the motivating force behind the Illio staff. Photographers were assigned to cover all events, and conversation and news were absorbed for the presentation of a complete campus picture.

Although the business and editorial staffs held separate meetings, the two staffs worked together in production of the book. Weekly meetings sometimes took the informal form of a pizza party.

Perhaps the 1960 Illio will mean just a little more to members of the staff, for they alone realize the worry and sweat that are part of the makeup of every section of the book.

A fire breaks out in two Champaign lumber companies; University students begin throwing water; Bill Burrell leads Illini defense; Khruschev comes to the United States.

These are examples of stories that made The Daily Illini headlines in the past year. Serving the University for almost a century, the publication has attained the level of a business rather than an activity.

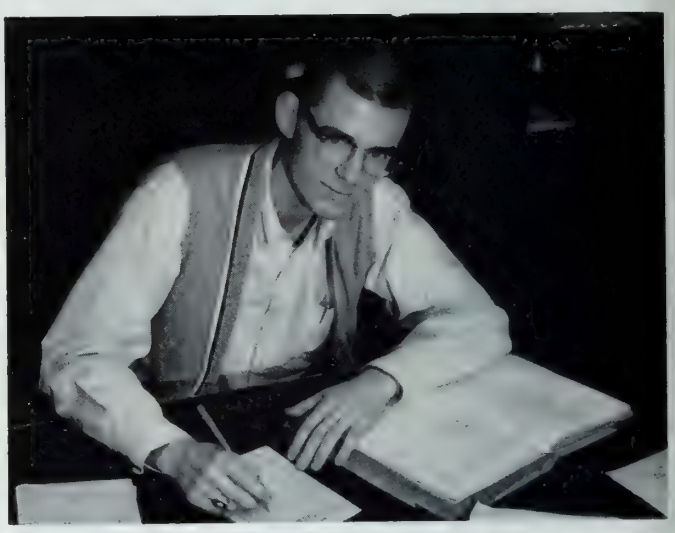

Long hours go into the careful preparation of news for the 12 to 32 page paper appearing five times a week. Deadlines must be met, advertisers satisfied, and the news brought to the campus. Supplementing the work of the student staff is the Associated Press Wire Service, national columnists, and the Chicago Daily News Foreign Service.

The Daily Illini is supervised by Illini Publishing Co., but the editorial policy is determined by the student staff.

Through Smooth Division of Staff Responsibility

Divisions of staff responsibility enable The Daily Illini to fulfill its daily obligations efficiently.

Where the academic side is concerned, the Campus Staff takes over by reporting on classes, curricula, enrollment, and administrative actions. Big Ten championships, Elite Eight tournaments and intramurals are covered by the staff of sports writers.

The City Staff covers the happenings of the local cities of Champaign and Urbana, and the state, giving the DI more than just a campus-wide coverage. With soft pencils in hand, copyreaders provide the official check for errors in spelling, punctuation, fact and general content of each news story. As a morning newspaper, The Daily Illini is "put to bed" in the late hours by a special night staff.

And Throughout the State

Constantly striving to improve the quality of the magazine, members of The Illinois Technograph's staff attempt to present the engineers on campus with a publication which is both informative and entertaining. Besides technical articles that deal with the various phases of the engineering field and engineering at the University, The Technograph employs lighter related articles, editorials, and some fiction pieces. The staff also uses supplementary pictures and diagrams to illustrate stories. Regular features in the magazine are the monthly Techno-cutie; "Industrial Skimming," which presents the latest developments in industry; "Brainteasers"; the joke page, and "Begged, Borrowed, And . . ."

The Technograph, founded in 1885, is a charter member of the Engineering College Magazines Association, a national organization for engineering magazines on many campuses. ECMA is designed to elevate the standards of college engineering publications so that they may be helpful to engineering students. ECMA gives awards for the best publications and for the best articles that appear during the school year. Each month, a qualified critic reviews the magazine and sends a marked issue back to the staff.

Published monthly from October through May, The Technograph offers staff members valuable practical experience in the fields of editing, business, photography, and art.

Playing and Singing at Their Best, The Marching

Although seen at rest during the playing of this number, the kettle drummers always provide numerous highlights to each show as they race around the field in order to be in their proper place for each number.

Again Illinois' marching band, the oldest and one of the largest in the nation, thrilled football enthusiasts with its pre-game and halftime shows. Long recognized as one of the finest marching, playing and singing groups of its kind, the "Marching Illini" capitalized on long hours of hard practice and behind the scenes planning to present a new show for each of the five home games.

Composed of men students from the Concert Band, the First Regimental Band, and the most qualified members of the Second Regimental Band, the marching band, directed by Everett Kisinger, backs up its regular marching formation and instrumentation of over 175 with a reserve squad of fifteen extra band members.

Led onto the field by drum major Rick Jarrard and spirited by Chief Illiniwick John Forsyth, the band builds up Illini spirit and keeps it going throughout the game by playing during timeouts and after touchdowns. At each of the five home games the band performs a new show of intricate marching formations and smooth playing. Featured during every performance is one semi-classical or classical number that has become a unique tradition for Illini band lovers.

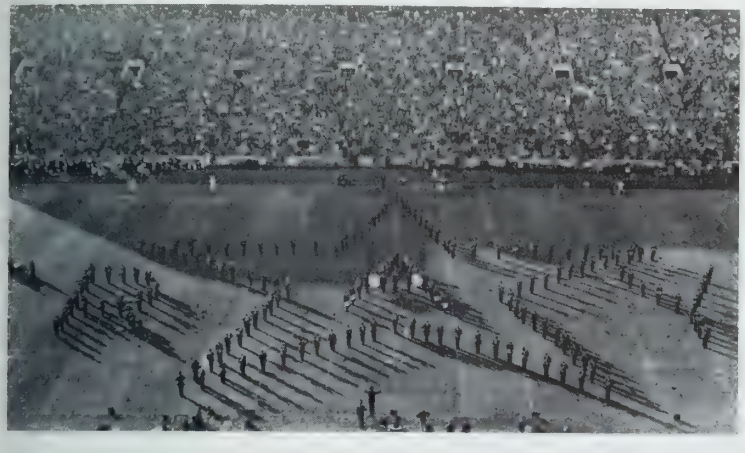

In addition to their heavy schedule of home games, the band this year traveled to Cleveland, Ohio for the Penn State game.

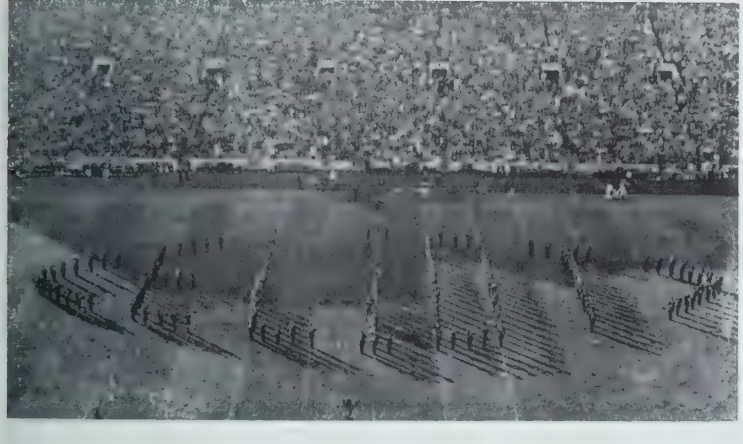

Feet, horns, and hats line up in the front row as the band presents one of the traditional parts of its half-time show. The playing of one classical or semi-classical number has come to be a very popular feature and is sufficient proof of the bands' concert-band tone.

Illini Topped Great Season by Saluting Ray Eliot

At the last home game, the Marching Illini were privileged to honor Coach Ray Eliot on his retirement as one of Illinois' most inspirational coaches. The band followed Coach Eliot's career from a star football player through to winning three Big Ten titles, two Rose Bowl games, and completed the salute with Eliot spelled in the form of a football. Another of the best shows was the first one of the year when the "Marching Illini" welcomed the Army "Kaydets" to the Illini campus and helped set the tone for the first Illini upset of the year.

Always a thrill to Illini fans, students and alumni alike, is the performance of Chief Illiniwick. As the thirteenth chief to represent the "Spirit of Illinois" on the gridiron as part of the band show, John Forsyth portrayed the chief in traditional Indian costume.

First and Second Regimental Bands Work Many

EVERETT KISINGER, director

Organized as a concert group with a membership of around one hundred members, the First Regimental Band carries out its purpose to study serious concert band literature, both traditional and contemporary, and to perform good band music on various occasions throughout the year. As vacancies occur in the Concert Band, musicians who have spent a year or two in the First Regimental Band are promoted on the basis of ability.

Highlighting the year, the band, conducted by Everett Kisinger, performed at the Sixth Annual Festival of Concert Band Music on January 9. Other concerts of the year were a formal Spring Concert on April 7, and a Twilight Concert on May 11. Besides these many concert activities and playing at several ROTC reviews in the spring and at the Veterans Day service on November 11, the First Reg Band forms the nucleus of the Marching Illini.

Several of the concert programs are re-broadcast over the radio on station WILL for the listening pleasure of local residents.

Hours Providing Band Music at Campus Events

With a membership of 160, the Second Regimental Band is a concert organization which has grown this year to have one of its best instrumentations. Conducted by Everett Kisinger, with the assistance of Jan Bach, the group is divided into two divisions of between sixty and one hundred members in each division to facilitate practicing. Providing a varied musical experience for its members in the compositions played each year, this group, like the other bands, studies standard band literature.

The Second Regimental Band, in conjunction with the other university bands, presents several concerts including the Festival Concert on January 9 and a Spring Twilight Concert in April. Each fall the Second Reg Band provides music for the pep rallies held before each home game and also participates in the Mother's Day program in the spring.

Another important function of this band is to supply some of the personnel for the marching band besides playing for military reviews held in the spring for drill display.

Mr. Everett Kininger conducts a Second Reg practice session.

MARK HINDSLEY, director

The 1959-60 Concert Band season was highlighted by the return of Director Hindsley to the podium after a semester's leave of absence spent in European travel and research work here in the States. The band's one hundred fourteen select wind and percussion players can look back with satisfaction on a highly successful season of delightful music and stimulating educational musical activity.

Band directors and music lovers from all over Illinois arrived on campus to attend the January Festival of Concert Band Music and the spring semester's Seventieth Anniversary Concerts. The annual Twilight Concert Series attracted many appreciative listeners to the lawn of the quadrangle. The band also participated in the Commencement Exercises this spring and presented The President's Concert on Commencement eve.

The Band again made long-play records from some of their practice tapes.

An active concert schedule both on the campus and throughout the state has been maintained by the University of Illinois Symphony Orchestra, which had almost ninety players this year. Six campus concerts during the school year included the annual appearance of the Orchestra on the Star Course series, featuring the renowned viola virtuoso William Primrose. A three-day tour of the northern part of the state in February brought music to hundreds of high school students, as well as to adult audiences.

This year's outstanding guest conductor was Julius Herford. A noted Bach authority, he supervised in the preparation of "The St. Matthew Passion," presented in the spring by the Oratorio Society and the Orchestra.

Bernard Goodman, the Orchestra's regular conductor was selected this year by Dr. George Szell, Conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra, for one of the two Fellowships of the Kulas Foundation, awarded to young American conductors of unusual promise.

"Singing Illini"

The traditional Dad's Day Concert of the Varsity Men's Glee Club assumed even greater proportions this year through the guest appearance of the University of Michigan Men's Glee Club. The "Singing Illini," under the direction of Professor Harold Decker, and the Michigan Glee Club, directed by Professor Philip Duey, combined to thrill a capacity Huff Gym crowd of students and dads.

During their stay, the Michigan Club were guests at an informal reception and attended the Illinois-Michigan football game.

Spring breezes found the Glee Club heading south to enjoy the weather and sing for the Civic Music Organization in Lexington, Kentucky. The spring tour included additional concerts given along the way in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Kentucky.

Among other Glee Club activities were a social exchange program, an orientation period for new members, the annual Christmas and Spring Concerts, and numerous performances for business and civic groups in the Champaign-Urbana area and throughout the state.

New Blazer outfits, purchased for morning and afternoon concerts, enhanced the appearance of the Glee Club.

Heard and seen many times nationally over radio and television, the Women's Glee Club has become well-known throughout the country. Their tours this year included visits to Davenport, Moline, Rock Island, and Bradley University in Peoria and other cities in Northwestern Illinois and eastern Iowa. They performed for the Governor and local Chambers of Commerce, in addition to their campus concerts.

Aware of the saying, "Variety is the spice of life," the women choose numbers to please every listener. Their music varies from the spiritual and classical to the contemporary types. This variety maintains quality through the versatility of the group director, Russell Mathis.

Besides entertaining their audiences, the Glee Club offered special enjoyment to its members at this year's annual Christmas Party and the Honors Banquet.

University Choir Is Honored Twice in Chicago

University Concert Choir began its special activities this year with a concert tour to Chicago sponsored by the Illinois Branch of the Music Teacher's National Association.

Later in the semester, during the holiday season, a Christmas concert and television broadcast on WILL-TV provided entertainment for audiences in the Champaign-Urbana area.

The Choir is the most advanced of all campus choral organizations. The sixty-five members, primarily students of the School of Music, are under the direction of Harold Decker.

The Choir made a second trip to Chicago during the spring semester, when the Chicago Alumnae Club represented them in a concert downtown. The five-day singing tour gave an opportunity for the Choir to present several concerts in the area, climaxing another successful season.

Sponsored jointly by the Agriculture Council and the Home Economics Clubs, Plowboy Prom is one of the highlights of the year for the students of the Agriculture college. This year's dance, held in April, featured the theme, "Moonlight Trail." Johnny Bruce and his orchestra furnished the music.

Career Conference

After a promotional contest to name their new mascot, Career Conference chairman planned a program in which over 60 fields of endeavor were represented. "Holidays Around the World" was chosen as the theme for the fifty-fourth annual YWCA Doll Show. Many organized houses competed in the event which sent originally-dressed dolls to orphanages and children's homes in the Champaign-Urbana area.

A study of existentialism was chosen by YWCA cabinet for discussion during the past year. This topic was suggested at the Y Conference held in Decatur. The cabinet is composed of the various area chairmen, the executive committee, and the directors. These people meet weekly for business and discussion periods.

The Little United Nations was sponsored again this year by the YWCA and YMCA. This model assembly is held once a month and is patterned after the UN General Assembly. People from various countries attended the sessions and discussed such topics as "Resolved: The People's Republic of China should be admitted to the UN." These assemblies are unique to the U. of I. campus.

It is Freshman Camp; it is International Suppers; it is reading the hometown newspaper in the lounge; it is forums on the Cold War today; it is coke and music in the Kaeser Room; it is a seminar on existentialism; it is a ping-pong tournament; it is the Little United Nations. Through its many and varied programs, the campus YMCA endeavors to emphasize all phases of campus life and help individuals gain a better understanding of national and international issues.

The YMCA is divided into eighteen specific activity areas which work from a central core. All students are welcome to serve on the various committees or participate in the Y's activities.

To avoid many small charity drives throughout the school year, Campus Chest focuses its attention on one annual fund-raising campaign held every spring. The contributions, made by every person connected with the University, are put into one fund which is allocated to numerous charities of local, national, and international scope. Two charities which share half the total donations are the World University Service and the University Scholarship Fund.

Stuart Goodman, director, and Jane Allison, associate director, coordinated the committees this year. They were assisted by student representatives who served in positions of major chairmen, sub-chairmen, and committee members. The faculty members also willingly supported work of all Campus Chest activities.

BARBARA KOZUB, Sno-Ball Queen

Sno-Ball Thrills Dance Crowd

New dancing slippers and freshly-pressed tuxedos made their way to the 1959 Sno-Ball on November 21. The lack of snow did not dampen the spirits of the crowd of students which filled the Illini Union Ballroom to dance to Johnny Rinaldo's Orchestra. The crowning of Bobbie Kozub as the 1959 Sno-Ball queen was the highlight of the evening.

Sno-Ball is co-sponsored annually by the Men's Independent Association and the Women's Group System.

Club Sno-Ball, held in a separate room, provided a change of pace for dancing feet, a place to sit down and relax, enjoy a soft drink, and listen to Joe Dean and his combo.

Sports . . . a Part of Student Life

Athletics play an exciting and important role in the life of the University of Illinois . . . they provide thrilling entertainment for students, bring national recognition to the University, give a sense of pride to the student body and alums, and unite the University community behind a common interest. Nothing can surpass the thrill of watching the football team score a last second touchdown for a victory . . . the excitement of a double overtime basketball game . . . the pride of the student body in having an All-American athlete . . . or the spirit of all the Fighting Illini teams, those teams that never quit fighting no matter how unsurmountable the odds may be.

The year between February, 1959, and February, 1960, produced its share of thrilling athletic contests and exciting triumphs for the Illini. At the end of the 1958-1959 school year it was announced the Illinois teams had been the most successful in the Big Ten that year by winning two conference titles and finishing second four times.

The gymnastics team was the most successful as it won an unprecedented tenth straight conference crown and finished second in the NCAA. Other winter sports also fared well . . . the indoor track team placed second in the Big Ten . . . the fencers also finished in the runner-up spot in the conference and added a fourth place in the NCAA . . . the wrestling team took fifth in the Big Ten meet . . . and the swimmers placed sixth in the conference championships.

With the arrival of spring came more exciting victories for Illini teams. The track team received national acclaim by setting a world's record for the sprint medley relay while competing at the Drake Relays. An exciting upset victory in the Big Ten meet and a ninth place finish in the NCAA were other accomplishments of Coach Leo Johnson's team. After starting off the season with sixteen straight wins, the baseball team finished with a 9-6 conference record, good for a second place tie. Finishing second in the conference championships was the tennis team while the golfers ran into a little hard luck and finished last.

The 1959 football season meant something extra to the Illini . . . it marked the end of the successful eighteen year coaching career of Ray Eliot . . . and the team produced many exciting moments. An upset victory over Army after a dismal opening game loss to Indiana . . . a great defensive game against Ohio State that produced the first victory over the Buckeyes in many years . . . a last second touchdown to defeat Wisconsin, the conference champions . . . and a resounding 28-0 triumph over Northwestern in the game which ended Eliot's career . . . all these showed the true spirit of the Fighting Illini. The player who was largely responsible for these victories, All-American guard Bill Burrell, became a campus hero . . . whether making a crushing tackle or an appearance at a pep rally, he received a tremendous ovation from the students.

To round out the year, the 1959-1960 basketball team added its share of thrills. Althtough they lacked the big men that other teams had, the cagers made up for this with a strong bench and sheer determination. Few who saw it will ever forget the excitement of the Illini's double overtime win over Purdue . . . this game typified the spirit of the team and its ability to come from behind when the game appeared to be lost.

Eliot Looks Toward '59 Season With Optimism

Day after day the interior linemen pound each other in practice; reflexes and power are ground to perfection. Weeks of this kind of work are responsible for the powerful Illini line.

The immediate problems that faced Eliot were the weaknesses at the end and quarterback positions. The opening of the latter position was sure to create a rugged battle among sophomore Mel Meyers, lettermen Johnny Easterbrook, Bob Hickey, and Russ Martin.

The 1959 season could find Illinois with one of the strongest front lines in its history. Heading this list of talented linemen was, of course, captain and All-American candidate Bill Burrell. Names like Joe Rutgens, Cliff Roberts, Darrell DeDecker and Don Yeazel were expected to appear often in the 1959 season.

The Illinois coaches looked forward to the backfield with optimistic views also. Speedsters like Marshall Starks, Dejustice Coleman and sophomores Johnny Counts and Ethan Blackaby were expected to give the Illini a swift running attack during the season. To round out this hopeful outlook, Ray Eliot had the services of Jim and Bill Brown, both possessing great potential at the fullback spot.

Hoosiers Defeat Illini 20-0 in Season's Opener

It was a bad day for the Illini at Bloomington, Indiana, both in terms of weather and of football. Thirteen Illinois fumbles, five recovered by Indiana, were all that were needed to turn the game into a 20-0 victory for the Hoosiers.

In the first half, the Illini fumbled eight times and never managed to get into Indiana territory. The Hoosiers took advantage of Illinois mistakes to score two touchdowns for a 13-0 half time lead.

Early in the second half, the Illini made their first strong offensive move. Under the guidance of sophomore quarterback Mel Meyers they moved down the field from the kickoff to Indiana's 16 yard line. A 15 yard penalty and an interception killed the drive.

Minutes later the Illini were knocking on the door again when Marshall Starks fumbled into the hands of an Indiana player. A fumble in the fourth quarter stopped another opportunity. Following this, a Hoosier end picked off Bob Hickey's attempted screen pass on the 36 yard line. Three plays later the Indiana tailback threw a 18 yard touchdown pass. The point after the touchdown was made and the final score read 20-0.

Illini Upset Cadets, 20-14, in First Home Game

Halfback Dejustice Coleman (dark jersey) is brought down by an unidentified Army defender after successfully catching a pass. Other players in the picture are Army guard Charles Butzer (60), Army end Otto Everbach (82), and Illini halfback Ethan Blackaby (41).

The cadets from West Point stand for the opening kickoff of the Illinois-Army game. The academy's entire senior class arrived on the campus early in the day, then marched in formation to the stadium, and entertained fans with a military drill before the game.

Sophomore Mel Meyers led the early attack by completing his first six passes and finished the game with eight completions in ten attempts for 115 yards. One of these was a sparkling 41 yard pass to halfback, Johnny Counts, for the Illini's first touchdown of the afternoon. Gerry Wood's kick was good and Illinois led by an upsetting score of 7-0.

The Illini weren't through scoring in the first quarter. Their second touchdown was set up by one of the four recovered Cadet fumbles. A bone-crushing tackle by captain, Bill Burrell, caused Army halfback Bob Anderson to fumble, the recovery being made by Doug Wallace on Army's 16. Jim Brown carried the ball over from the one yard line. Wood's conversion again was good and the score was 14-0.

In the second quarter, the Cadets shortened the lead by scoring on a 74 yard drive.

The Fighting Illini concluded their outstanding offensive performance in the third quarter by marching 45 yards in 13 plays for their third touchdown. The score was made by Bill Brown on a one yard plunge. In the fourth quarter Army tallied once again to make the final score 20-14.

Illini Defeat Buckeyes With 75 Yard Touchdown

Illinois' center, Tony Parrilli (50), drives across the Ohio State line as he tries to block a punt. Rough, hard, and determined play was instrumental in the Illini victory over the Buckeyes.

The Illini made it two consecutive wins for the season by downing the Buckeyes of Ohio State before a crowd of 83,000 in Columbus. Midway in the first quarter, quarterback Mel Meyers went back to pass and appeared to be trapped deep in his own territory; however, he managed to get rid of the ball. After being deflected by two Buckeye defenders, the ball was caught by Johnny Counts who sped across the goal line for the only touchdown of the game. In all, the play covered 75 yards and gave the Illini a 6-0 lead which they never relinquished.

Illinois rolled up an unbelievable total of 369 yards, while the highly respected offense of Ohio State was held to a mere 79 yards on the ground, the fewest it has been held to in five years. The greatest defensive stand came just after the second half got underway, when the Illini stopped the Buckeyes after they intercepted a pass on Illinois' 14 yard line.

Late in the final quarter, Don Yeazel added some insurance to the Illini lead with a field goal, making the final score 9-0, and giving the Illini their first victory over the Buckeyes since 1952.

Joe Rutgens (79), versatile Illini tackle, shows his tremendous power as he continually crashes through the Buckeye line to harass the Ohio State quarterback.

The Buckeyes pounce on Illinois' halfback, Marshall Starks (22), as tackle Don Yeazel (78) tries to come to his rescue. Cooperation of this type sparked the Illini to victory throughout the season.

Halfback Ethan Blackaby (41) speeds towards the Minnesota goal line after a 15 yard run as he scores the Illini's first touchdown in their 14-6 homecoming victory over the Gophers. Running interference for Blackaby is Illinois' All-American guard Bill Burrell (68).

Outstanding Illini Defense Defeats Gophers 14-6

The Illini, before a near capacity Homecoming crowd, defeated the Golden Gophers of Minnesota 14-6 for their third consecutive victory this year.

Illinois' first score came on a well executed play with Ethan Blackaby carrying the ball over from the fifteen. The conversion was made and the Illini led 7-0 until the fourth quarter.

The game was dominated by outstanding defensive play by both teams. Minnesota was held to a meager 82 yards rushing while the Illini could only pick up 121 yards against the rugged Gopher line. The Illini pass defense was also very good, holding the Gophers to seven completions in 29 attempts. Illinois' secondary came up with five interceptions to cut off Gopher scoring threats.

In the fourth quarter both offenses began to open up. A determined Minnesota team moved the ball down the field for a touchdown. However, they missed the conversion and the Illini's lead was protected. On the last play of the game, a very determined Jim Brown smashed over the goal line. The point after the touchdown was good and the Fighting Illini, with this 14-6 victory, made this year's Homecoming another wonderful success.

Unable to pass, Illinois quarterback Johnny Easterbrook tries to run around end to pick up some yardage. Attempting to bring Easterbrook down is Minnesota guard Jerry Shetler.

Powerful Nittany Lions Hand Illini 20-9 Defeat

Illinois' All-American guard Bill Burrell graciously accepts the Big Ten's most valuable player award, a silver football, from Wilfrid Smith, the sports editor of the Chicago Tribune.

Illinois took time out from its rugged Big Ten schedule to play the nationally rated Penn State Nittany Lions at Cleveland, Ohio. However, the Illini weren't "up" for this assignment and lost to the Eastern team 20-9.

The Illini took an early lead as Bill Burrell recovered a fumble on Penn State's 12 yard line. After the Illini lost two yards in three plays, Cliff Roberts kicked a field goal for a 3-0 lead. However, the Nittany Lions, led by All-American quarterback Richie Lucas, bounced back with two quick touchdowns and led 14-3 midway in the second quarter. Just before the half ended the Illini got their only touchdown. Halfback Ethan Blackaby intercepted one of Lucas' passes on Penn State's 22, and plays later Bill Brown plunged over from the one. The try for the extra point failed, and the half ended with the Illini trailing 14-9.

In the third quarter, Illini halfback, Gary Kolb, intercepted a pass on his own two yard line. Brown then fumbled on the first play; Penn State scored on the next play to take a 20-9 lead. This proved to be too great for the Illini to overcome as they were unable to score in the rest of the game.

Purdue Holds Illini to 7-7 Tie in "Must" Game

The Fighting Illini were held to a 7-7 tie by a powerful Purdue team. This was the game Illinois needed; a victory would have given the Illini a share of the Big Ten Title.

Purdue drew first blood by taking an early 7-0 lead. Illinois came back strong. Halfback John Counts led the drive picking up fifty-two yards in six carriers including a twenty-one yard touchdown run. With the score 7-6 in favor of Purdue, quarterback Meyers decided to play safe and kick the extra point. Wood made the point and the game was tied.

The determined Boilermakers time after time invaded the Illini twenty yard line. Each time the inspired Illinois' defense, led by All-American Bill Burrell who made twenty-six tackles in the game, held them scoreless. Twice Purdue tried for field goals, and twice the Illini line crashed through to block or deflect the kick.

The Boilermakers took revenge on Illinois in the last quarter. With seconds remaining in the game, Illinois had advanced to the Purdue twenty. A field goal was in order, but the Illini didn't have a kicker on the field. No more time outs were left so Illinois took a penalty to get the needed man on the field, and Wood had to kick from the thirty-two. The ball fell short of the goal post by six inches, leaving the final score 7-7.

The Reamers, a Purdue honorary, explode the Boilermaker Special. Members of Illinois' Tomahawk honorary and the Reamers have an annual exchange for the Illinois-Purdue football game.

The weather was dark and dreary as the Illini played Purdue to a 7-7 deadlock. In the above picture an Illini ball carrier falls forward after being hit by a Purdue defender.

The referee raises his arm to signal that Illini halfback Johnny Counts (48) has stepped out of bounds. On the ground is Purdue halfback Clyde Washington, who side-tracked Counts.

Halfback Marshall Starks (22) prepares to take a pitchout from quarterback Mel Meyers (17) in the Illini's 20-15 loss to Michigan. Running interference for Starks are fullback Jim Brown (37), guard John Gremer (63), and tackle Joe Rutgens (to the right of Gremer).

Title Hopes Vanish in 20-15 Loss to Michigan

The Wolverines of Michigan threw a wrench into the machinery of the Illini title hopes by defeating the Eliotmen, 20-15.

Illinois got off to a flying start by picking up nine points in the first nine minutes of play. A field goal and a follow-up touchdown started the Illini on what looked like a scoring holiday.

Michigan, however, had other ideas on how this battle would turn out. The Wolves, toward the end of the second half, drove the ball down to the Illini thirteen yard line. For three plays the Illini held. On the last down, Michigan faked a field goal and passed the pig over for six points.

Early in the third quarter the Wolves intercepted a pass on the Illini twenty-six. This set up their second touchdown, and gave the Wolverines the lead, 13-9. Michigan now saw a chance for victory; fighting hard, they scored again in the third quarter and lengthened their lead by seven points.

With the fourth quarter under way, the Illini showed their fighting spirit. Meyers engineered a scoring drive for Illinois and the gap was shortened to 20-15. With time running out, the Fighting Illini tried to take the lead, but it was all in vain.

Final Second Touchdown Upsets Badgers, 9-6

Illinois produced one of the season's biggest upsets by defeating the Wisconsin Badgers, Big Ten football champions, 9-6.

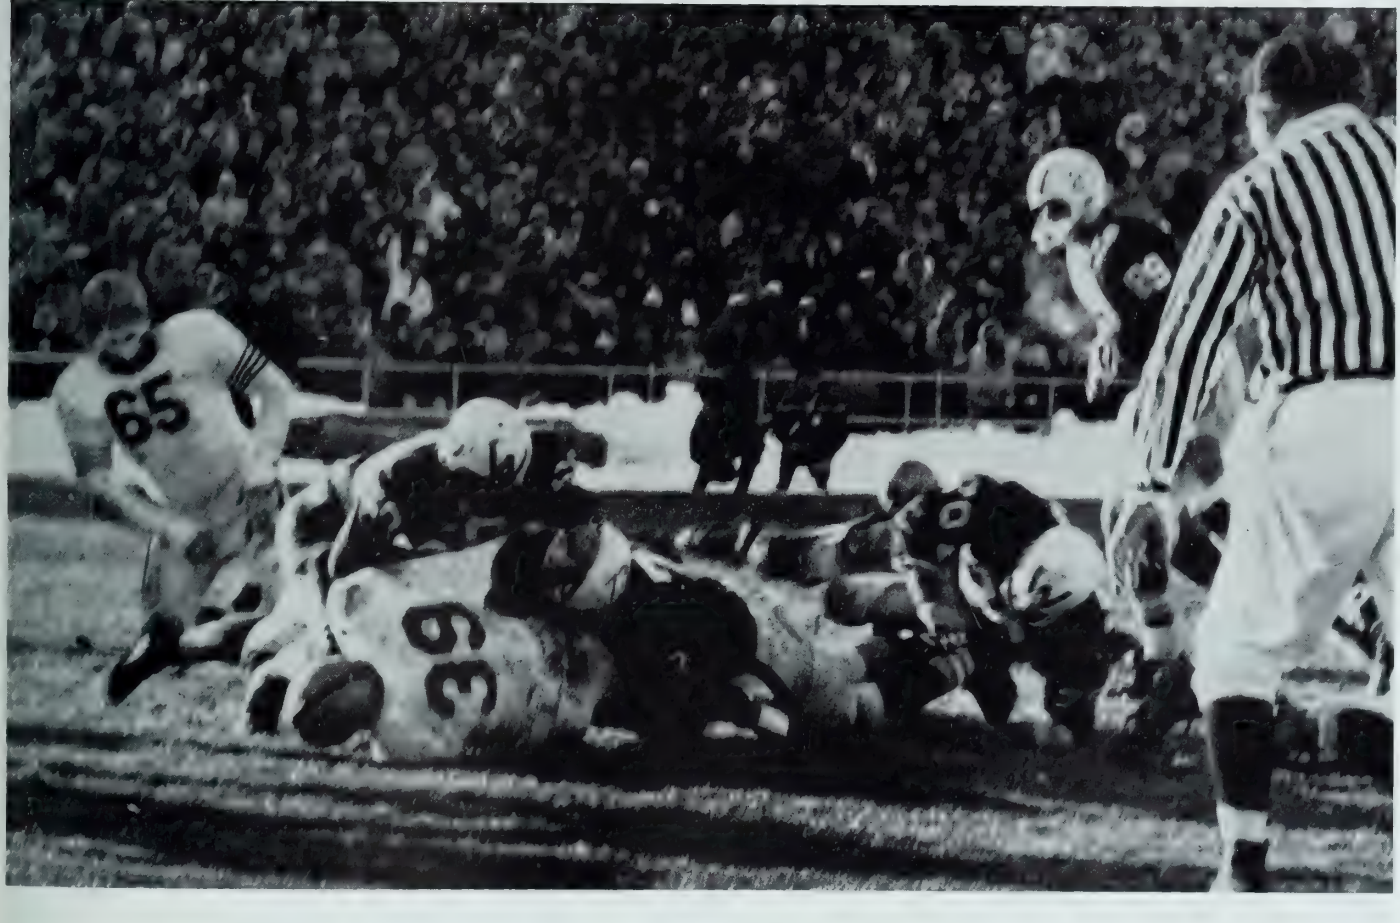

Early in the first quarter, the Illini were stopped on the Wisconsin six inch line. However, on Wisconsin's first play the Illinois defense trapped a Badger behind the goal line for a 2-0 lead. Wisconsin came back to score a touchdown, but the Illini line stopped the try for a two-point conversion, and the score was 6-2 until the end of the game.

With five minutes to go, Illinois took over the ball on their own twenty-two. Yard by yard, quarterback Mel Meyers and fullback Bill Brown moved the ball toward the Wisconsin goal line; with only seconds left, the Illini reached the Badger one yard line. The Wisconsin defense dug in; Illinois hit their line once and it held. Time remained for one more play. Meyers gave the ball to Brown and as the gun sounded the big fullback went over for the winning touchdown. The extra point was good, and the Fighting Illini recorded one of their truly great victories.

An Illinois lineman blocks out Wisconsin's All Big Ten guard Jerry Stalcup (60) to prepare the way for another of the frequent Illini gains through the center of the rugged Badger defense.

Fullback Bill Brown (39) plunges forward to give the Illini valuable yardage in their last minute touchdown drive against Wisconsin. This drive was culminated by a last second touchdown by Brown to give the Illini a 9-7 upset victory over the favored Badgers.

Team Pays Tribute to Eliot With 28-0 Victory

It was evident from the start that the Illini were not going to be stopped on the sunny November afternoon. After Illinois fumbled twice deep in Wildcat territory, halfback Dejustice Coleman returned a punt to the Northwestern nine yard line. Bill Brown plunged over from the one yard line two plays later. Early in the second quarter the Illini covered 45 yards in nine plays to give them a 14-0 halftime lead.

In the third quarter, Johnny Counts climaxed a 42 yard drive by scoring on a brilliant cut back run from the 17. The final score came in the fourth quarter when Bill Brown romped 69 yards from scrimmage for a touchdown. In all, Brown gained 164 yards in 19 carries to highlight the powerful Illini's offensive attack. On the other hand, Northwestern's vaunted offense never got started as the Illini line held the swift rushing attack to a total of only 36 yards.

This game was a fitting tribute to the end of Eliot's career. In fact, after the game most experts agreed that Illinois had the strongest team in the Big Ten.

Johnny Counts scores after a brilliant cut back run from the seventeen yard line to give the Illini a 21-0 lead in the third quarter of their 28-0 victory over Northwestern. Wildcat halfback Ray Purdin (46) attempts to catch Counts but his efforts are wasted.

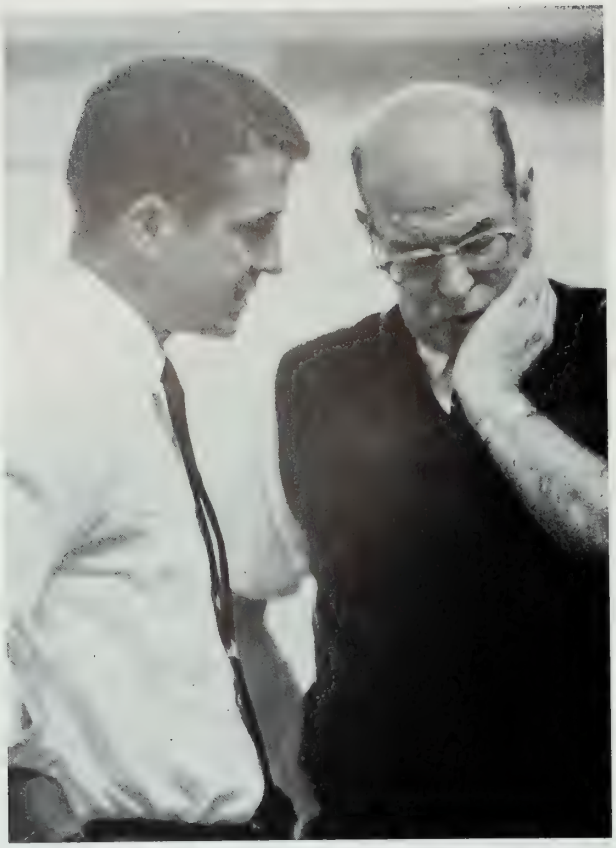

Coach Eliot's Last Day... Prayer, Conferences, Anxieties, Victory... Ends an Eighteen Year Era

"As we gather here today—
we take a moment, Lord, to pray—
that You will guide us in our play—and show us how to go Thy way.
Make us honest, fair and true—in this game and all we do."

—Written by Ray Eliot

Line coach Chuck Studley and Ray Eliot discuss the team strategy long in advance of the approaching football game.

The coach offers a few words of advice to junior quarterback John Easterbrook before he goes in for the Fighting Illini team.

The finish of the 1959 football season marks the end of a great coaching career. It marks the end of an eighteen year era. It marks the end of Ray Eliot's tenure as head coach of the "Fighting Illini." But it does not mark the end of the respect that the hundreds of thousands of Illini hold for the determined leader of the Illinois football team. This respect will not fade; it will grow into a legend, a legend that will be supported by the Big Ten championships of 1946, 1951, and 1953, by the Rose Bowl victories of 1946, and 1951, by the eight All-Americans that were tutored by the Dean of Big Ten Football, and by the remembrance of the many major upsets that Ray Eliot has produced. It can certainly be said of Coach Eliot that whatever he has done, he has done very well. True, his efforts did not always result in victories, but the record he has made is a good one. Ray Eliot's inspired teams have won eighty-three games, lost seventy-two, and tied eleven for a .533 percentage. When the time span of eighteen years is considered, this record becomes not only good but outstanding.

Although Ray will be leaving the bench, he will still be on the team. Coach Eliot will be taking over the position of Assistant Athletic Director here at the University of Illinois. From past performances alone, we know that Ray Eliot will do a fine job in his new position.

Coach Eliot tensely watches the action in a pose familiar to all of the Big Ten football fans.

Ray Eliot has had a great career at the University of Illinois. He has had his ups and downs, but he always came out first in the hearts of the team and fans. In 1942 when Ray became head coach he was determined to produce fine men and through them fine teams. He has succeeded admirably by producing such greats as Agase, Young, Vohaska, Tate, Brodsky, Karass, Caroline, and Burrell. He has tutored these All-Americans and other nationally prominent players such as Mitchell, Woodson, and Krietling. These men and all others that played with them profited from their association with the "Coach." Through these men the Dean of Big Ten Football has produced winning teams: teams such as the 1946 eleven which tromped UCLA in the Rose Bowl 45-14, and the 1951 gridmen who rolled over Stanford 40-7 in the post season classic.

In 1951 Coach Ray Eliot was chosen "Coach of the Year" in the national polls. Ray came close to capturing the title again this year. He was named "Midwest Coach of the Year" and placed third in the national voting. The final season of Ray Eliot's career as a coach has been a fitting one. He captured the third place slot in the Big Ten Conference; the team was ranked eleventh in the nation.

Eliot hugs his fullback Bill Brown (39) in appreciation for his tremendous play as Marshall Starks (22) and other Illini celebrate in the locker room.

Pete Elliott Succeeds Ray Eliot as Head Coach

The Fighting Illini received many post-season honors after their successful 1959 campaign. By finishing up with successive wins over Wisconsin and Northwestern, the team tied Purdue for third place in the Big Ten. In addition, they were rated fourteenth in the national polls and finished eighth in the country in total defense. Many individual honors were also awarded to the Illini. Ray Eliot, in his last season, was named "Midwest Coach of the Year," and took third place in the national "Coach of the Year" selections. Guard Bill Burrell received 29 individual honors; he was named to nine All-American teams, received the Big Ten's Most Valuable Player Award, was named United Press "Lineman of the Year," and played in three post-season games. Joe Rutgens and Bill Brown made the first and second All Big Ten teams, respectively.

Shortly after the season ended, Pete Elliott was named to succeed Ray Eliot as head coach of the Illini. Elliott, a native of Bloomington, Illinois, was the only twelve letterman in the history of the University of Michigan. He starred as both a halfback and quarterback from 1945 to 1948 and helped lead the Wolverines to two undefeated seasons and a Rose Bowl victory. After graduation, Elliott served as an assistant coach at Oregon and Oklahoma, and then was head coach at Nebraska for a year and at California for three years before coming to Illinois.

The prospects for Elliott's first season at Illinois are very good as there are 26 lettermen returning from the 1959 team. The entire backfield will return and will be led by captain-elect Bill Brown and his brother, Jim, at fullback, quarterback Mel Meyers, and halfbacks Johnny Counts, Marshall Starks, and Ethan Blackaby. Although the line will suffer heavily from the loss of Burrell, it will be bolstered by the return of two big tackles, Joe Rutgens and Cliff Roberts.

Veteran Basketball Squad Captures 11 of First 14

The biggest headache facing Coach Harry Combes as he began his 13th season as Illini cage mentor was that of finding a replacement for last season's play-making guard, Roger Taylor. In general, though, the Illini future looked bright as back into the lineup came eight lettermen. Three seasoned starters were Govoner Vaughn, a senior; this year's captain, Mannie Jackson; and John Wessels, a junior destined to fall scholastically by the wayside. Other familiar faces were Ed Perry, Vern Altemeyer, Bruce Bunkenburg, Lee Frandsen, Lou Landt, and Al Gosnell.

Govoner Vaughn makes it apparent just who is controlling the "boards" on this particular shot. In fact, the Govoner made a habit of snatching onto rebounds as he led the team in this field.

The cagers started the season in typical Illini fashion by winning the first six nonconference games and then dropping one to California, paced by its All-American center Darrel Imhoff, in the first Pacific Coast Tournament played by the Illini. Of the three midwestern schools that went West for the tournament, Northwestern, Michigan, and Illinois, all were soundly beaten by the host teams. Coming back under Big Ten nets, the Illini lost two consecutive starts, to top-ranked Ohio State led by their sophomore All-American Jerry Lucas, and, in an upset to Minnesota's Gophers. Then, seemingly, the Illini got their feet back on the court and won three impressive victories over Purdue, Michigan State, and, in a return match, the Golden Gophers of Minnesota.

Ed Perry finds himself all alone and takes advantage of the situation in typical Illini fashion. The speed and drive of the team gave them many chances for pass stealing or fast-breaking.

Illini Produce Thrills,

As happened last season, mid-semester break left Coach Combes with a few grey hairs. The Illini five came back to defeat a strong Notre Dame team, but after the game, it was learned that starting center John Wessels had become ineligible. Alternating Ed Searcy and Vern Altemeyer at the post, the cagers came up with a key win over Michigan to give them second place in the conference. Then against Michigan State, Illinois lost a heartbreaker. Trailing by eleven points, they came within one point of the Spartans when the clock ran out. Coach Combes rarely used the same starting five in any game, but relied heavily on his powerful bench. Jackson and Vaughn were the only two who saw continuous action. Lee Frandsen and Lou Landt were the heroes of an exciting 93-89 double overtime win over Purdue. Throughout the last ten minutes of the game, they sparked the team and scored the two final baskets. Next on the agenda was an encounter with the Ohio State five. The Illini might as well have stayed home as the Buckeyes romped to a 109-81 victory.

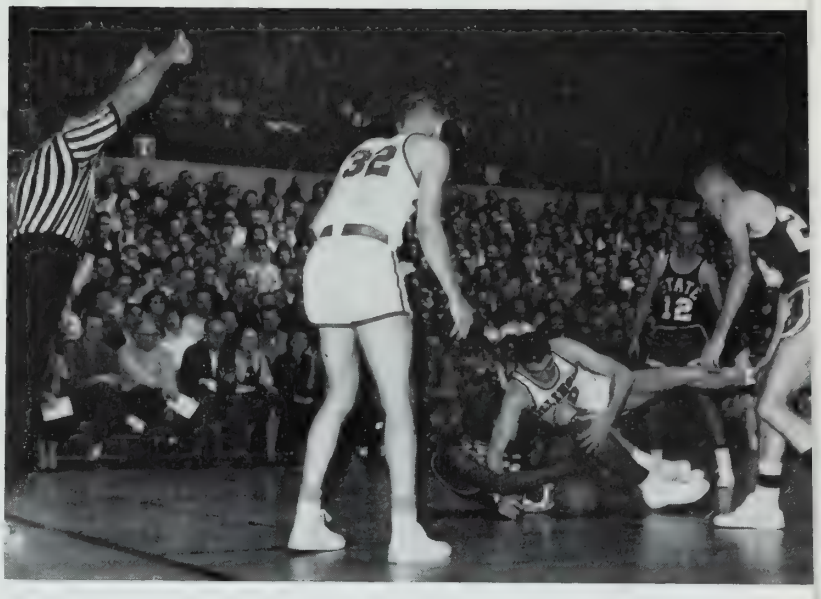

Strategy . . . strategy . . . and more strategy. The next but the bench, rated one of the strongest in the conference,

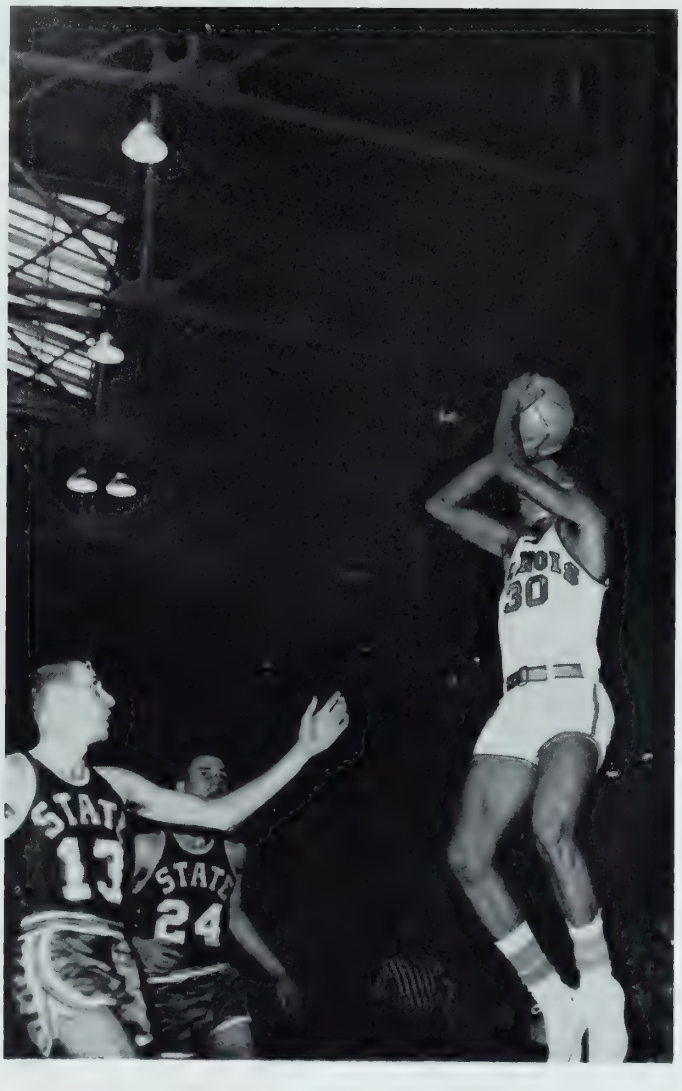

Let Downs After Break

The trip to Wisconsin proved to be disasterous, as the cellar dwelling Badgers upset the Illini in a 75-63 win. In playing host to Indiana, Illinois stood by as Hoosier center Walt Bellamy pumped in 43 points to set a new Huff Gym scoring record in a 92-78 Indiana victory. The Illini came back from these three defeats to produce victories over Iowa, Michigan, and Northwestern in the last games of the season. In the Iowa victory, Mannie Jackson's star shone brighter than at any other time in his Illinois cage career. He set the season's scoring mark with 32 points before fouling out late in the game. Govoner Vaughn hit his three year high by scoring 30 points against Michigan. The Illini Big Ten standing had been dangling between second and sixth place during the season, but the final tally put the team in a third place tie. The end of the season was also the end of the careers of the majority of the 1960 team. With only John Wessels returning from the starting five, Coach Combes is relying on next year's crop of sophomores and juniors.

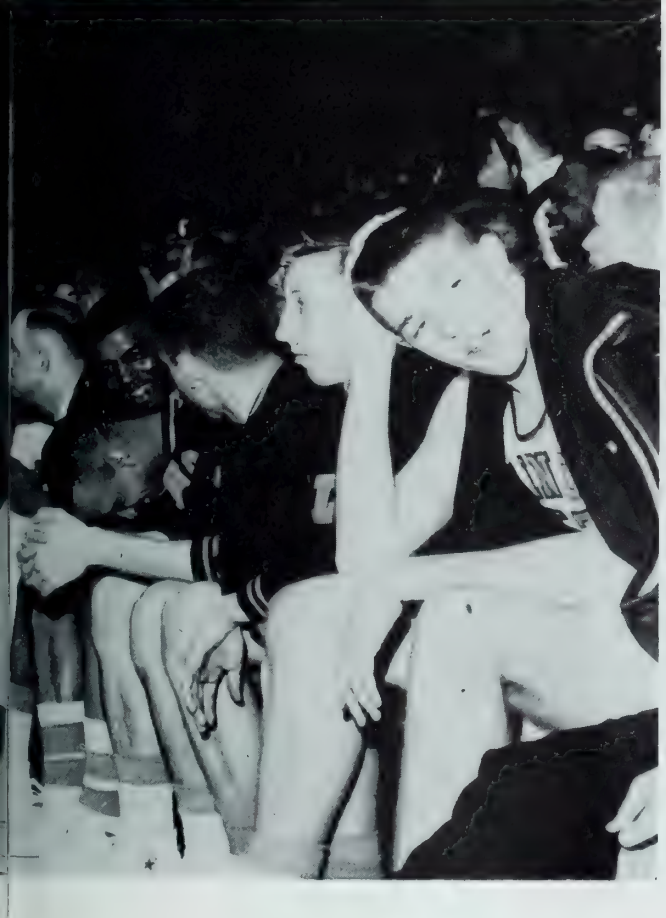

John Wessels, a man who won't take no for an answer, tangles with an equally determined M.S.U. player. The referee appears to be firmly decided as his thumbs-up gesture says "jump ball."

Lee Frandsen, often a team spark plug, lays in two points against Ohio State, while the O.S.U. great, Jerry Lucas, watches from the free throw lane.

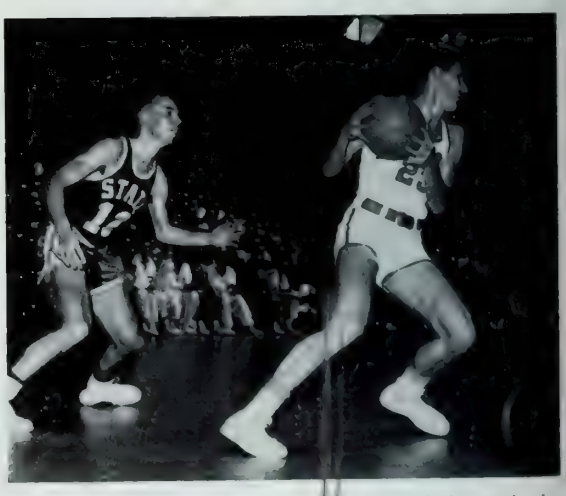

Al Gosnell looks back, seeking a "friend," as the scoreboard glows a healthy nine point lead.

Forward Ed Perry (22), battling for a loose ball, typifies the spirited and aggressive style of basketball coach Harry Combes' men are famous for.

Indoor Track Squad Loses Conference Crown

The star of Illinois' outstanding 1959 track team was middle-distance runner George Kerr (opposite page) who won the 880-yard run in the NCAA and set a Big Ten Meet record in the same event.

The 1959 Illini track season was highlighted by an upset win in the Big Ten outdoor meet, a ninth place finish in the NCAA, a world record shattering performance by the sprint medley relay team, and an outstanding individual performance by George Kerr.

The indoor squad started successfully with an impressive showing of seven first place finishes in the AAU Open Meet. They then won three straight dual meets without a loss, defeating Purdue, Michigan and Ohio State. In the Big Ten Meet held at Wisconsin, the Illini finishing second to Michigan took only two firsts, therefore failing to retain their title. Ernle Haisley and Ron Mitchell tied for first in the high jump while Larry Stewart won the shot put. Other Illini who placed high were George Kerr, second in the 440 and 880 yard runs, Ken Brown, second in the mile and fourth in the two mile, Paul Foreman, second in the broad jump. The Illini failed to place in six events, while Michigan placed in all but one to score 71 points.

Following the Big Ten Meet, several members of the team came up with outstanding performances in national meets. Ken Brown won the college mile and Ernle Haisley the high jump in the Milwaukee Journal Relays. Brown also won the two mile in the Central AAU Meet in Chicago, while Haisley finished first in the high jump in the Chicago Daily News Relays.

Sprint Medley Relay Team Sets World Record

The Illini opened the outdoor season by winning a dual meet against Missouri and then taking 11 out of 14 events in quadrangular meet with Iowa, Wisconsin, and Northwestern.

At the Drake Relays, April 24, the Illini made track history as the sprint medley team, consisting of Del Coleman, John Lattimore, Ward Miller, and George Kerr, set a world record of 3:17.8. Kerr ran the final half mile in a blazing 1:46.5, well under the world record for that distance. Kerr also ran a terrific anchor lap in the mile relay to give the Illini a second place finish. Other Illini to place were Ernie Haisley and Ron Mitchell, second and third respectively in the high jump, Bill Brown, fourth in the shot put, and Jim Bowers, fifth in the mile. After the Drake Relays, the Illini defeated Purdue and Ohio State to extend their unbeaten streak to 13 straight dual meets.

In the NCAA championships, Kerr won the 880 in 1:47.8, only .6 second over the meet record. In addition, Paul Foreman finished fourth in the hop, step, and jump, Miller placed sixth in the 100 yard dash, and Mitchell tied for sixth in the high jump to help the Illini finish ninth in the NCAA.

Starting the mile relay for Illinois is sprint star Del Coleman. Coleman placed in both the 100 yard dash and the 220 yard dash in the Big Ten Meet in addition to running in the relay.

Harold Harris appears exhausted as he approaches the finish of the two mile run. Harris was a consistent point winner for the Illini and placed third in the two mile in the conference.

Illini Successfully Defend Big Ten Outdoor Title

The Illini successfully defended their Big Ten Outdoor title by scoring 65½ points to second place Michigan's 45 points. Ward Miller finished first in the 100 and 220 yard dashes; George Kerr set a conference record while winning the 880 yard run; Ernie Haisley defended his high jump title and John Lattimore, Ted Beastall, Del Coleman, and Kerr won the mile relay.

In addition to helping the Illini in their meets, Kerr turned in some outstanding performances in national meets. He won the 880 in 1:49.4 in the Los Angeles Coliseum Relays and won the 440 in :46.3 in the Midwest AAU Open. Kerr represented his home nation, the West Indies, in the Pan American Games which were held in Chicago last summer. He finished first in the 400 meter run and a close second in the 800 meter run. In addition, he anchored the West Indies' 1600 meter relay team which set a new record.

The future for Coach Leo Johnson's team is very bright as Ron Mitchell and Larry Stewart were the only seniors on the '59 team. The other 19 lettermen will return in 1960 to help the Illini defend their Big Ten title and aim for a higher NCAA finish.

Illini track star George Kerr takes time out to relax in the center of the Memorial Stadium track. On the same afternoon Kerr set a stadium record of 1:49.9 while winning the half-mile.

Sixteen Game Winning Streak Begins Campaign

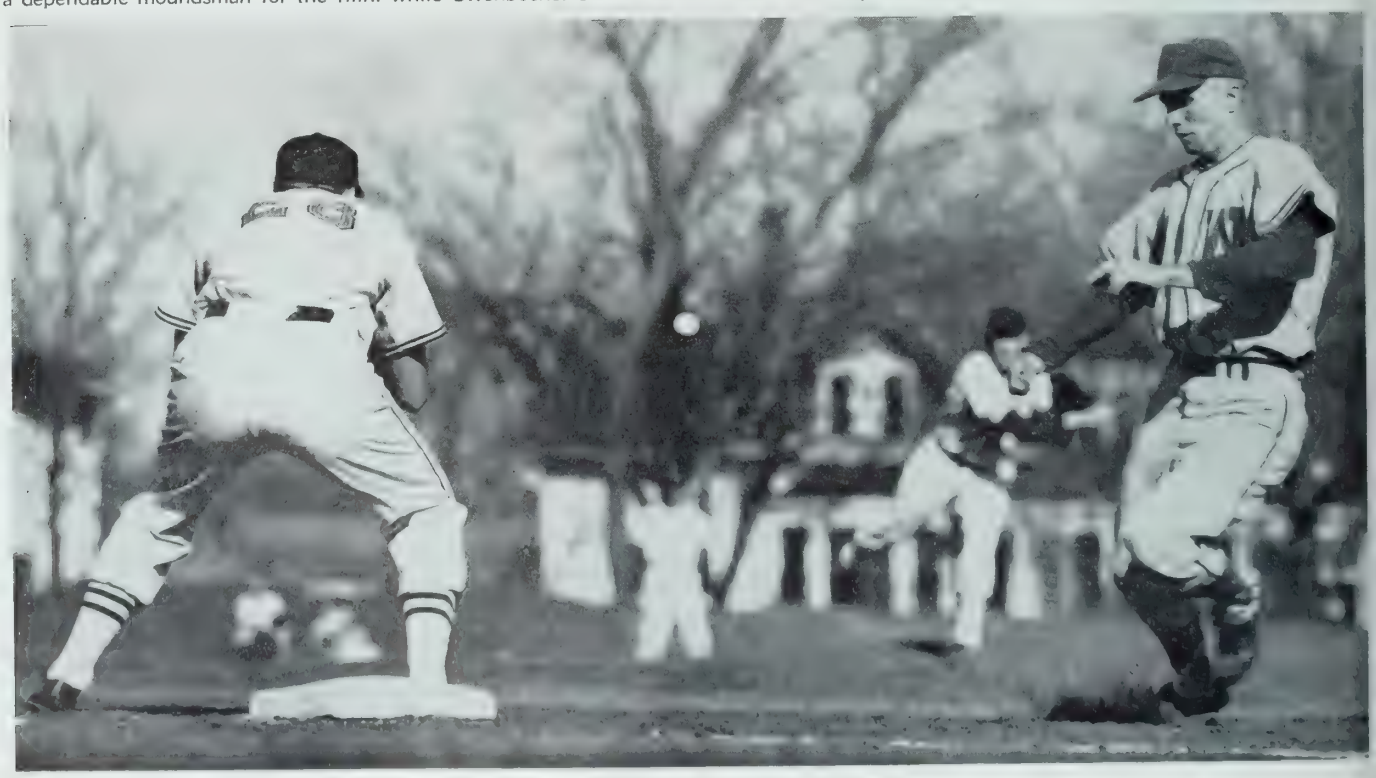

Sophomore Dave Gantt gave the Illini unexpected help in the pitching department as he compiled a 2-1 record for the 1959 season. Gantt also struck out 31 batters in 29 innings pitched.

Strong pitching and brilliant defensive play compiled a 22-9 season record for Coach Lee Eilbracht's baseball team. The Illini tied Wisconsin for second in the Big Ten with a 9-6 record, their best since 1947.

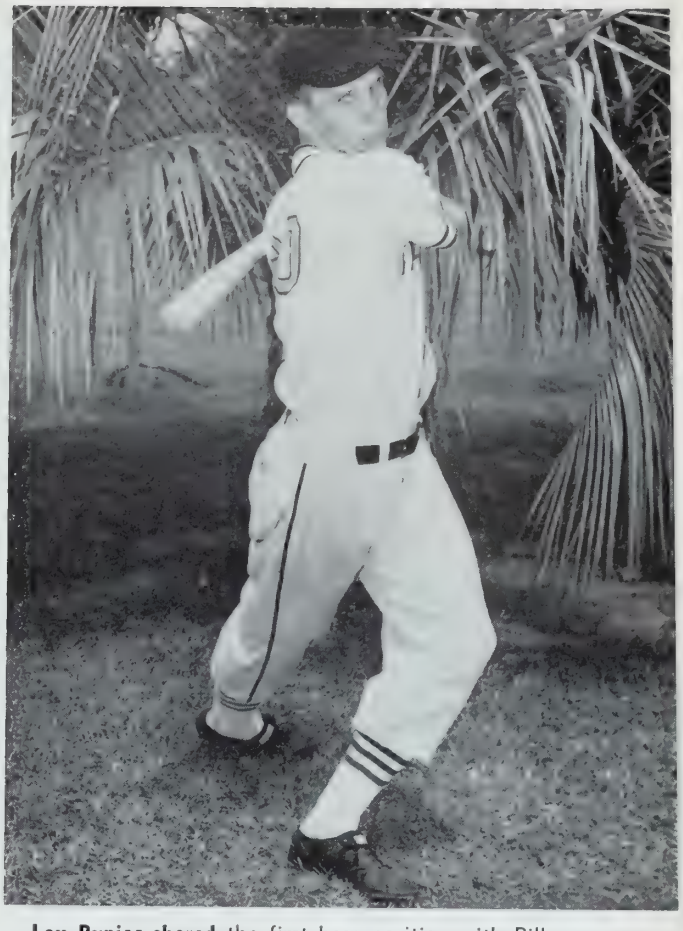

The Illini held spring training in Florida while competing in the Florida State Tournament in March. They won the first game, but then lost to Florida State 16-9. However, the Illini won the remaining four tournament games to take the unofficial title. After returning home, the Illini won seven straight non-conference games and opened the Big Ten season by defeating Wisconsin, taking a double-header from Northwestern, and two games from Purdue before finally losing 8-2 to the Boilermakers. This game ended the Illini's 16 game winning streak. The Illini remained in contention for the Big Ten title during the rest of the season due to a sparkling defensive team, which led the Big Ten in fielding percentages. However, they could not compete with Minnesota's championship team because of weak hitting, which placed them eighth in the Big Ten hitting statistics. The Illini lost all hopes of a title by losing a double-header to Indiana on the final day of the season and had to settle for a second place tie.

Pitcher Jack Delveaux fires over to first baseman Bill Offenbecher in an attempt to pick an opponent runner off base. Delveaux was a dependable moundsman for the Illini while Offenbecher shared first base with Lou Ryniec and compiled a .304 batting average.

Second only to Terry Gellinger was sophomore pitcher Paul Arneson. He won five and lost three, ranked second in innings pitched with 57 1/3, was also second in strikeouts, and a creditable 3.16 earned run average.

Lou Ryniec shared the first base position with Bill Offenbecher while posting a .232 batting average for the season. Only a sophomore, Ryniec will probably be a regular in 1960.

Highlighting the season was the splendid job turned in by Bob Klaus at shortstop and at the plate. He batted .364 and finished second in the Big Ten. He was unanimously named as the Most Valuable Player by the Illini, as he led them in almost every batting statistic. Klaus was also named to the NCAA district all-star team, the first All-American team, and was selected for the third year to the Big Ten all-star team. At the end of the season, Klaus was signed to a major league contract by the Cincinnati Redlegs.

Terry Gellinger led a sturdy Illini pitching staff with a 9-0 record. He also had a 5-0 record in Big Ten competition to tie for the top pitching record in the conference. He led the team with 64 strike-outs and pitched a one-hitter against Wisconsin to open the Big Ten season.

The Illini have been hard hit by graduation, but it is predicted that the 1960 season will be a good one, for there is a fast developing group of sophomores and juniors to take over the positions vacated by graduation. A couple returning regulars will be Captain-elect John Jurasevich, who led the 1959 team in runs batted in, and Terry Gellinger, the Illini's number one pitcher.

Junior Bob Madix was a valuable utility man for the Illini as he played both second base and all outfield positions. Madix had a creditable .270 batting average for the season.

The Illini's leading pitcher was Terry Gellinger, who had a 9-0 won-lost record and who won five games in the Big Ten.

Senior Don Harvey turned in an outstanding defensive performance as the Illini's regular second baseman during the 1959 campaign.

Gymnasts Take Tenth Straight Big Ten Crown

Patrick Bird, 1960 Captain, displays his versatility by performing on the side horse. Bird also competes on the parallel bars and rings. He scored at the Big Ten Meet in these events.

The 1959 gymnastic season saw Coach Charles Pond's team compile a 9-1 season record, take their tenth consecutive Big Ten title, and place second in the NCAA finals.

After suffering their lone dual meet setback, a 58-54 loss to Michigan late in the season, the gymnasts bounced back in the Big Ten meet to score 143 points for a strong first place finish, while Michigan tallied 104½ for a distant second place.

In search of their second straight NCAA title; however, the Pondmen fell short of their goal when a strong Penn State team swept the meet with a 152 point total to the Illini's second place 87½ points.

Lack of manpower was the Illini's big drawback again this year, but the lack was in part made up by the exceptional versatility and talent of the team members. Abe Grossfeld, team captain, and Don Tonry, both national title holders, led the team in scoring throughout the year with brilliant all-around performances. A host of specialty performers, Alan Harvey, Pat Bird, Jim Blazek, Gordon Claycomb, Tom Ruppert, and Ed Gombos, rounded out the team's list of consistent scorers.

For Coach Charlie Pond, whose teams have never lost the conference title, it marked another successful season, but the loss of many top-flight men could put Coach Pond in a tough spot in 1960.

Illini Swim Team Has Successful 1959 Season

Illinois diver Dick Eberhardy executes one of the compulsory dives in a dual swimming meet. The judges, seated at the tables, attentively study Eberhardy's dive and award him points for it.

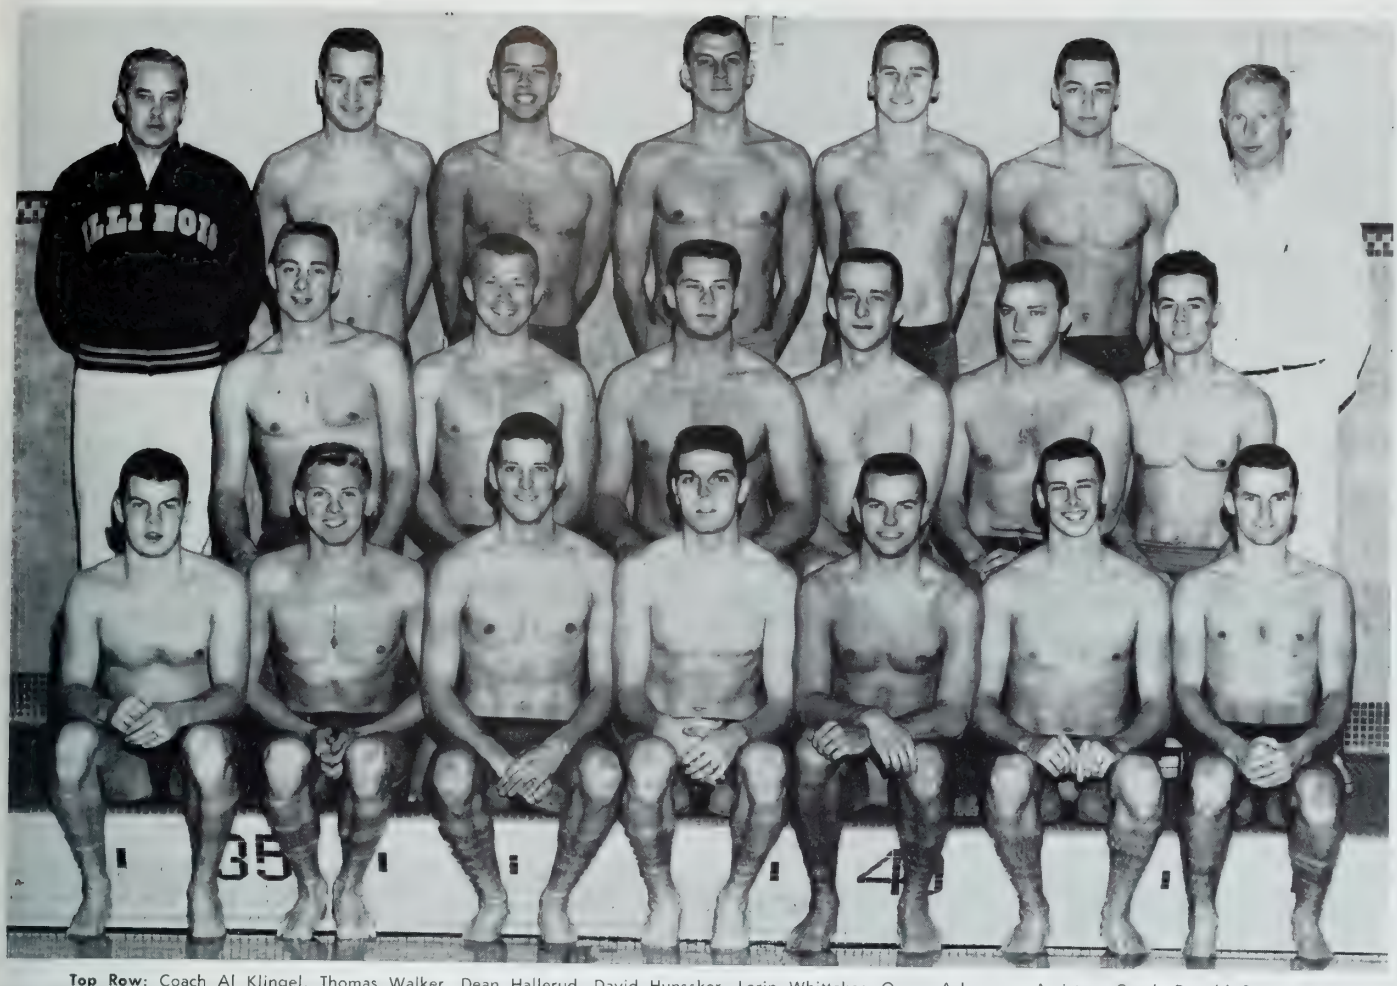

Once again Coach Al Klingle came up with a powerful tank team; but once again Big Ten competition stiffened to unprecedented heights and when the final tally sheets were in, the Illini tankers were sixth in the conference. However, the swimmers finished the season with a good 7-2 duel meet and tied for twelfth in the NCAA meet.

During the regular season the Illini won five dual meets against Big Ten competition and two against non-conference foes, while losing only to Ohio State and Indiana. In the Big Ten meet the Illini scored 16½ points. Their performances would have ranked higher in other years, but the Big Ten, led by powerful Michigan, put up the best competition in history. Joe Hunsaker placed second in the 200 yard individual medley and fourth in the 200 yard breaststroke to lead the Illini scorers. Owen Ackerman and Rock Sharer added points with sixth place finishes. The 400 yard medley relay team, composed of Ackerman, Sharer, John Donohue, captain-elect for 1960, and Hunsaker, placed fourth.

In the NCAA meet, Hunsaker failed to defend his title by finishing third in the individual medley. He also accounted for another point by finishing sixth in the 200 yard breaststroke. Ackerman's sixth place finish in the 200 yard backstroke accounted for the Illini's other point.

Pacing this year's team were Captain Dick Whittaker, Joe Hunsaker and Owen Ackerman. Throughout the season, the Illini depended on Whittaker for those all important points in the 220 yard free style and the 150 meter free style. Perhaps the most outstanding member of the squad was Joe Hunsaker. Joe had an exceptionally fine season by bettering the Big Ten and N.C.A.A. mark in the 200 yard individual medley with a time of 2:06.9. Ackerman finished the season with two records to his credit, setting meet records against Loyola and Northwestern.

A bright future for the Illini tankmen is promised by the underclassmen. The sophomores are paced by Bela Sandor, breaststroke and individual medley, and Joe Huyler, diver. The most encouragement is found in the freshman class in the personage of Larry Michelson and Peter Stelton. In the 220 yard free style, Michelson shattered the old record of 2:18.8 with a clocking of 2:15.3. Right on his heels was Stelton, hitting the poolside in 2:18.6. These underclassmen should help the Illini build a stronger team in future years.

The Illinois wrestling squad, although hit hard by injuries, succeeded in capturing fifth place in the Big Ten Championships. Coach B. R. "Pat" Patterson's matsmen won four, lost seven, and tied one in dual meet competition. The Illini grapplers scored 26 points in the Big Ten Championship matches on March 6-7 at Iowa City to make their position secure.

The biggest blow to the Illini was a shoulder injury suffered by Captain Werner Holzer in mid-January. As a result, Holzer missed all but four dual meets, and he was unable to successfully defend his Big Ten 147-pound championship. After winning three straight in the preliminaries, he was beaten in the finals by Wisconsin's Jim Innis.

With a 7-4-2 record, sophomore Tom Trousil was the leading wrestler in regular competition. Coach Patterson also got an assist from heavyweight Bob Salata, who pinned opponents in three of his last four dual meets.

Captain-elect of the 1960 team is Rex Whitlatch and Tom Gabbard was chosen most valuable squadsman by his teammates. The Illini hope to improve in the 1960 season, as Trousil, Salata, and several other lettermen will return.

Coach Max Garret's fencers had another successful season in 1959, winning eight of their twelve dual meets, placing second in the Big Ten standings, and tieing for fourth in the NCAA finals. Illinois, with Dave Kennedy winning the epee title, totaled thirty-one points in the conference finals but was nosed out by Wisconsin's thirty-seven. The Illini fencers accumulated fifty-six points in NCAA competition to rank behind Navy, New York, and Columbia.

Illinois' regular season found the fencing Illini victorious in eight dual meets. The Illini defeated Kansas 25-2, Chicago 21-6, Michigan State 20-7, and Notre Dame 14-13. The four losses, all on the road, were to the Air Force Academy, Buffalo, Wayne, and Wisconsin.

Leading the Illini were Abbey Silvertone, 1960 captain-elect, and Kennedy, the team's most valuable player, both of whom were named to the second All-American Team. Kennedy also won the Big Ten epee title and finished fourth in NCAA meet. Silverstone finished fourth in Big Ten epee and in NCAA foil competition. Both of these fencers will be returning in '60 to give the Illini a good nucleus.

1959 captain Al Holtmann filled the number one singles spot for the Illini and had a 10-5 season record. Holtmann teamed up with Bob Breckenridge to win 11 and lose two doubles matches.

Illinois' netmen finished the '59 season with a 12-3 record in dual meets and finished second in the Big Ten Meet for the second year in a row.

Captain Al Holtmann filled the number one singles position and finished the season with a 10-5 record. The first doubles spot, filled by Holtmann and Bob Brechenridge, had an 11-2 record. Breckenridge and Danny Mesch, the only newcomer on the experienced team, tied for the honor of high man on the team with 13-2 records.

The only match Coach Howie Braun's powerful team lost in Big Ten competition was the last match of the season against Michigan. This was a real disappointment after a season highlighted by four shutout meets against midwestern teams.

Illinois finished second behind Mighigan in the Big Ten Championships. Breckenridge, Joe Epkins, and Mesch all lost in the single finals, while the doubles teams of George Gilmore and Epkins, and Mesch and Bob Lansford also placed second. The formidable Michigan team compiled a perfect score of 87.

Next season's team will be captained by Epkins, a junior who compiled a 10-3 record for last season. Also returning will be Gilmore, who had a 9-6 record, Mesch, and Lansford, who had a 10-5 record.

Golfers Win Four And Lose Eight Dual Meets

Illinois' golf team, headed by Tom Orsi with a 7-4-1 record, compiled a 4-8 season record in dual meet competition, but slipped to last place in the Big Ten championships at the University of Michigan. The Illini were successful against Wabash, 31½ to 4½, twice against Washington of St. Louis, 34 to 8 and 13½ to 1½, and against Bradley, 17 to 1. Captain Tom Orsi, in addition to having the best won-lost record, led the team with a total of 37 points to his opponents' 29. Other Illini golfers who compiled winning records were Ron Cwik with 7 wins and 5 losses and George Niva with a 6-5-1 record.

At the Big Ten Championship Meet the low man on Coach Ralph Fletcher's team was Bob Almquist with a score of 328 for 72 holes. Almquist was elected captain of the 1960 team. Letters were awarded to Orsi, Almquist, Cwik, Niva, and Clem Georlett. Almquist and Georlett will form the nucleus of the 1960 team.

Left: While winning his third varsity letter, George Niva had a 6-5-1 record and outscored his opponents 33½ to 32½.

New Pom-Pom Section Adds Spirit to Cheers

Enthusiastically leading the fans in a cheer during a time-out of an Illini basketball game is cheerleader Lesley Simmonds.

After a two week process of elimination, eleven regular and four alternate cheerleaders were chosen for the varsity squad from a try-out group of approximately 300. This squad then practiced three hours a week in order to improve their cheers and to devise new ones.

The cheerleaders enjoyed the privilege of being able to fly in a University Chartered Plane to the away football games. In addition, they led the parades to the pep rallies, as well as the cheers at the rallies and at the games.

Highlighting the cheering group at home football games was the new pom-pom section. The section, consisting of sixty students, was selected by process of elimination, from a group of hundreds. This section served various purposes—it instilled spirit in the crowds by cheering, added color to the grandstand by waving blue and orange pom-poms, and most important of all, the members learned the cheers with the accompanying motions so that they would be well acquainted with them for spring tryouts.

Assisting the cheerleaders were two tumblers. Alvin Barasch and Harold Holmes, a Pan-American tumbling champion, performed various stunts during the games. At the beginning of each game, they led the football team into the stadium while performing their amazing feats.

The Tribe of Illini is a social organization composed of all men on campus who have earned a major "I" in varsity athletics. The Tribe has as its purpose the aim of fostering relations between "I" men and the rest of the student body. This fostering of relationships was shown last spring when the members of the Tribe aided the University officials in breaking up the annual campus water riot.

The plans of the I-men for the coming year include their annual picnic, the selling of Illini pillows, and once again stopping over-zealous student outbursts concerning water.

In addition, the Tribe presents a trophy each month to the Illini athlete who has turned in the most outstanding performances that month.

Abe Grossfeld Named

Gymnastics star Abe Grossfeld was voted Illini Athlete of the Year in 1959 by a poll of students and faculty, and he received the Lion Gardiner Memorial Award for this honor. It was the first time that a gymnast has ever won the award. Grossfeld also received the 1959 Illinois Conference Honor Medal which is awarded for proficiency in scholarship and athletics. As captain of the gymnastics team, Grossfeld led the team to their tenth straight Big Ten title and second place in the NCAA. He repeated as all-around champion and won the still ring title in the conference meet, and finished fourth on the parallel bars in the NCAA. Grossfeld was also named most valuable member of the team.

One of the best linemen in Illinois football history is guard Bill Burrell, captain of the 1959 team. Burrell received 29 awards for his outstanding work as defensive center linebacker and offensive guard. By being named to nine major All-American teams, including AP, UPI, and Football Writers of America, he became the eighteenth consensus All-American from Illinois. The Big Ten coaches selected him as the most valuable player in the conference, for which he received a silver football from the Chicago Tribune. In addition, Burrell was named "Lineman of the Year" by the United Press, and he tied with Dale Hackbart of Wisconsin for the "Midwest Player of the Year" award. Burrell competed in three post-season bowl games and was named most valuable player in the Copper Bowl.

Runner-up to Grossfeld in the Illini Athlete of the Year voting was track star George Kerr, one of the best runners in the country. Kerr anchored the Illinois medley relay team which set a world's record, and ran the last half mile of this race in a blazing 1:46.5, well under the world's record for that distance. In the conference meet Kerr won the 880 yard run in a Big Ten record time of 1:50.1. He led the Illini to a ninth place finish in the NCAA by winning the 880 in 1:47.6. During the summer Kerr represented his home nation, the West Indies, in the Pan American Games and won the 400 meter run and finished second in the 800 meter run.

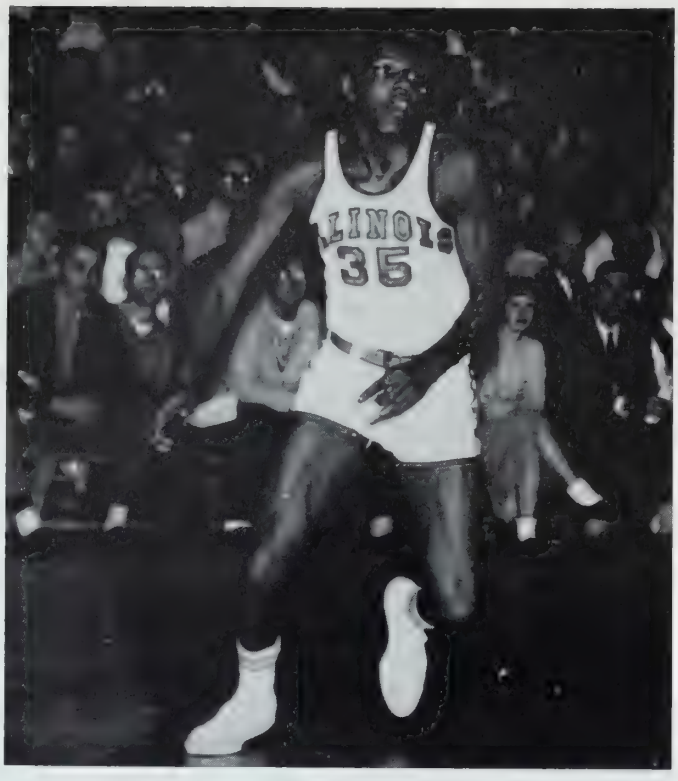

Athlete of The Year

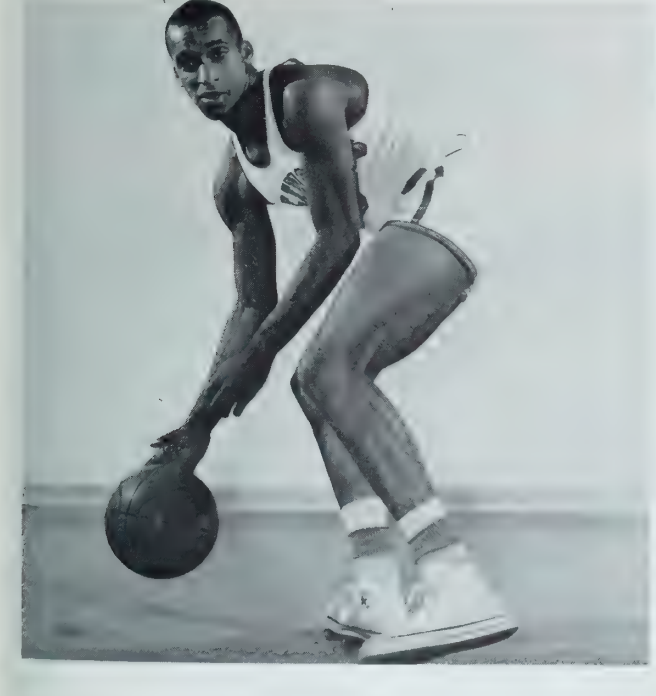

Govoner Vaughn (upper right) was chosen as the most valuable player for the past basketball season. Vaughn took the Ralf Woods memorial trophy for the best free throw percentage at .875, and he had a shooting average of .459. For this season, Vaughn had 411 points and a total of 1,001 points in 66 games. This makes him the third highest scorer in Illinois basketball history.

The baseball team was well represented in honors due to Bob Klaus, senior shortstop. Klaus (center) was on the Big Ten all-star team for the third year, the NCAA district all-star team, and the first team All-American. In Big Ten competition Klaus batted .364 and finished second. He was unanimously chosen as the most valuable player by his teammates.

Joe Hunsaker (lower right) was chosen as the most valuable player by his teammates. In the 1959 season Hunsaker set several varsity records: 100-yard free style, 51.0; 200-yard individual medley, 2:06.8; and as part of the 400-yard medley relay which finished in 3:54.4. In the NCAA Championships Hunsaker finished third in the individual medley and took sixth in the 200-yard breast stroke.

Basketball captain Mannie Jackson (lower left) totaled 32 points against Iowa to lead the Fighting Illinois team for the most points in a single game. Jackson compiled a .413 shooting average for the season. He totaled 378 points this season and has 922 points for his career total. In the 79.6 points per game Illinois scoring average, Jackson and Govoner Vaughn provided 34.5.

Intramurals—An Integral Part of Student Life

The intramural track meet offers to all amateur trackmen a chance to test their prowess. All those who compete in pole vaulting, broad and high jumps are put to a severe test of their skills. Every track sport except the shot put and discus are engaged in by students.

The backbone of the Intramural and Recreational Sports program consists of the IMREC Board and the sophomore and junior managers. The three groups are responsible for the well organized, smooth running, successful organization that is synonymous with the I-M program today.

The competitive spirit and never-say-die attitude of the Illini make every game a thrill to watch. I-M and recreational sports draw hundreds of spectators who give their undivided support to their favorite team. Next to varsity competition, I-M and recreational sports are the most popular activities on campus.

Co-Recreational sports offer men and women a chance to combine their talents in producing a well rounded team. Through the combination of these efforts, Co-Rec sports can be the most interesting activity found on the Illinois campus. The Co-Rec sports program provides an opportunity for the coeds to reveal their athletic prowess and for men to try to defend theirs.

Faculty and staff members also are given an opportunity to show their athletic ability. Through faculty sports, they can compete with athletes of their own caliber and endurance. Here is where the faculty and staff pursue the sport they favored in college.

A short pass over center sparks the drive in a hard fought intramural football game. Often the only way to move the ball is by passing. A few yards on a short pass or a well-executed long pass may bring the offensive team closer to a touchdown and perhaps victory.

Because of the touch tackle rules, intramural football is mainly a passing game. Pass defense becomes one of the major goals of competing teams; a team with a good pass defense can go far.

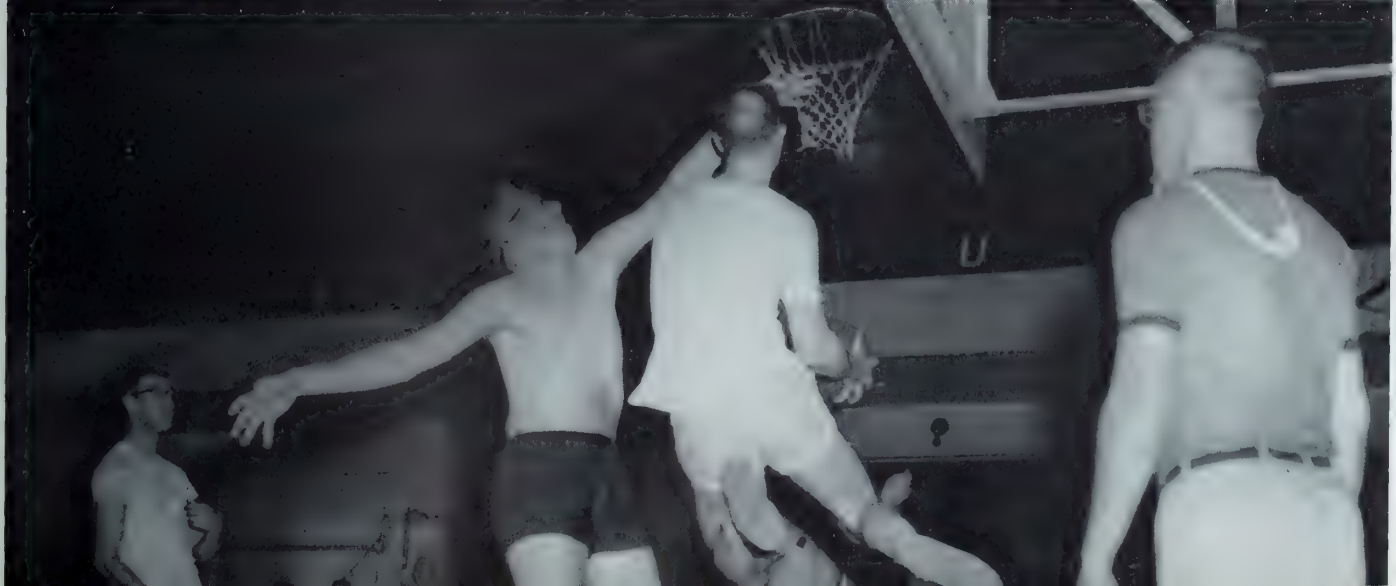

Moving in for that all important shot brings anxiety to the face of this player. He is being well guarded, and who knows what difference a couple of points will make? It may mean the game.

Off the floor and up in the air for two good points. Rough, rugged, hard fought play characterizes most intramural basketball games.

In I.M.'s it takes an effort to keep the defense out. Without protection a quarterback, no matter how good he may be, is useless.

A score! This is the thing that makes a player feel good. Often that extra point is the difference between victory and defeat.

As in all sports, there are grim moments as well as happy ones. Here a player is injured; the game is stopped while the referees do all they can for him. It is easy to see that even though I.M. sports are played fairly, they are, nevertheless, played aggressively.

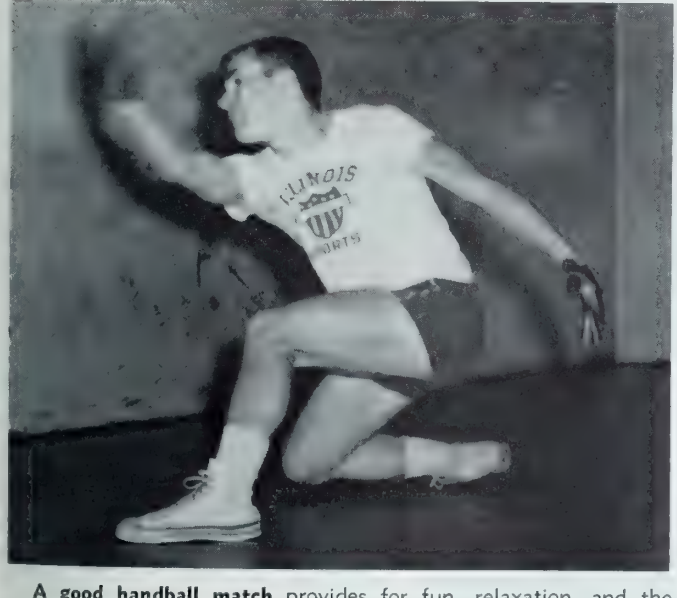

At the intramural outdoor track meet, held every spring, the participants put forth their mightiest efforts. To win in track is a double honor; the championship honors the individual and his house. Along with the honor goes the more tangible reward of all—a trophy.

The intramural program at the University of Illinois is one of the broadest in the Big Ten. The program is divided into three main categories; intramurals, recreation, and faculty staff. This provides all members of the student body and staff with an organized, competitive program to enjoy during their time of relaxation. All three categories are coordinated by the IMREC staff headed by Al Klingle.

The intramural division encompasses major sports which are based on an annual point competition basis. Most organized male houses, Independent and Greek, are active in the program. Competition is tough; the house compiling the most points gains possession of the traveling intramural trophy; all houses strive to attain this honor. Last year Phi Delta Theta received the trophy in the "Greek" division; Evans Scholars captured the Independent crown.

A competitive non-point program for students is provided by the recreation category. Organized houses, both male and female, compete in sports such as volleyball, bowling and baseball. Trophies are given to the champion in each sport. The Co-Rec program provides an excellent opportunity for socializing; what better time to ask for a date, than after an afternoon of baseball?

The faculty and staff are given a chance to work off their extra steam by playing organized sports. Sports, ranging from tennis to basketball, comprise the faculty-staff category. What better way is there to spend a Saturday evening than bowling with the team? All members of the faculty and staff are invited to participate in the program.

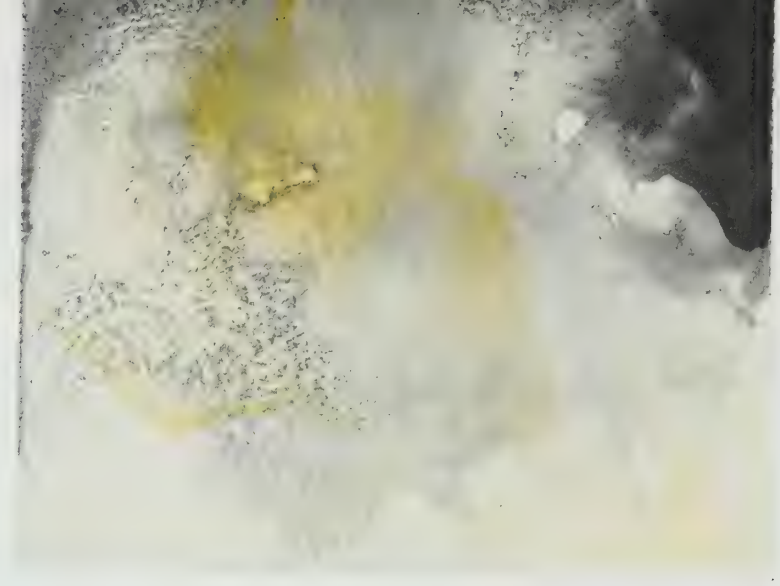

A good handball match provides for fun, relaxation, and the knowledge that you are playing in a competition for first on campus.

HONORARY ORGANIZATIONS

Each University of Illinois student is outstanding in some individual way; honorary organizations are a means of recognizing some of the individual strong points that all of us possess. The prime emphasis of honoraries is upon scholarship—a choice which seems reasonable since we are here at the University of Illinois primarily in order to gain knowledge.

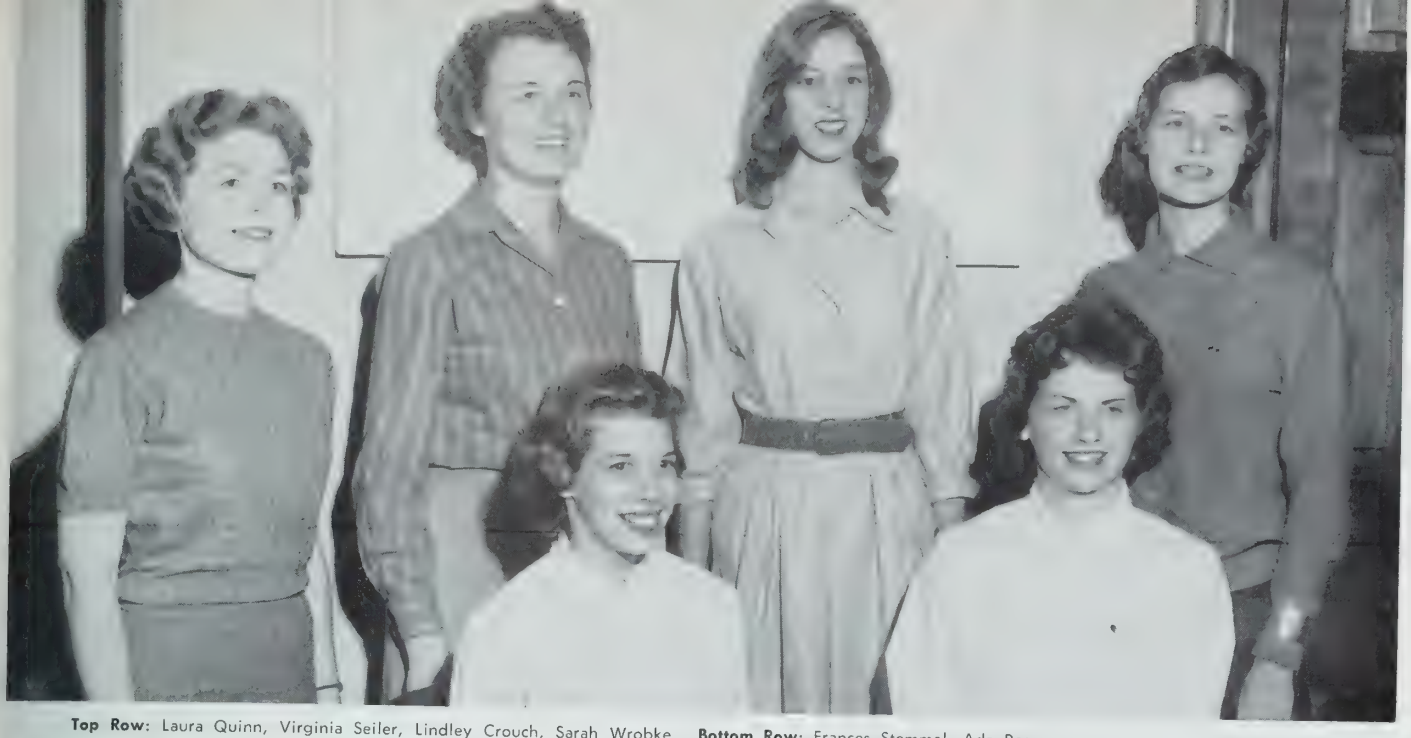

On the surface, honorary organizations may seem to be an end in themselves, that the recognition of outstanding abilities and personal traits is their sole purpose, that once a student is elected to membership his work is finished. However, the opposite is true; honorary organizations are a means to an end rather than an end in themselves. The student who is a member of an honorary group feels that in return for being honored by election, he owes something to the University community. Therefore, most honorary organizations perform outstanding service projects. For example, Alpha Lambda Delta, sophomore scholarship honorary, in connection with the office of the Dean of Women, provides a free tutoring service for freshman women. These women are recommended by the Dean of Women for this service. Phi Eta Sigma, which is the men's sophomore scholarship honorary, performs a similar tutoring service which is made available to all freshman men who are recommended for it. Several honoraries direct their service projects toward deserving non-University agencies. Theta Sigma Phi, for example, collected used books to send to children in other countries this year.

Alpha Chron

Watcheka Sing presented on Mother's Day weekend was the big activity sponsored by this organization. Proceeds of this program were used to finance a number of scholarships for women of above freshman standing. Exchanges with other honorary groups provided many interesting parties for the members. Members of this sophomore activity honorary are selected by residences which are members of WGS.

Alpha Lambda Delta Provides Tutoring Service for Freshman Women

This year "Alpha Lams" continued their freshman assistance program. Girls with scholarship problems were recommended to the organization through the Dean of Women. The "Alpha Lam" assistance chairman then looked through her files to see which member of the group would be best qualified to help the girl in the particular course in which she had had difficulty. The "Alpha Lam" member then contacted the girl to arrange tutoring times.

To help chapters at other colleges to benefit from their experiences, members of the Illinois chapter sent a newsletter to these chapters in the fall. In return, they received many letters containing ideas for programs that have been used by the other chapters.

This scholastic organization invited all freshman women with a 4.5 average to become members. Initiation ceremonies were preceded by a banquet with Phi Eta Sigma.

In late spring of 1959, a new campus organization was born; Angel Flight was formed in order to serve as a sponsor corps to Arnold Air Society. Charter members soon began their active program which included acting as hostesses at Honors Day, forming a drill team and helping to hold the "Blue Yonder Workshop," a program designed to help future Air Force wives in adjusting to their new roles.

Alpha Zeta

Alpha Zeta is an honorary fraternity which is composed of the most outstanding students in the College of Agriculture. Selection of the outstanding instructor and freshman student in the College of Agriculture was the most important project of the year for the members of this organization. On the social side, the pledges planned for the actives an exchange party with a home economics honorary.

Meetings of Arnold Air Society this year were all very thought-provoking. Especially so was the meeting at which the flying safety officer from Chanute Field demonstrated safety equipment. He tried, with no success, several times to inflate a supposedly self-inflatable life raft. At last, quite discouraged, he looked at his eager audience and concluded that he would not make another attempt, for a pilot trying to inflate such a raft would certainly be drowned after such a delay. At other meetings Col. Bagby spoke about "Mobile Foxtrot," and U. of I. physicist Cline Wittenbury discussed aerodynamics and the reentry of missile nose cones into the earth's atmosphere.

The co-sponsorship of Angel Flight and Arnold Air Society added "spice" to a dance, picnic, book drive, and High School Circus display. In addition, this society presented air education speeches to high school students.

In addition, the organization was host to the national conclave which was attended by delegates from the chapters of Chi Gamma Iota which are located at colleges throughout the United States.

Three achievement awards were presented by the organization. They were awarded to the outstanding member, veteran and advanced ROTC student enrolled here at the University.

Founded in 1947 at the University of Illinois, this national organization encourages scholastic achievements of servicemen on the campus and assists them in keeping abreast of their privileges and duties as veterans. Membership is restricted to armed forces personnel, veterans, and advanced ROTC cadets who have obtained at least a 4.0 scholastic average.

For this group, the outstanding event of the year was a field trip to the University of Illinois College of Dentistry at Chicago. At the regular meetings, the group presented a series of guests in the dental profession. With this type of program, the organization hoped to create fellowship among the undergraduate members and provide them with a better understanding of the dental profession.

This year the society established an information center for new electrical engineering students who are interested in gaining information about engineering courses and possible careers in this field.

Phi Eta Sigma Mid-semester Smoker Promotes Freshman Scholarship

During the fall, Phi Eta Sigma members sponsored a smoker for all freshman men whose scholastic averages at mid-semester reached at least 4.0. By means of the smoker, the organization hoped to encourage these men to obtain the degree of scholastic excellence which is required for their initiation into its membership. At the end of their freshman year, men who had earned at least a 4.5 scholastic average were invited to join the fraternity.

On October twenty-third and twenty-fourth, 1959, the Phi Eta Sigma chapter at the University was host to the annual regional conference of this national scholastic fraternity.

During this year, Phi Eta Sigma conducted a successful tutoring program which was available to all freshman men enrolled in the University. To further this freshman assistance program, the fraternity published a booklet giving helpful study hints for new students.

Field Trips to Defense Works Highlight Year for Phalanx Members

Members of Phalanx saw first-hand the workings of our national defense system when they visited nearby military installations; one such field trip was made to the Ordnance Ammunition Command near Joliet, Illinois.

This military honorary formed a rifle team this year. The team invited rifle squads of other military organizations to compete in rifle matches. To further social interests, the group held a dinner before the Military Ball for members and their dates.

Phalanx tried this year to prepare its members for their years of military service. Many of the meetings of the group featured speeches by military personnel. Topics of these speeches ranged from purely military subjects to topics about everyday life as related to military themes. At Military Honors Day in May, Phalanx gave several awards which recognized outstanding ROTC students.

Shi-Ai Combines With Sachem for Annual Mother's Day Weekend Sing

For the first time since their foundings, Shi-Ai and Sachem combined their efforts for the presentation of a Mother's Day weekend sing. Each group selected a chairman to direct the plans for the very successful event.

Members of Shi-Ai are chosen by the campus sororities; this year each sorority selected the two members of its sophomore class who were most outstanding in activities. In previous years, the two members from a sorority worked together to present a skit as a part of their pledging duties. This year, two sororities were paired for giving the skits. The groups of four girls then presented their skits at one of the meetings of the group, where they were judged. The winning skits from the east and west sides of the campus were chosen and trophies awarded to the participants. The dinner hours of all campus sororities were then livened by the presentation of these winning skits.

Illinois Chapter of Sigma Iota Epsilon Installs Chapter at Wayne State

Early this year Alpha chapter of Sigma Iota Epsilon, which is located on this campus, was asked by the national organization to travel to Wayne State University to install a chapter there. The new chapter is the ninth branch of the organization to be created.

Membership in this honorary and professional management fraternity is limited to students who have at least a junior standing in any college, a 4.0 scholastic average, and an active interest in the field of management.

The Illinois chapter of SIE was chosen during the first semester to publish "The Manager's Key," a magazine containing articles written by prominent businessmen and scholars. This publication studies problems in the field of management and offers solutions for them.

Meetings of the organization were highlighted by speeches by several men who are known nationally for their work in management.

Sigma Tau was founded at the University of Nebraska in 1904 with the purpose of honoring outstanding students in all fields of engineering. The Illinois chapter was established in 1914, and since its founding has offered an opportunity for the development of professional contacts and friendships. Sigma Tau on our campus has over one hundred active members.

The active members of this fraternity were selected on the basis of scholarship, leadership, and character. Sigma Tau recognized the personal attainments of engineering students, encouraged fellowship among the students and the faculty in the engineering department, and advanced the interests of engineering.

In order to recognize outstanding undergraduate work and service to the engineering department, the group presented fellowships to outstanding students which may be used for post-graduate study at recognized universities.

Collecting children's books for the children's homes in the area was the major project of Theta Sigma Phi, women's professional journalistic organization. Those women enrolled in journalism, extra-curricular journalistic activities or those planning to make journalism a career are eligible for membership. Joint meetings were sometimes held with Sigma Delta Chi, men's professional fraternity.

Mother's Day Swimming Show Highlights Year for Terrapin Members

Members of Terrapin Swim Club saw their year long efforts climaxed by the presentation of their annual aquatic show on Mother's Day weekend. The theme of this year—"motion"—was well represented in synchronized swimming routines performed by Terrapin members.

In October, the organization sent three girls and an adviser to a swimming conference in Massachusetts. Prior to the trip, the girls received a phonograph record from officials of the conference and were told to prepare a swimming routine to suit the record. Swimming groups on two other campuses received similar instructions. At the conference, the three routines were judged and critically analyzed.

Terrapin members took part in symposiums held at several nearby colleges. Members were often so busy that several times they called upon their apprentice group, Guppies, for assistance in carrying out their projects.

In February, Trident held its annual All-Navy Dance, an event which all members of this naval honorary organization anticipated anxiously. Through its regular meetings, which consisted of movies and speakers on naval tactics and officers' duties, the group felt that it accomplished its purpose by helping cadets of the NROTC program to prepare to become better officers after their graduation.

Zeta Phi Eta

Members of Zeta Phi Eta were in charge of "Poke and Tote," the rummage sale at the International Fair this year. The Illinois campus was the scene of the midwest conclave of Zeta Phi Eta at which the Illinois chapter acted as hostess. Members of this professional speech sorority are chosen from speech, speech correction, and theatre students who have at least an average of 4.0 in speech courses.

ORGANIZATIONS

There is an organization to suit the interest of every student. These varied organizations are a major factor in making our University the great institution that it is today. The campus emphasis upon organizations is second only to the emphasis upon academics. There are good reasons for this emphasis upon participation in organizations.

An organization gives the student training in his chosen field of study that the classroom cannot always give. Through an organization, the student has an opportunity to apply his academic knowledge. For example, almost all of the engineering organizations put their education to practical use by building exhibits for Engineering Open House this year.

In an organization, the student has opportunities to hear men speak on the most recent developments in his field of study—developments not likely to be covered in a textbook. As a result, employers often prefer to hire the college graduate who has had a background in organizations.

The value of participation in an organization does not lie wholly in personal gain. Organizations often perform service projects which benefit the University or worthwhile local organizations. Alpha Phi Omega, for example, works primarily through the local Boy Scout Council. In addition, many organizations help to sponsor university events such as Farm and Home Festival.

Participation in organizations is an integral part of the life of the well-rounded student.

Agricultural Economics Club

An informal student-faculty barbecue began the activity-filled year for the Agricultural Economics Club. Outstanding speakers presented such topics as livestock marketing, farm management, farm credit and job opportunities to round out this year's program. Through these programs and participation in various student activities, interest was promoted in agricultural economics and related fields.

Several panel discussions highlighted the programs presented at meetings of the Agricultural Education Club this year. One panel consisted of members who had recently completed their student teaching period; another panel discussed the highlights of the FAA convention. Throughout the year at various times, this organization held several combined meetings with members of Alpha Tau Alpha.

Agricultural Education Club

Agriculture Cooperative Extension Club

Professional extension workers "extended" speeches to the Cooperative Extension Club, agriculture and home economics students, so members could become acquainted with the organization and the objectives of the Illinois Agriculture and Home Economics Extension Service. As preparation for the extension field, members conducted training sessions throughout the state for 4-H and rural youth groups.

Climaxing the year's program was the annual Plowboy Prom sponsored by the organization. The purpose of the Agriculture Council is to serve as a coordinating and governing body representing students who are enrolled in the College of Agriculture. By coordinating the various professional activities in this college, students were able to gain the maximum value possible from their year on campus.

Alpha Kappa Psi

During the semester, several speakers were engaged by Alpha Kappa Psi to educate and interest its members in the various phases of business. Student-faculty luncheons held bi-weekly were provided to promote better understanding between these two groups. A dance and a hay ride were among the special social activities. Members of the group provided guided tours for businessmen visiting the campus.

Alpha Delta Sigma Wins National Recognition at California Convention

The high point of the Alpha Delta Sigma's year was the national convention held this year at California. At the convention Dale Smith, the president of the chapter, was elected national vice president. Also, at the convention the chapter was voted runner-up for the national chapter proficiency award; and the chapter newsletter, "The ADScribe," was selected the top publication of its class.

The initiation fees of Alpha Delta Sigma pledges were paid not in money this year, but rather in time spent carrying sandwich boards on which advertising space had been sold to local merchants. This year all Illini awaited anxiously the publishing of each issue of Tumor, a humor magazine published by the fraternity as an additional source of income.

Through its projects Alpha Delta Sigma felt that it succeeded in presenting to its members advertising in practice, not in theory alone.

This organization acted as a medium through which students in the recreation curriculum became acquainted with their instructors on an informal basis and were able, through informal discussions, to learn more about the problems and rewards of their chosen field.

American Recreation Society

American Society of Agricultural Engineers

The campus Christmas tree salesmen this year were members of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers; revenue gained from sales was used to buy wood so that the group could build work-benches for agricultural engineering classrooms. In addition, the group published a yearbook, entered the competition for the Farm Equipment Institute awards, and had an exhibit in Engineering Open House.

American Society of Civil Engineers Holds Senior Refresher Course

During the past spring, the American Society of Civil Engineers held a refresher course for its graduating members; through this course, the members prepared themselves for the professional engineering examination which the State of Illinois requires that all engineering graduates take.

In seeking to bring the faculty and the students into closer contact, the organization sponsored faculty-student athletic competitions. At the regular monthly meetings, both students and faculty of the civil engineering department heard professional engineers discuss topics of current concern in the field. Through field trips to nearby industries and construction sites, members saw first-hand what their future profession will involve.

The purpose of this organization is to acquaint future engineers with the problem and the responsibilities they may face in their life's work.

American Society of Mechanical Engineers Publishes Student Papers

Several members of the Illinois chapter of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers attended the regional convention of the organization this year. Prior to the convention, the members wrote technical papers concerning matters which had been discussed in engineering seminars or work done in research. The members of the chapter chose the best two of these papers; these two were then presented in competition for cash awards at the convention.

The national chapter of A.S.M.E. this year presented a scholarship to one of the members of the Illinois organization. Applicants for such a scholarship must meet very high standards of scholarship and character before considered for such an award.

This organization attempted this year to advance knowledge of the theory and practice of mechanical engineering by presenting several technical lectures, one of which concerned casting of metals.

Commerce Council

Commerce students, on the basis of scholastic average, activities and interest, may become members of the Commerce Council. During this year, industries sent representatives and displays to the campus to acquaint the members with the various fields of commerce. The Dairy Production Club sponsored University of Illinois Dairy Judging Teams at the International Collegiate Dairy Judging in Waterloo, Iowa and at the International Dairy Show in Chicago. The club, an affiliate chapter of the American Dairy Science Association, staged a banquet in February at which dairy judging awards were presented and an outstanding freshman and senior were honored.

Dairy Production Club

Dairy Technology Society

On October 5, in competition with twenty-three collegiate teams at Miami, Florida, the University of Illinois Dairy Judging Team was chosen "National Champions." In addition, sponsoring luncheons for dairy technology alumni, encouraging scholarship and fostering good relations between students and faculty promoted an interest in the dairy industry for students in the dairy technology curriculum.

Wheelchair Basketball Team Spotlights Year for Delta Sigma Omicron

Officers: Roberta Edwards, member-at-large; James Seybold, vice president; Thomas Linde, president; Sylvia Bellows, secretary; William Richard, treasurer

This year Delta Sigma Omicron, the disabled students' organization, sponsored a broad range of activities both on and off the campus. These activities included the nationally known Gizz Kids wheelchair basketball team, intramural football, baseball, square dancing and bowling. A high point of the year for members of the organization was the annual Harold Scharper Awards Banquet which was held in October. At this banquet outstanding members of Delta Sigma Omicron were honored for their achievements and for their services to the organization and to the University.

Delta Sigma Omicron's men and women are enrolled in almost every curriculum of the University; its alumni have made notable contributions to all fields of both the professions and the arts. Each member gives vitality to the feeling that it is one's ability that is most important, not one's disability.

As one of the most physically active organizations on the campus, the Illini Young Republicans made numerous contacts with members of the Champaign-Urbana community this year. Before each primary election, members did a great deal of "footwork" in conducting extensive campaigns to get voters out to the polls. Members also conducted polls on campus concerning current political topics.

Activities of the group were not confined wholly to the immediate vicinity of the campus as was evidenced by the number of members who attended the Midwest Convention, Illinois Convention, and National Convention. A few members were privileged to attend the Youth Political Conference in Washington, D. C.

Meetings of the Illini Young Republicans were often in the form of political rallies which featured Republican office-holders or party workers as speakers.

A camp out held at the beginning of the year to welcome all freshmen was one of the unique activities of this organization. Other special events were the Christmas party and senior party. Informal coffee hours were a part of the activities, also. This is a professional club providing laboratory experiences which broaden the understanding of the role each must play in the teaching profession.

Zeta Sigma Alpha

This year Zeta Sigma Alpha prepared armor cadets in the ROTC advanced cadet program to accept responsibilities after becoming Second Lieutenants in the United States Army. Members learned the uses of modern armor warfare and the operation and maintenance of tanks. They also worked in cooperation with the Military Ball Committee and displayed tanks at University functions whenever possible.

New Women's Sports Association Program Offers House Competitions,

As one of the most active organizations on the campus, Women's Sports Association has at least one member in almost every organized women's house. The task of these members this year was twofold. They spent a great amount of time and effort in preparing for the convention of the National Athletic and Recreation Federation of College Women. The University of Illinois chapter will be hostess for this convention which will be held here in the spring of 1961. Virginia Seiler is president-elect of the national organization. Secondly, members evaluated their present program and then enlarged it.

Campus women were invited to participate in the new program which offered organized activities in many women's sports.

Intramurals, Extramurals

The list of extramural sports offered included field hockey, basketball, volleyball, and softball. Basketball, volleyball, bowling, tennis, tumbling, apparatus, gymnastics, trampoline, badminton, ice skating, and golf were the intramural activities provided. This year the Association also organized inter-house competitions in several major sports—basketball, volleyball, bowling and swimming.

This year, the Women's Sports Association sponsored both the Inter-house Marathon Swim and the Inter-house Swimming Meet for the first time. All members of organized women's houses were invited to enter either or both of these events.

The busy schedule of this group included acting as hostess for the Southern Illinois District Field Hockey Sports Day.

In the spring, besides carrying out programs in seasonal sports such as golf and softball, the Association presented the annual WSA Awards and Installation Dessert. The high point of the evening was the presentation of awards to the houses which had previously won the Women's Sports Association inter-house tournaments. Other awards were given to the houses which had participated most regularly in WSA activities and inter-house competitions.

For all extramural, intramural, and inter-house events, the members of the organization chose a chairman and an assistant chairman. These two girls did all of the organization and paper work that was necessary for the presentation of a successful program in their particular sport.

Through its extensive program, Women's Sports Association fulfills its threefold purpose. This purpose, as stated in the constitution of the organization, is "to create, promote, and maintain interest in sports by providing opportunities for participation and instruction in a supervised program of team and individual sports; to provide opportunities for intramural and extramural competitive play; to offer opportunities for the development of student leadership in the administration of such a sports program."

Members of the Illini Marketing Club began the year by holding a smoker at which all students were welcome. The purpose of this meeting was to interest students in membership in the organization.

Programs of succeeding meetings were devoted primarily to activities concerning the marketing profession. The November meeting featured a panel of marketing representatives from Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., Independent Grocers' Association and J. C. Penney Co. An account executive spoke at the December meeting.

The most important event of the year was the field trip to Indianapolis, Indiana. During the trip, members of the group visited the Kroger Co., Eli Lilly Co., Stokely-Van Camp, a department store and the National Hardware Association where they witnessed marketing in action.

RELIGIOUS ORGANIZATIONS

For the student who is away from his home, religious organizations provide something familiar, something that is universal—an emphasis upon how one ought to live in God's world.

Some individuals seem to feel that the student loses the religious heritage he has previously acquired when he comes to college; however, our campus religious organizations feel that the opposite is true. On the average, the college student thinks more about religious and spiritual matters than any younger person; he begins to think more deeply into such matters than ever before.

The concern of the college student for religious matters is demonstrated by the number of active participants in the programs of the campus religious organizations. Many students each semester enroll in credit courses offered by the various foundations. However, the concern of the religious organizations is not purely academic; weekly supperclubs combine the social aspects with the academic aspects of religion. Foundations provide activities that on the surface may seem purely social. However, activities such as square dances are almost as much a part of spiritual education as Sabbath Day services; they teach the student to apply his religious teachings.

Religious organizations fulfill well their purpose by supplying to the college student what college itself may overlook—spiritual education.

Baptist Student Union

This branch of the Southern Baptist Church is established to give its members a better understanding of their church. Programs presented by the group this year included seminars, discussion groups, and worship services. Christmas was celebrated at a party held for the children of members. Periodically, throughout the year, members sponsored work camps and ministries to county nursing homes.

The Baptist Student Foundation, represented in this picture by the Student Council, seeks to fulfill the spiritual needs of the faculty, the staff, and the students in their church home on campus. Through fellowship in worship, study, evangelism and missionary outreach, it nurtures a Christian faith relevant to each individual, to our university community and finally to the nation.

Christian Science Organization

Through weekly meetings this year, members of this group learned to practice the principles taught in Christian Science. Main events of the year were the autumn and spring receptions and two lectures in which the speakers were members of the Board of Lectureship. On football weekends, the group was host at social events at which visiting Christian Science students were entertained.

A trip to the national conference at Association Camp, Colorado, was the highlight of the year for members of the organization. On the way back from the conference, the bus on which the members were riding broke down, and the students were forced to spend the night on the floor of a church parlor in Kansas. Other activities included a supper club on Sunday evenings and seminars on world religions.

Disciples Student Fellowship

Seabury Foundation

Members of Seabury Foundation were hosts this year at the annual spring conference of similar foundations throughout the state. They also assisted with another conference held at Camp Howard. The group sponsored two retreats held second semester. By sending delegates to campus councils such as the Fair Play Council, this group sought to concern itself with students of all faiths.

Members of Hillel Foundation participated actively in the religious and cultural events of the Jewish year. On Purim, they held a carnival to celebrate Queen Esther's triumph over Haman. The group participated in High Holy Day services and, for the Feast of Tabernacles, built a sukkoth. Also, the members received instruction in the intricacies of the arts of Jewish folk singing and dancing.

Lutheran Student Association

Members of the Lutheran Student Association contributed to the campus activities this year by holding coffee hours several days each week and each day during final examination week. This year members were pleased to see that rooms of the Lutheran Student Center were gradually being furnished. Wednesday morning communion services and vesper services provided spiritual guidance for members.

Gamma Delta provided Sunday evening fellowship meetings and mid-week vespers for the students of the Lutheran Church. The service project for the year was reading assignments to blind students. A unique activity of Gamma Delta this year was painting the University Lutheran Chapel basement. The student center provided good library and recreational facilities for all of its members to enjoy.

McKinley Foundation Student Council

This year the McKinley Foundation Student Council, the legislative body of McKinley Presbyterian Church, provided a place for students to gather for fellowship and a better understanding of the Christian faith. Weekly Sunday evening supper clubs, study groups, University credit courses in religious subjects, and church and community service groups were supervised by the members of the council.

Top Row: Rev. Edward Duncan, Richard Duesterhaus, treasurer; Adrian Crook, president; Arthur Daniels, recording secretary Bottom Row: Elizabeth Lawler, Mary McGuire

The Christmas party at Newman Club was a "never-to-be-forgotten" event. There was music for dancing most of the evening, except when Santa Claus arrived. The jolly gentleman came bringing gifts for the chapel priests. Later everyone gathered around Father Duncan at the piano to sing carols.

Newman Club sponsored other social events throughout the year; these included hay rides, wiener roasts, fish fries and ice skating parties. The organization served donuts and coffee each Sunday after mass and during the fall after each football game.

Located on secular campuses, the chapters of this Catholic organization help to mold the religious life of its members. Members were invited to attend lectures on religious themes; members also published "The Cardinal," a monthly newsletter, which is sent to Catholic students living on the campus.

The University Lutheran Chapel is sponsored by the Lutheran Church of the Missouri Synod. It provides worship, fellowship and counselling for the Lutheran students of the Synodical Conference. It also serves as a training parish for lay activity. This year both spiritual and recreational activities were provided for the students through weekly meetings, worship services and social gatherings.

The highlight of the year at Wesley Foundation was the traditional "Ye Olde English Christmas Banquet" which was complete with Yorkshire pudding. The foundation serves as the Methodist church on campus and as a training ground in churchmanship. This year the foundation presented several programs pertinent to current student interest in areas of social and moral problems, politics, and religion.

Armed Forces Council Coordinates Military Branches, Plans Military Ball

William Lewis, chairman

The purpose of the Council is to coordinate the activities and training programs of the three ROTC units. Members of the Council include the Army commander and his executive officer, the Air Force commander and his executive officer, and the Navy commander and his executive officer. In addition, to the student officers, a commissioned officer is chosen as adviser. The adviser is an officer provided by the ROTC unit in charge for the current year.

Some of the activities sponsored by the Council included a military ball and several military functions. Also included in the program for this ROTC unit were parades and reviews for Honors Day and Veterans' Day.

Other important functions of the Council included maintaining the high standards of the ROTC training program and, secondly, keeping the ROTC program up-to-date and efficient. Since many of the officers needed for the Armed Forces are drawn from ROTC units, the Council served a vital function by providing qualified, competent officers to serve as leaders in our military forces.

Capable Cadet Officers Direct Active and Thorough Army ROTC Program

The Army Reserve Officers Training Corps on this campus is divided into seven branches: Signal Corps, Infantry Corps, Quartermaster Corps, Ordnance Corps, Artillery Corps, Armor Corps, and Corps of Engineers. Senior cadets from each of the seven groups make up Army Council which is the governing body of the Army. This board is in charge of all Army ROTC affairs on the campus. Among the 2700 men in the Army ROTC, 375 are in the advanced corps. The different corps sponsor two military parades in the fall and three in the spring. One of the spring parades was the honors day event in which men outstanding in the Army were awarded for their service. Socially, the Army ROTC Corps helped sponsor the annual Military Ball with the other armed forces groups.

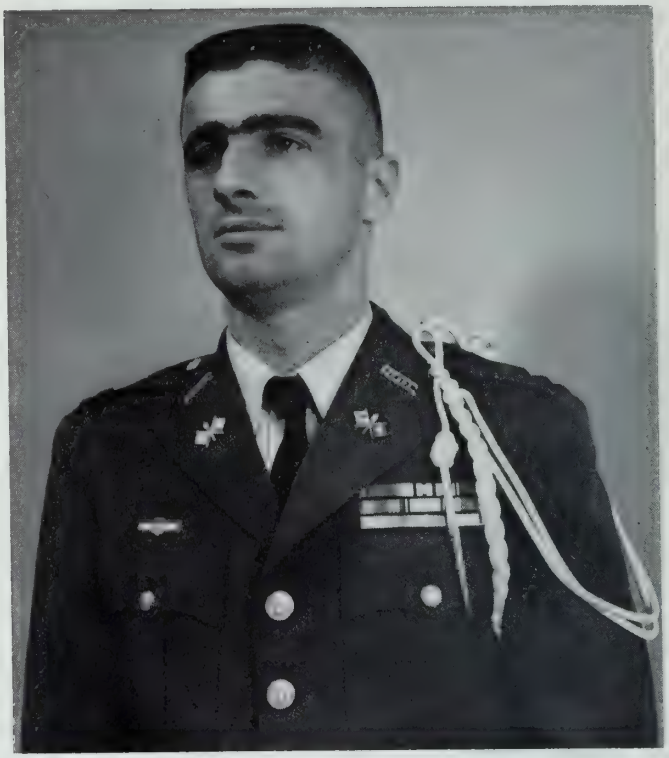

The coed sponsor of Army attended all functions and acted as hostess at the meetings. This year, Sally Trinkle was chosen sponsor for this branch of ROTC. She also was hostess at their weekly coffee hours, which were held each Friday at the Illini Union.

Air Force ROTC Expands Program From Wing to Division Level Plan

The expanded enrollment in the Air Force ROTC made feasible their expansion from Wing to Division level organization. The emphasis upon a flying program for advanced corps cadets was carried further under the direction of Division Commander Edward Gieszelmann and his able staff of cadet officers.

The first two years of the four year Air Force ROTC program for prospective Air Force officers are devoted to the basic studies which survey the role of air power in the national defense program. Advanced training in theory, leadership and related air skills begins with the junior year.

Under the overhauled training program, chances for officer development are offered earlier than under the old program in order to enable the AFROTC to turn out Second Lieutenants who possess abilities in the areas of confidence, poise, military bearing, military courtesy, voice and commands and who are ready to take their places in our national defense program.

Drill Team Is Product of Program Directed by Naval ROTC Officers

All of the personnel of the Naval Reserve Officer Training Corps, headed by Cadet Commander William Lewis, participated in a broad and interesting program for this year. The men in the Corps were provided a chance to participate in various activities connected with the program, as well as receive the training which is needed for the men to become able and competent officers in the United States Navy and the United States Marine Corps. After graduation, the men received commissions and were given immediate assignments to active duty.

Cadets were given an opportunity to become members of the two drill teams sponsored by the Naval ROTC. These drill teams competed with drill teams from other universities in a series of meets held throughout the year. Another activity sponsored by the Navy program was a rifle team, which competed with units from other schools.

The cadets fielded a basketball team which competed in the intramural program. At the end of the season, the team played in the annual cadet basketball tournament. The cadets also sponsored a Naval Dance, and co-sponsored the Military Ball.

And Now It's All Over

except for the traditional message from the editor at the end. Today, the ILLIO will be finished at last. For a gigantic task, well completed, I owe a "thank you" bigger than I can put into words here to many people who have encouraged and advised me, or just plain worked very hard on the 1960 ILLIO.

First of all to my Associate Editors. For Copy Editor, Vicki Feit, who with little aid from one dictionary that never had enough words, I am very grateful for making the copy as gramatically and factually perfect as was possible. Photo Editor, Al Herman, was a great comfort and wonderful with cropping, checking, and Accounting 201. Kathy Manning took personnel, and did a little of everything.

The Assistant Editors were the backbone of it all. To my Journ. School classmate, Bob Ashbrook, and his partner, Margie Allen, we owe the University section. Bob Telleen and Sally Williamson (who scorns TGIF) put out an interesting Activities Section. In the Seniors, it was Susie Vaughn and Carole Luehring, giving up part of Christmas vacation to get it in. Cliff Higgerson and Edwina Garner, despite threats to take off for Outer Mongolia, came in with an unusually good Organization Section. Mary Geissman and Frank Wydra (three-legged ash tray collector!) made fine Sports Editors. And Judie Neal and Bunny LaBarre always seemed to find a lost Residence picture or create readable copy from a minimum of information from the houses. My thanks go to all of you. "Where are the good looking junior editors?" Struggling with the ILLIO of 1960 of course!

Mr. George Grubb, Jr. always came through with the proof, and how we needed it! Mr. Glenn Gill, of the Illinois Printing Company kept us working and really cooperated to get this out on time. And not the least of my non-student helpers was Paul McMichael, forever willing to say things to people that I never had the nerve to say. Also a belated thanks to Mr. Glenn Hanson and Journ. 204 for teaching me a little about copy-fitting and type selection. A fine art display is the product of cheerful Jack Bledsoe and Toshi Utagawa advised by Professor J. William Kennedy. For the good photography I owe a debt of thanks (and an apology for the temper displays) to Don Huizinga who really came through with football pictures — though a lot had the other team carrying the ball. And last, I always appreciated Business Manager John Clem whose constant preface to a statement was: "You know, I think we'll make it." And last, to the instructor who let us put off handing in an assignment so we could work on the last deadline — thanks, Professor Jack Maguire.

We all spent an entire year planning, plotting, hoping, dreaming and slaving for a book telling the campus about tradition and the year 1959-60. Now we can go back to being students. So long, ILLIO.
